THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Its Practicability Discussed—A Reply to Mr. Laidlaw's Objection.

The following letter of Mr. T. D. Belcher, Engineer of the Trent Works, appears in the Fenelon Falls Gazette. It will be seen that the practicability of the enterprise is at all events fully established. Mr. Smith, of Fenelon Falls, a wealthy Reformer, hearing that Mr. Hector Cameron was about to receive a judgeship, wrote Mr. George Laidlaw, of Toronto, proffering him his support for the House of Commons if he would make the construction of the Trent-Huron Navigation his first and last plank. Mr. Laidlaw replied that he "considers the scheme financially impracticable." It was with much pleasure that the friends of the T. H. N. scheme read the contents of Mr Smith's letter. His sentiments are those of a very large portion of the electorate throughout the entire district from Trenton to Midland. Mr. Belcher says:

"Mr. Laidlaw, or any other man, may consider anything he pleases, but his consideration must be taken for what it is worth in comparison with actual facts. Mr. Laidlaw, with a careless scratch of his pen, "lays down the law," and endeavors to obliterate and brand as false the result of years of hard labor and study of the most eminent canal (not railway) engineers—not alone of this country, but England and the United States—have arrived at. In the year 1836, Mr. A. H. Baird, Member of the Institute of Civil Engineers, London, England, made a location survey with detailed estimates, and report on the Trent Valley Canal (which is now about to be built) by command of His Excellency, Sir John Colborne, the then Governor-General of Canada, and the total amount of his estimate for opening out the navigation with 5 feet water on mitre sills of locks, between the St. Lawrence and Lake Huron via the waters of the river Trent and Newcastle District, &c., was £615,515. In accordance with this report and estimate in minute detail (which we have examined,) the work was undertaken and partially completed, but owing to the Rebellion the appropriation that was set aside by Parliament for the COMPLETION of the work was applied for the purpose of quelling the disturbance, and since then the appropriation has not been re-voted.

Again in the year 1863, Mr. Kivas Tully, C. E., reported to a committee of the House that water communication from the Bay of Quinte to Georgian Bay, with seven (7) feet water on the mitre sills, of the locks could be built for $5,839,000.

Again in the year 1846, Mr. S. C. Keefer, C. E., reported that barge navigation could be had from the Bay of Quinte to Peterboro' (which is by far the most expensive half of the entire route from the Bay of Quinte to Lake Huron) for £399,303. Mr. Lyons, C. E., also reported that this half could, by following a different route, be built for £205,304.

And lastly, Mr. D Stark, C. E., assisted by Mr. Belcher, Sup. of T. works, estimated, after a careful examination, that a water communication between Lake Huron and the St. Lawrence through the Midland Counties of Ontario via the inland lakes and Trent Valley, for barges capable of carrying 15,000 bushels grain, can be made for $3,000,000.

Now, then, in the face of these carefully compiled estimates, made by the first engineers of the country, Mr. Laidlaw—led astray no doubt by his considerations for railway bonuses, &c.—states the scheme to be "financially impracticable." We have not the least doubt he would wish it were so, as railway men in thes country do not like canals—with one exception, and that is the spirited and enterprising President of the Midland Railway, who is far-seeing enough to prophesy that that railway will increase its trafic 100 per cent. by the construction of the Trent Valley Canal. Just the same as the N. Y. Central has from the Erie Canal, one helping the other, and just the same as railways deriv advantages from canals in England, Germany and France; and the only support the Welland Railway gets to-day is from the Welland Canal.

Now as regards the question—will the Canal when built pay? That is an important question, and one that the people of the country should fully understand, especially the farmers and those engaged in forwarding grain to Montreal, &c. 1st. We must admit that railways do not nor never can pay unless they have enough to handle; this they have not at present in this country. The local freights, which are the paying freights, are not enough; the promoters of a railway scheme who drag the bonuses out of the several counties, townships, cities, villages and local governments, and invariable plunge them into debt, we grant are the only individuals who make railways a profitable business as far as themselves are concerned. As an instance out of very many, we would ask upon whom has the Credit Valley or the Victoria Railway bestowed a lasting benefit? This will not be the case with the Trent Valley Canal, as we can prove. Assume the canal to cost at the outside figure $3,000,000; the interest on this at 4 per cent., the present rate at which the Government can borrow money, will be $120,000 per year; add to this $30,00 per year for maintenance and we have $150,00, the total amount to be provided each year. Now the Erie Canal—which is a ditch compared with the Trent Canal inasmuch as it is a canal dug for the entire length—352 miles—and the barges navigating it cannot carry more than about 8,000 bushels wheat, and have to be towed by horses that entire distance; whereas we have only about fifty miles of canal, the remainder being fine open deep water—on which powerful tugs can be employed taking 12 or 15 barges at a "tow," each barge being of a carrying capacity of 15,000 bushels wheat, as before stated—now, this Erie Canal handled last year 83,000,000 bushels of grain (being as much as the entire railway system from Chicago to New York, Boston and Philadelphia put together handled), but on the Trent Valley Canal route we can pass from the Georgian Bay to the St. Lawrence, or, more correctly speaking, the lockage capacity of the Trent Valley route will be 1,800,000 bushels grain per day of 12 hours, allowing the other 12 for western bound lockages; and as the distance between Chicago and Montreal is by this route 419 miles shorter than that by Buffalo and New York via the Erie Canal—which as stated consists of 352 miles of canal alone, against about 50 miles by the Trent Valley—is there any doubt whatever that the Trent route would get in a few years after it had been established as much as the Erie Canal? Therefore, assuming that we get 50,000,000 of this enormously increasing western trade to start with, and that a toll of 1c. be charged per bushel of wheat (the toll on the Erie Canal is 1½c. per bushel), we get a revenue of $250,000 per year, and this, bear in mind, is exclusive of western bound freight, which will consist of lumber, minerals, coal, &c., so that we think that to any unprejudiced mind the answer to the question—"Will it pay when constructed?"—will prove satisfactory.

Lastly, Mr. Laidlaw asks how can ships be brought from Lake Balsam to Lake Simcoe? In reply we would refer him to Mr. Baird's report on the subject, where he will get the required information how barges (which have been proved the cheapest possible mode of moving grain) and not Atlantic steamers, as his question would imply, can get form Lake Balsam to Lake Simcoe, and the very point at which the Victoria Railway will have to construct a swing-bridge before two years have passed.

We would further say, that in the year 1870 a Commission was appointed by the Government to enquire into the Canal system and Water ways of the Province, with a view of reporting on the best method by which the western trade could be secured to Montreal. Mr. Laidlaw was one of that commission. What did he do? He brought in a minority report, condemning canals and water ways in toto, stating that railways were the only means by which the Western trade could be secured. The country has enough railway men and what have they done? To a great extent, they have sunk the Province in debt. Look at the policy pursued by our neighbors across the line, towards their water ways. Learn of the millions of dollars Congress is granting for the improvement of rivers and construction of canals. Look also at the liberal policy the Government of France is extending towards the construction of canals and improvment of rivers—having granted this year 100,000,000 francs for that purpose—nearly $20,000,000.

These facts and figures are given in the hope of convincing all such men as Mr. Laidlaw, who consider the Trent Valley Canal "financially impracticable," that it is not so. If it were necessary to get a company to build it, we are assured there are several of the wealthiest capitalists, both in Canada and the United States who would undertake to get the necessary amount of stock subscribed in 3 months Hence our present Government is only considering the necessities of the country in ordering a Location Survey to be made this Fall, and the Surveyors in charge may expect no little amount of grumbling if this is not accomplished.

THE WORLD'S VERY GREATEST SHOW.

(From the San Francisco Daily Call.)

W. W. Cole's Stupendous Exhibition.—All the week long, young and old have enjoyed the varied entertainment at the vast circus, corner of Mission and Seventh streets. The performers seem to have grown stronger and more alert by their recent ocean voyage to and from Australia. They spring with greater lightness than before, and hold their place on the horse's back with greater firmness, and, at the same time, sway to the quadruped's motion with assured gracefulness. Linda Jeal is the "belle of the arena." With her jaunting hat and feather; through paper balloons and fiery circles she flies without missing a tip. She has muscles like steel, while she is as pliant as a hazel rod. The equestrianism, generally, is of a high order, and in addition to this there are wonderful exhibitions of horses training. The stallions controlled by Mr. Wm. Organ, their tutor, are things of beauty—of a sort of fearful, fascinating beauty. One looks at those magnificent animals obeying the slightest nod and word of their master, and cannot help thinking what a power for mischief human intelligences thus holds so perfectly under command. Sultan, retreasing from the ring, erect on his hind legs, would be a study for Clark Mills. Then there are the clowns that make the welkin roar by their funny tricks and jokes; and the tumblers clean-limbed and agile, who fly through the air with such ease that rheumatic Croesus in the dress circle looks on with envy, and would give half his wealth had he such thews and sinews. It is a splended exhibition all through. Not the least interesting feature is the presence of the orphan children on afternoons. They are enabled to enjoy the show by Mr. Cole's generosity in giving matinee benefits to each charitable association in the city. The fresh interest the little ones take in the sights of the arena is pleasurable to see. It is the opening of a new world to them, and the man, blase with years and experience, lives over again his first young and innocent delight. This world famous and mammoth enterprise will give performances in Peterborough early in September. And the above remarks coupled with the fact that this if beyond all doubt the grandest combination on the face of the earth will suffice to fill its vast tents.

I have been frequently under medical treatment, and have tried various preparations which have been recommended to me, but received no permanent relief. WEST PETERBOROUGH.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I take the liberty of asking you to give some views I entertain respecting the doings among our fellows, a place in your paper. My politics may be different from yours, but trusting to your good nature, I venture to send this letter.

I have been a long time among the men of this riding that claim to have the good of Canada at heart, and we have laid claim to be known as the party of purity. Respecting this claim, I won't offend you by entering into any discussion. It passes my understanding, why a few of our fellows, who are chickens lately hatched from bantam eggs, should take it on themselves to give this riding to J. F. Dennistoun, H. H. Smith, R. A. Morrow or Thomas Cahill. All this has been done to the exclusion of the many old and respectable Conservatives, who are well entitled to the consideration of the Conservative party. I think that Wm. Clurton, Henry Denne, Wm. Mills, R. A. Strickland, Mr. Willan, T. Cavanagh, T. Croly and a number of others among the Conservative ranks, are good and true men (not of mushroom growth). Among them all perhaps for true Conservative principles and unwavering devotion to our party, none can claim a higher place than the last named gentleman—Mr. Thos. Croly—and if he had been chosen as the nominee of our Convention on Tuesday night, he would have carried a large vote in the riding.

Another thing I don't approve of is an editor running our paper, the Review, into the ground, and making it so unpopular that many of us are strongly tempted to go over to the Reform party to get better company—who one moment writes himself a blazing advocate of free trade, and denounces as a fraud "protection" to the farmer, and the next comes out and says he is a Protectionist from the highest latitude of his ears, to the bottom of his hoof, and that Protection is the best thing the farmers ever had, and who dares to dictate to ME and others like ME, who we should choose for our representative. When that gentleman, whose grey hairs are by no means a crown of glory, and his factotums attempt to run the Conservative party, they had better consult some of the sounder heads.

If you will give this place, you will oblige more than one

CONSISTENT CONSERVATIVE.

[Having inserted this letter to accommodate our correspondent, for whom we have the greatest respect, we rise to remark, that "with this the correspondence must stop. Such letters, no matter how bona fide, are never looked upon as such by the public, owing to the strong feeling that a good Reformer will not carry his grievances to the Review, or a good Conservative his to the EXAMINER."—ED.]

OUR NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL

The Western Morning News (England) says: "It is said that a place has been sound for Sir Henry Layard, and that though he refused to go as an ambassador to Washington, he will not object to go to Canada, with £10,000 a year when Lord Lorne comes home to his Princess and dukedom. Sir Henry Layard has, it must be said, shown no capacity for government, and arbitrary mind would seem to be out of place in the Dominion of Canada, which is so easily excited with an attempt on the part of the Governor-General to interfere with its proper freedom. But if he will have a place, and in Canada he has a colony in which at prefent there is no shadow of difficulty, so that unless he creates a dispute for himself he should be able to get through his term comfortably.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 28, 1881.

A Foul Aspersion.

It would seem that there is no degradation which the Review can achieve, but it is able on occasion to find still a lower depth. Of all the infamous things of which Mr. Carnegie has been guilty of uttering in his paper, the following is perhaps the worst:—"Had the Reform "party allowed Mr. Scott to have been "returned by acclamation at the last "election, instead of putting him to the "expense and annoyance of what they "knew to be a hopeless contest, and NOT "HAVE ADDED AT LEAST ANOTHER STRAW "TO THE CAUSES WHICH LED TO HIS "DEATH, they might with some propriety "talk about the 'course' they have "taken as a foregone conclusion being a "commendable one.'" We repudiate the base accusation that Mr. Scott was hounded to his grave by any action of the Liberal party with all the warmth and indignation with which he himself would resent so vile an imputation were he able to speak for himself. We claim no special credit for the course pursued by the Liberal party towards Mr. Scott, but we assert, and it was freely acknowledged by the late Mr. Scott, that he was treated by his opponents, during the period of his declining health, with unparalelled generosity, both in the Legislature and in the county. The unmanly and dastardly accusation of the Review is of a piece with the conduct and reputation of its author, and he and it will be treated by the intelligent people of this county, in such a course, with the contempt which they deserve. In all the differences which prevailed between the Liberal party and the EXAMINER, and the late Mr. Scott, we defy the ghoulish slanderer of the Review to point to a single act or utterance which was not manly, straightforward and considerate. Those who were intimate with Mr. Scott in his life know very well the opinion which he entertained of the man who now comes forward to make the dastardly reflection which we quote above. If he has a single spark of honor or manhood left in his breast—and we are reluctant to believe that he has not—we call upon him to withdraw and apologize for his cowardly and infamous accusation.

"Speak Now."

For a year past we have from time to time called vainly upon the Review to give the people of the county the benefit of its opinion upon the conspiracy, to which its party leaders at Ottawa were privy, entered into by the Quebec representatives to deprive this fair Province of Ontario of the territory awarded to it by an impartial arbitration—a territory so large and so valuable that it is of the very utmost importance to the people of the Province that its vast forests and inexhaustible mineral wealth should be laid under tribute to the expenses of our government. Will the Review "speak now?" It is essential that at this juncture the man sent to Toronto to speak in the Legislature the sentiments of the people of West Peterborough should be willing and prepared to do all in his power to strengthen the hand of Mr. Mowat in his struggle against the injustice which the Quebec members of the House of Commons, with the guilty connivance of the Tory leaders, are endeavoring to force up on us. It is well to know that almost the only source of revenue which the Province has is from its Crown lands and forest domain. When that is exhausted there is no way of escape from the burden of direct taxation, and though, thanks to the prudence and the economy of the Government of Mr. Mowat, that contingency is remotely removed, yet we have to act with an eye to the future, and would be altogether wanting in our duty, in justice to ourselves and to the Province, if we were to stand idly and see the vast tract of territory, rich in forest and mineral wealth, which has been by a solemn arbitration awarded to us as our heritage, filched from us by dishonest and knavish intrigue. We would like again to ask the Review to give the public the benefit of its opinion on this subject—whether it is sufficient to allow the Province to be despoiled by its political allies at Ottawa; or possesses the patriotism and independence to "speak now," boldly and manfully, in defence of the Provincial interests—whether it is capable of rising from partizanship to patriotism; or, sunk in degradation, is willing to join hands in the profane grasp of the Lower Canadians upon our sacred and inalienable rights.

The Trent Valley Canal.

We give space elsewhere to a copy of a letter addressed by the Engineer of the Trent Works to Mr. J. D. Smith, of Fenelon Falls, and published in the Gazette, of that village. The letter demonstrates, in a most convincing fashion, the entire practibility of the Trent Valley scheme, and that it is practicable at a very moderate cost, as established by the consensus of opinion of all the professional men who have had to do with it, since the time of Mr. Baird. We have never doubted the feasibility of the project of establishing a water highway direct between Bay Quinte and Georgian Bay, its importance to the district, to the whole country and to the trade and commerce of the whole Dominion, or the desirability of incurring the comparatively small expenditure necessary to its accomplishment. But we have doubted, and we still doubt, the bona fides of Sir Charles Tupper in his relation to the scheme. We have stated, and state again, our belief that the enterprise has been taken up by the Minister of Railways to be skillfully dangled before the noses of the people of the Midland District, that they might by "great expectations" be led to support the Government of the day in the approaching general elections. Hence the dilatory character of the course so far taken by the Minister in dealing with the subject. There is reason to fear that a Ministry dependent almost entirely upon, and abjectly subservient to, the dominant influence in Quebec, will be unable to secure the necessary vote for a public work of so great benefit to Ontario—albeit, we believe, if the subject were viewed in its true light, the commercial interests of Quebec and Montreal would be materially promoted by the construction of this work. It is possible, however, if the supporters of the Ministry have sufficient firmness and independence, that that which has been commenced in the spirit of political intrigue, may be compelled to completion by an united public opinion in the district more nearly interested. In view of the approaching elections, the extremity of the Ministry may be the opportunity of the people along the line of the Trent-Huron navigation, and that opportunity, if it arise, should be seized regardless of party exigency. It is quite certain that a change of Ministry, bringing into power a set of men who would change the policy of hostility to Ontario interests, pursued by the present Ministry, to one of friendly consideration, would give the best assurance we could have of the early completion of this important enterprise.

Manufacturing Enterprise.

We call the attention of our readers to the following extract from last week's Lindsay Post. We are of the opinion that prompt, liberal, and considerate action might, with very fair chances of success, be made the means of inducing the gentlemen interested in this important enterprise to look favorably upon the advantages which the town of Peterborough offers for the convenient and profitable carrying on of such an enterprise. With our unrivalled water privileges, and superior location as a convenient point of distribution, north, west, east and south, both by rail and water, we ought certainly to be able to appeal strongly to the interest of such a business. The people of the town should awaken to the necessity of developing an enterprising and liberal public spirit, if the town is to attain in any measure the future importance which we fervently hope for it. The Post says:

"A meeting of a number of gentlemen interested in the new lumbering and manufacturing company, to be formed with headquarters at Lindsay, was held at the Benson House on Monday, and satisfactory progress made in the project. Among those present were Hon. T. N. Gibbs, Oshawa; R. C. Smith, Port Hope; A. P. Poussette, D. Ullyott, Peterborough; J. D. Smith, Fenelon Falls, and J. A. Barron and Needler & Sadler, Lindsay. The capital stock is to be $750,000, in shares of $100 each; and nearly one-half of this amount has been taken and paid already. From the notice in the Ontario Gazette we gather that the Company is to be called "The Midland and North Shore Lumbering and General Manufacturing Co., (Limited); and that the objects for which incorporation is sought are the acquisition of pine timber limits and lands in the Province of Ontario by purchase or otherwise; the conducting of the business of lumberers and timber merchants, including the purchase, preparation, manufacture, transport and sale of timber, lumber, shingles, lath and pickets, broom handles, matches, pulp, doors, sashes and blinds, pails, tubs and wooden ware, furniture, agricultural implements, mouldings, boxes, railroad and other cars, ties, cordwood, fence rails and posts, telegraph poles, staves and barrels, axe handles, waggons carts and lumber dryers; the building of vessels, ships and boats, docks and piers; the planing and dressing of lumber and the erection and purchase of mill privileges, water powers, mills, saw mills, buildings, machinery, coves, booms, booming grounds, ultasils, horses, cattle, boats, vessels and many other things. The operations of the Company are to be carried on within the Province of Ontario, and the town of Lindsay is to be the chief place of business. The applicants and directors are Messrs. Dalton Ulyott, G. A. Cox, A. P. Poussette, Hon. T. N. Gibbs, Jas. H. Beatty, of Thorold, R. C. Smith, Malcom McDougall, of Parry Harbour, and J. A. Barron, of Lindsay. It will be seen that car-building is one of the lines of industry to which the Company proposes to have power to give its attention, and that being the case it may be well that the superior advantages of Lindsay for such industry should be brought before them. The Committee on Manufactures might take some action in the premises."

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

Messrs R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen.—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald. Agents,—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting as an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

THE MISSING LINK.

Proposal to Open the Road to Omemee.

Explanations by the President of the Midland—$60,000 asked as a Rebate of the Debt to the Town—Discussion at Friday's Meeting.

A special meeting of the Council was held in Council Chamber on Friday evening for the purpose of hearing explanations by Mr. Geo. A. Cox as to the proposition of the Midland Railway proprietors in regard to the construction of the first line to Omemee. Mayor Smith presided, and there were present Councillors Cahill, McNaughton, Chamberlain, Paterson, Kelly, Douglas Menzies and Richardson. Among others present were Messrs. Wm. Hamilton, Dr. Kincaid, J. H. Stratton, W. A. Morrow, E. C. Hill, J. Innes, A. Cox and others.

The Mayor said the meeting had been called at the request of Mr. Cox to consider a proposition for the extension of the line of railway from Peterborough to Omemee. He asked the Clerk to read Mr. Cox's note.

By suggestion of the Mayor the reading of the minutes was dispensed with, and Mr. Cox was invited to address the Council.

Mr. Cox said he had applied for a special meeting of the Council because he was desirous of having an informal talk on the subject of the construction of the Omemee branch, and he desired to get the opinion of the Council and the citizens on the matter. He had no special proposition to submit, but he would say that the proprietors of the Midland Railway were now inclined to build the line from Omemee to Peterborough in order to straighten the line to Belleville, and they proposed to go on with it at once, if they got anything like encouragement from the town of Peterborough. They had also hopes that they would get a small amount of assistance from the Government, to the extent of perhaps $2,000 or $3,000 a mile. The figure which the proprietors would be satisfied to take would be $40,000 for the building of the line, or rather they would ask a rebate of this sum out of the amount due to the town by the railway. There was a debt due the town amounting to the sum of $65,000, and they desired also here to assign this claim to any person the Company might name, upon the payment to the town of $25,000 in cash and the completion of the road to Omemee. This would open up a complete line, extended for a long distance through a fine country to the west and north-west of us. On other occasions the ratepayers had been anxious to secure a connection with the country north, and had been willing to vote large sums for that purpose. The construction of this line would bring them into immediate communication with one hundred miles of good country, it would make connection beyond that with a valuable lumber district, and also with the fine harbor of Midland Bay. He simply desired an expression of opinion from the town, either for or against the proposition, for the guidance of the Company in dealing with the subject. The estimate carefully made by skillful engineers of the amount required for the construction of this line was $226,000.

Mr. Richardson—Do you intend still running from Lindsay to Port Hope after this line is built?

Mr. Cox—The line would still be kept open just as now, but the main line would be from Belleville to Midland. This would be, as he should hope to see it, the main point on the road, and though perhaps it would not do to say so in Port Hope, the line from here to Port Hope would be a branch of the main line. Trains would run from Midland to Belleville, whether it might please Port Hope or not. It was the intention to cross the river about the locks bridge, and a bridge would have to be built there. The survey showed that the line would run off Hunter street near Brock, following the level of the creek. It was a difficult and expensive line to build, but the survey had given better grades than obtained on any portion of the line already built.

Mr. Cahill said there was no doubt some people had for some time been thinking this matter over and had been expecting Mr. Cox to come down with a proposition to build the line from Peterborough to Omemee, and it had been expected that the town would be asked for some aid, but he thought very few people were prepared to expect a demand for so large a sum as $40,000 for the construction of so short a piece of line. Some people entertained doubt as to whether the town would reap any advantage from the line if it was built. He thought the feeling was in favor of giving assistance, but he could not say to what extent. He himself thought it would be to some advantage to the town to have this line built, but at the same time he did not think it would be of that benefit to warrant the granting of $40,000. Another matter had been spoken of—the possible removal of the workshops from Port Hope to Peterborough. That in his opinion would be of more importance to the town than the building of the railway to Omemee. He thought Peterborough, as a centre between Lakefield, Lindsay, Port Hope and Belleville, would be the most advantageous point to work the road from, and he thought the Company would see that it would see that it would be to their advantage to have the workshops and the head offices here. Then there was a probability that in a short time we should have the road from Toronto to Ottawa through here, which made the argument in favor of Peterborough still stronger. If the Company were prepared to couple with their proposition the construction of buildings for workshops and maintaining the same here, he thought then the people would be willing to contribute liberally. He thought they would give something for the road, and that they ought to do so, but not a large amount; but if they secured the workshops the people would give liberally. He thought the matter should be referred to a committee.

The Mayor—Could Mr. Cox give us any idea of the number of men who are employed in the workshops?

Mr. Cox said he was not authorized to say that the workshops could be removed here. If the workshops were here it would necessarily be the headquarters for the trainmen, and taking them altogether he thought there would be about 150 men. There were 220 men on the Company's pay roll. The trainmen and shopmen, if the shops were here, would number about 150. If he were to speak as a citizen simply he would say that there was nothing he would desire more than to see the shops located here. They were of considerable importance now, and were getting more so. As the line extended the business would be increased, and the number of men employed on the trains and in the shops would also increase. He had spoken of the employees of the Midland simply; his calculation did not take in the Grand Junction. The Port Hope people thought they had contributed very largely to the road, and they had through the Municipal Loan Fund given $150,000. Some of them thought the whole road ought to belong to them. He was not prepared to discuss the proposal to remove the workshops, and if the building of the line to Omemee was not of sufficient importance to their interests to warrant them giving a bonus, and they wanted to attach other conditions connected with the work-shops, it would be for the proprietors of the road to consider them.

Mr. Richardson said there were precedents for Presidents being shot at these times, and the President of the Midland would want to be careful.

Mr. Paterson—It won't be very safe for him to go to Port Hope if he removes the car-shops up here.

Mr. Richardson said he did not think Mr. Cox would ask $40,000 or $50,000 from the town without giving something to the town in return. He was satisfied it was Mr. Cox's wishes and his object to get the car-shops removed here. As it was now we had to send lumber to Port Hope for them. There were better privileges and advantages here for the works, and by the smile on Mr. Cox's face he thought he wanted to have them here. He didn't see what advantage it would be to have the cars running past Peterborough.

Mr. John Whyte preferred not to express any opinion at present.

Mr. J. H. Stratton said he had simply come as a citizen to hear what proposition was to be laid before them for consideration. There was no doubt that since Mr. Cox obtained control of the Midland Railway he had done a very great deal to advance the interests of Peterborough. The removal of the head offices and business from Port Hope to Peterborough was felt beneficially among the business men of the town, and the purchase of supplies and distribution of money here helped to promote the interests of the town. He had also secured the control of the Grand Junction, and had thus transferred the head quarters of that road from Belleville to Peterborough. Four or five years ago the people of the town would have cheerfully given a bonus to secure that road. These railways had placed the town in a better position, and he thought they were entitled to give a bonus. There was no question that it was to the interest of the town to second the efforts of Mr. Cox. As a citizen Mr. Cox had very large interests, and what would benefit him pecuniarily would also benefit the town. If the town agreed to give the $40,000 they should make it a condition that the workshops should be removed and maintained here. They should make this compulsory, so that there would not be any mistake about it. If these shops were located here, and one hundred and fifty men employed, the expenditure necessarily following would be a very important item in the business of the town. The Midland, Grand Junction and Victoria Railways, and he thought in the near future the Nipissing, would give a large and increasing employment to the shops. He believed the sentiment of the people generally favored treating the Midland with considerable liberality. He was not prepared to say whether the sum asked was too small or too large. The subject was one which ought to receive careful consideration. There was no question that the interests of the town would be best promoted by harmonious relations with the Midland Railway, and he hoped they would be able to reach a conclusion that would be satisfactory and advantageous to both parties.

Mr. Wm. Hamilton said he had simply attended to hear what sort of a proposition the Railway was prepared to make. He thought there was a good deal in what had been said in favor of it. But it was pretty hard to commence by robbing Port Hope.

Mr. Stratton said he had omitted to say that this project would offer an opportunity of disposing of the property at Spaulding's Bay to the Company for yard room and additional sidings.

Mr. Cox said there was one thing they should keep in view. They were not called on to impose taxes or create a new debt. They would only be getting rid of an old claim which at one time was not considered to be worth anything at all. He believed that if the town had cancelled that claim, just as Port Hope and Lindsay had done, it would have been even then a very paying investment. There was no doubt that without the railway Peterborough would have been a very small place indeed. This should be taken into consideration—that while all the other towns had given up their claims to aid the railway, Peterborough, which was getting the greatest benefit, kept its claim and that they were only asking a rebate of a portion of it, and that the town should accept $25,000 in cash and an important link of railway, costing $22,-000, in full of their claim.

The Mayor—If a bonus were granted when would you be prepared to commence operations?

Mr. Cox—At once. The Company would expect to continue to pay interest on the full amount till the road was completed.

Mr. Stethem declined to express an opinion.

Mr. Cox said he would rather hear what those opposed to the grant had to say. He was simply there to see what they were likely to do, so that the proprietors of the road could decide what course to pursue.

Mr. Douglas asked if Mr. Cox was not prepared to promise the workshops?

Mr. Cox said if the workshops were removed here it would be worth $100,000 to the town. As a citizen, if he were not connected with the railway at all, he would be glad to give that amount to secure them. He thought the Omemee connection worth to the town what was asked. If the ratepayers did not want the connection they need not have it. A short time ago they had granted $150,000 to the Toronto and Ottawa for a portion only of their proposed shops. The shops of the Midland were of far more importance than what they proposed to give this $150,000 for.

Mr. Whyte said it was certain if the shops were removed here it would be a benefit to the town.

Mr. Chamberlain said he was opposed to bonuses under almost any circumstances. He thought it was peculiar that nobody had urged any benefit to be derived from the missing link which the Company proposed to build, while all were in favor of the shops, which the Company did not propose to build. He pointed out that immediately the Toronto and Ottawa By-Law was dead they had a prospect of getting the road at once. They had got the Grand Junction without any bonus, and if it was in the interests of the railway to make this connection they would make it, bonus or no bonus. He admitted that Mr. Cox had done as much for the town as any one, but he was opposed to the principle of bonuses.

Mr. Cahill said the Company had made a proposition to the town, and it was now our turn. He thought while the road might be built without a bonus, by giving a bonus we would get the benefits earlier. It was not likely the Company would move their buildings without any assistance, but if we pay the cost of removal then they may be induced to do so. He then moved the following resolution, on which he said he hoped those present would freely express their opinion for the guidance of the Council:—

Moved by Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Menzies,—That the request of Mr. Cox in reference to a bonus towards the construction of the Omemee branch of the Midland Railway, be referred to a Committee to report at an early date, the Committee to consist of the members of the Council and Messrs. George Hilliard, M.P., D. G. Hatton, J. J. Lundy, J. F. Dennistoun, R. Hall, W. Cluxton, John Garvey, J. H. Stratton, W. Hamilton, J. Carnegie, T. G. Hazlitt, T. W. Robinson, R. Innes, J. Whyte, E. C. Hill, James Stevenson, J. Bertram and Dr. Kincaid, seven to be a quorum. This Council, however, do not deem it advisable to even consider the advisability of granting a bonus for the construction of said branch unless coupled with the removal of the workshops here, and their permanent maintenance here for the future.

Mr. Cox said it was a question if the Company would entertain the idea of removing the shops and constructing the line for $40,000. The simple removal of the shops alone would make a big hole in the $40,000.

Mr. Cahill was of opinion that the shops could be secured if inducements were offered

Mr. Paterson did not believe the town would really derive any advantage from the building of the road to Lakefield had built up a prosperous little village there, but it had not brought any trade to Peterborough. What have we to expect from Omemee? He was under the impression at first that Peterborough was to be placed on the main line between Lindsay and Port Hope, and that the Millbrook section would be abandoned, but it now seems that we are only to see the freight go past Peterborough. He could not see his way to give a dollar for the road to Omemee, but would be willing to give something for the workshops.

Mr. Douglas fell in with the views of Mr. Paterson. He did not belive it was worth $40,000 to move a line of railway from the township of Cavan to that of Smith. If we did not get the workshops he did not see that we could afford to give them anything.

Mr. McNaughton asked Mr. Cox if they would be compelled to run trains from Omemee to Millbrook?

Mr. Cox said heavy freight going through would of course go that way to Port Hope. Freight with an eastern destination would go through to Belleville. He pointed out that the road would not only make communication with Omemee but for ninety miles beyond, where there was more business in a week than in Haliburton in six months, though the town had been willing to give large sums for connection with Haliburton. There was no doubt but the town would benefit more by this road than by a road to a barren region; the people of Peterborough he thought, were not fully aware of the importance of the business connections of the Midland.

Mr. Paterson thought Peterborough would be nothing more than a way station on the line. If it was to make Peterborough a centre of business it would be different.

Mr. Cox said he did not feel like urging the matter on either the company or the ratepayers. He felt more than certain that it would be of great benefit to the town to have this road built, but if the opinion of the ratepayers was against it, that settled the matter.

Mr. Richardson said he did not think people recognized how important it would be to get the workshops located here. If those works were secured it would build up the town for generations to come.

Mr. Hamilton said it would be of advantage to him to have the line built to Omemee. If Peterborough were on the main line it would bring a great deal of business. Every day there were numbers of people going from Omemee to Lindsay markets, who would come here if the line were open.

The Mayor.—Do you think that line would bring business to the town?

Mr. Hamilton—Yes.

Mr. McNaughton said Mr. Cox had no doubt done a great deal to accomodate the people of the town, but he did not feel that the town ought to give $40,000 for the line to Omemee. The question was would the line benefit the town generally to the extent of $40,000? He thought it would pay better to have the workshops. He thought it was the wish of the ratepayers to encourage Mr. Cox.

Mr. Cox said several gentlemen had referred to himself personally. While he appreciated the friendly nature of these allusions, he reminded them that this was a matter of dollars and cents, and he desired them to consider it from a purely business standpoint. If he was interested in the railway, he was also much more largely and and more permanently interested as a citizen, and if he were not connected with the railway at all he would support liberal assistance to the project. Mr. Paterson thought the town would benefit by a connection 50 miles among the rocks, while here they were opening up a line direct through 65 miles of the finest country in Canada. Their morning trains took up to Lindsay every day ten or twelve persons who did business there. This trade would be brought to Peterborough. There was no reason why Peterborough should not be just as good a centre of trade as Toronto. All they wanted was a little pluck and enterprise, and they would have to show these if they wished to go ahead.

Mr. Hamilton said people from Omemee went to Lindsay to trade.

Mr. Richardson asked how this link would help the town?

Mr. Cox said they claimed it would make this a centre of business, and would attract business here. It would open Peterborough markets to a large section who would do business here.

Mr. Douglas asked why they did not do business here now?

Mr. Cox—We don't get their business now because they can't come here. Lindsay was now 43 miles off, and the road would make it only 25. Omemee was 23 miles off and it would be brought to 15, and that was a matter of three cents a mile.

Dr. Kincaid had not been present to hear the discussion. He believed in railways, and he would like to see all the roads we can get, if we do not have to pay too much for them.

Mr. Hill said people in Omemee and that vicinity preferred Peterborough for a market and would come here if they had the facilities. He knew from personal acquaintance that we would get a large portion of that trade if the connection were made.

Mr. Cox said he proprietors of the Midland would like to know what to do one way or the other, without delay, so that if the road were to be built it might be commenced this fall. He had no doubt all the ratepayers had their minds made up. If they said yes, the work would be commenced this fall. If they said no, they might commence in the spring, or it might not be commenced at all.

Mr. Hill said it was not like asking for a vote of money. They had the money already in their hands. If the railway paid the whole of it over we should be no better off at the end of two years. Mr. Cox's interests were our interests and he wanted to put this money to good use.

Mr. Cahill's resolution was then put and carried.

MANUFACTURERS AGAIN.

Mr. Cahill read the following extract from the Globe:

"A strong company has been organized in Toronto for the purpose of establishing a paper mill in Ontario. The project is promoted by the leading paper firms in the city, who have already subscribed a sufficient amount of stock. The capital of the company will be $250,000. Various sites for the mill have been considered, that of Bracebridge most favourably, but there is a substantial objection to this place, it is stated, owing to the high rates of freight on the Northern, which is the only railway that serves that district. The other localities thought of are Cambellford, Peterborough and Cornwall. The company are now negotiating with an expert in the United States, who, when he arrives, will assist the company in coming to a determination in the matter. The site will not, in any event, be placed further east than Cornwall. No bonus will be required or asked for from any Municipality. Part of the plant will be purchased in Scotland and part in the States. Mr. James Barber, jr., has been elected provisional President of the company."

He thought it was important to endeavor to secure the location of this mill here, and moved the following resolution:

Moved by Coun. Cahill, seconded by Coun. Menzies,—That the Mayor and Mr. G. A. Cox be a Committee to interview the promoters of the new company, and, if possible, to induce them to locate in Peterborough, and that the town offer exemption from taxation for a term of years as an inducement.

Mr. Chamberlain said the company were not asking for exemption.

Mr. Cox said if we could get the mill to locate here by the simple exemption from taxation, not a voice should be raised against it. He explained that his attention had been drawn to this enterprise through being consulted as to freights, when they were contemplating Washago as a point of operations. He had drawn their attention to the advantageous connections for freight distribution which Peterborough now offered by Belleville, Port Hope and the north and west. The factory would be of very much more advantage to the town than the amount of taxes would represent, and the people of Peterborough had got to be alive to their interests and show some enterprise if they did not want to dwindle down into a one-horse town.

The motion then carried and the meeting adjourned.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 28, 1881.

The West Riding Vacancy.

In accordance with the announcement in last week's EXAMINER, a meeting of the Liberal electors of the West Riding was held in Bradburn's Opera House on Monday evening. The meeting was largely attended, and was in every sense a representative one. On motion of Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. Lundy, Mr. John Hull, of Lakefield, was voted to the chair, and briefly stated the object of the assembly, which was to consider what steps were desirable to be taken in view of the vacancy in the representation of the County, caused by the death of Mr. W. H. Scott. Before the proper business of the meeting was approached, Mr. Geo. A. Cox brought before the meeting a resolution which he rightly said should command their united support. He had, he said, fought two bitter contests with Mr. Scott as the Conservative nominee, and he had found him ever an honorable opponent, and one whom he could meet after the heat of the contest was over on cordial and friendly terms. He then moved the following resolution:—

Moved by Geo. A. Cox, seconded by J. Edwards,—That this meeting of the Liberal Electors of the West Riding of the County of Peterborough, desire to express their deep sense of the great loss sustained by this Town and County, as well as the Province of Ontario, in the early removal by death of the late representative of the Riding in the Provincial Legislature, Wm. H. Scott, Esq. Although differing from him in our political views, yet the marked ability and moderation with which he advocated what he thought was for the best interests of the country, commanded our respect and admiration. We deplore his death as a public loss, and request the secretary of this meeting to convey, with a copy of this resolution, our sincere and heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. Scott and family in the sad bereavement which they have sustained.

Mr. James Edwards in seconding this resolution, which was carried by a hearty and unanimous vote, testified to his personal intimacy with the late Mr. Scott, and to the moderation and fair play which had ever been characteristic of him. Mr. J. J. Lundy, who, on rising was greeted with loud applause, then addressed the meeting, referring to the overture made by the Conservative party, asserting that while not anxious for a contest, for the limited term remaining to be filled in the present Legislature, and willing to avoid a contest if both parties could meet on fair ground, outside of politics, he, as a Reformer, was prepared to go into a contest if it were necessary and fight it out to the bitter end. He nominated Mr. George A. Cox, a man who would, according to the expressions of the Conservatives at their meeting, be acceptable to both parties, and who would certainly, if elected, look after the interests of Peterborough. He believed such a nomination would meet with the views of fair-minded men on the other side, but it might be that a few hot-heads among the Conservatives would object. If so he was in favor of going to the polls and making a hearty and determined fight, in which he felt sure they would win. Mr. M. Sanderson, Warden of the County, in seconding the nomination, paid a warm tribute to Mr. Cox for his successful labors in promoting the interests of the town and county, and did not think any man had better claims, outside of politics, than Mr. Cox had upon the support of the people generally. Mr. Hull then put the following resolution, which was carried by a standing vote:—

Moved by J. J. Lundy, seconded by M. Sanderson, That this meeting collectively and individually pledge its hearty, untiring and active support to the candidature of Mr. Geo. A. Cox, for election to the Local Legislature, and that they will exert every lawful effort and influence to ensure his return.

Mr. Cox said he was not quite in accord with the previous speakers. He thought it was desirable on every account to avoid a contest if it could be done by a harmonious agreement such as suggested by the Conservative party at their meeting. If it were necessary to have a contest, if the other party were not willing to listen to reason, then he would go in and fight it out, and would not shrink from doing his full duty as a candidate, or otherwise. Still he had the conviction that the interests of the county would be better served by harmonious action, and it might be that the Conservatives would object to him on account of political reasons, and if any other man acceptable to both parties were presented, he would be heartily glad to escape the duty, as his business connections were of such, and so onerous, a nature, that it would be more of a sacrifice than most people might imagine, for him to accept the position, even if nominated by both parties, which he thought was doubtful to be the case. Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald was called on and expressed his view, as one who had not always been, but was now, a good Reformer, that the battle should be fought out on its merits. He thought Mr. Cox had done a great deal to build up the interests of the town of Peterborough, and that he deserved much at the hands of its citizens, irrespective of politics. Mr. Graham, of Smith, followed in the same strain, but agreeing with Mr. Cox that it was desirable to avoid the turmoil of a contest, if by harmonious action they could unite upon a man to represent them. He believed Mr. Cox had the best and strongest claims upon the riding, but the other party might have objections to him which would make the selection of another name desirable. The Chairman then put the following resolution, which was carried:

Moved by Geo. A. Cox, seconded by Thos. Menzies,—In the opinion of this meeting the interests of the Town and County would be better served if all parties could, for a time, cease political hostilities, and unite in selecting a candidate best calculated to advance our local interests, which are at this time of a most important nature, and, that, therefore, instead of finally agreeing upon a candidate at present, we await the action of the Conservative Convention to-morrow evening, in hopes that some arrangement may be arrived at satisfactory to both political parties.

After some discussion the following motion was put and unanimously carried.

Moved by Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. Graham, that the following be a committe to convey to the Conservative Convention the nomination of Mr. Cox, by this Convention, and to state on our behalf, recognizing the desirability at this juncture, of, if possible, avoiding a contest, and also the common interest of the town and county, in uniting by harmonious action to further the interests of the community as affected in the legislature, we trust the Conservative party will agree to accept Mr. Cox as our representative, or agree to unite upon some person equally capable of promoting the interests of the county, and equally influential with the governing majority:—Messrs. Hull, Lundy, Sanderson, Stratton, Moloney, Walton, Edwards and Wood.

The Committee appointed accordingly met at Mr. Lundy's office on Tuesday evening, awaiting an intimation from the Conservative Convention, in session at Bradburn's Hall, of the course which they proposed to pursue in regard to the suggestion originated by them at their first meeting. Not having any eaves-droppers on our staff, we are not in a position to give even an ostensible report of the proceedings at this meeting. Finally, however, a committee composed of Messrs. John Burnham, M.P., Dr. Kincaid, H. H. Smith, Mr. Barnard, and Mr. Griffin waited upon the Reform Committee with the information, stated through Mr. Smith, that their convention submitted to the committee the names of the following gentlemen:—Messrs. Poussette, Dennistoun, Carnegie, Smith, Kincaid, Waddell, and Davis. Mr. Smith stated further that their meeting had decided that the candidate must be pledged to the abolition of the Upper Canada College, the reduction of the number of the members of the Legislature, limitation of patronage, and a couple of ridiculous resolutions about ex post facto legislation and the Trent Valley Canal. The Reform Committee of course could not entertain for a moment such a proposition, but they offered the alternative of an unanimous nomination of Dr. Kincaid as a perfectly Independent candidate. Dr. Kincaid, having given the most emphatic assurances that he refused to accept the pledges above referred to, and would, if elected, feel himself equally the representative of the Liberal Committee as of the Conservative Committee, the delegation withdrew. We are given to understand that at the convention of the other party a determination was evinced by Messrs. Dennistoun, Smith, Carnegie, Cahill, McGrath, R. A. Morrow, and Croly, who are supposed to "run the machine," not to accept Dr. Kincaid under the circumstances. On the other hand moderate and respectable men like Mr. Jas. Stevenson and Mr. Poussette, thought differently, and on the house being divided the plain indication was that Messrs. Kincaid, Stevenson and Poussette represented the vast majority of the party, while the "clique" stood silent, abashed, and if not ashamed, yet repulsed and exposed. The nomination of Dr. Kincaid upon the terms on which he pledged himself to the Liberal Committee was then conveyed to the Committee by John Burnham, M.P., and was accepted by the Committee on behalf of the party.

Dr. Kidcaid may be therefore regarded as virtually the member elect for the riding, and while we believe that the narrow bigotry which manipulated the objection to Mr. Geo. A. Cox, after first proposing him as a man upon whom both parties could unite in the interests of the county, would have been well crushed out by Mr. Cox's nomination and election, which would have been a matter of ease to the Liberal party, we yet believe that Dr. Kincaid will make a creditable and an acceptable representative, and we are fully satisfied with the fact that the respectability of the Conservative party has at last come to the surface and expressed its determination to be no longer controlled by a little knot of men, bankrupt in brains, pocket and principle. We are satisfied that Dr. Kincaid will go to the Legislature as an independent man in the truest sense of the term, dealing with matters that come before him in the House upon their true merits, and as in his judgment may be in the best interests of his constituency. And our own confidence, and we think a justifiable one, in the Ministry of Mr. Mowat is such that we do not think the new member will often be found voting against the Government if he keeps a steadfast eye upon the attitude in which he now stands with regard to both parties.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED.—In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise, and which really does as recommended. Electric Bitters we can vouch for as being a true and reliable remedy, and one that will do as recommended. They invariably cure stomach and Liver Complaints, Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. An Impudent Assertion.

The Times of last Saturday editorially implies that there has been some sort of collusion between Mr. Stratton, the proprietor of this paper, and Mr. Carnegie, of the firm of Toker & Co., one of the proprietors of the Review, as to a grant of money made at the last regular meeting of the Council. We think it is hardly necessary to say that the vote of the Town Council for the purpose of driving the Canadian Press Association around town, was not one to either Mr. Stratton or Mr. Carnegie, but a vote by the Council for a specific object, and one which we fancy will command the approval of the ratepayers generally. As to the private arrangements of the two gentlemen above named, for the welcome of their brethren of the quill, we do not think it necessary to refer to them, any more than to say that such privacy would be respected by any gentleman. If it is the business of the Times to obtrude its unwholesome interference in such a matter, it is at least out of the ordinary course pursued by respectable newspapers.

Refreshing Coolness.

The following appears in the Globe respecting the Tory mass meeting of Tuesday:—

"It was also moved by Mr. Carnegie, seconded by Mr. J. Griffin,—That while this meeting is fully alive to the advantages which Mr. Cox has and is conferring on Peterborough by his management of the Midland Railway, and is ready to render him every reasonable assistance in carrying out his railway policy so far as we understand it, yet in view of the close alliance existing between the Midland, Grand Junction, and Grand Trunk Railway Companies, and it being in the interest of these companies to prevent the construction of that through and competing railway for which our late representative so earnestly labored, and in view of the fact that the interest of these companies is antagonistic to the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, through which alone the people in this section of Ontario can hope to be guaranteed reasonable rates of freight at all times, this meeting is of opinion, even if no important political considerations were involved, that instead of electing Mr. Cox at this time by acclamation in order that he may the better forward the several railway projects with which he is connected, it is the duty of this constituency to elect a representative who will be in a position to discharge his duty with a single eye to the interests of his constituents as a whole, and untrammelled by the railway influences which surround Mr. Cox's present position"

The refreshing coolness, not to say consummate impudence, of a man who pretends to the most ordinary intelligence, and yet tries to palm off on an intelligent audience such flapdoodle as is embodied in the above, commands our amazement and our profound respect. No politics about the Trent Valley Canal? Certainly not; of course not; not by any means; as the boy in the sketch by Boz remarks. Yet the first opportunity that can be tortured up, Mr. Carnegie is to the fore with a declaration that the Trent Valley Canal is in danger from the practical schemes by which Mr. Geo. A. Cox is seeking to build up the town—whose public feeling we sincerely trust is not represented by the splenetic resolution of the disappointed office-seeker quoted above.

NORWOOD NEWS.

PASTOR RESIGNED—CRICKET—PLEASURE PARTIES—ACCIDENT—CHANGED HANDS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Herbert Reynolds, youngest son of Councillor Reynolds of this village, met with a serious accident on Friday afternoon last, having fallen from a tree into which he climbed, breaking his arm. He is now getting along well.

Cricket is reviving again in this neighborhood. A game was played at Hastings on Friday last between the celebrated team of that village, and an eleven made up from Norwood and Westwood. The match resulted in favor of the united teams by twenty-three runs. The same Club played Peterborough a few days ago with a more disastrous result to the fame of the Club. Norwood and Westwood scored 67 in their first innings, and 44 in their second; total 113. Hastings scored 47 in their first innings, and 43 in their second; total 90. With the exception of an uncalled-for remark made by the captain of the Hastings team, the game passed off in a remarkably pleasant manner. The return match will be played here to-morrow (Friday).

A number of pleasure parties from this village, composed of private families, and young people anxious for fun and frolic, started this week for our back lakes. They take with them boats, tents, bedding, camp kettles, forage for an extended term, and a lot of other et ceteras. Mr. P. W. Reynolds and Miss Margaret Scott are the chosen guardians of one of the parties, composed of many young, gay and gallant sports. Mr. Roxburgh, wife and family—and no small body either—make up a another party. Other parties are being made up to follow these in a few days, as the sport at Stoney Lake and its vicinity is all that can be desired.

Mr. P. W. Reynolds has purchased the brick dwelling on Peterborough street, belonging to Mr. J. D. Lewis, furniture dealer, etc. The price paid for the property is, I learn, $750—cheap at that, too.

The Rev. Mr. Fotheringham has severed his connection with his congregations here and in Hastings, having last week formally tendered his resignation as their minister. This step, though unavoidable on his part, will be a cause of deep regret in this neighborhood, as his conduct, during his stay here of some eight years, had won for him the sincere respect of all classes of people. As a pastor he has been eminently successful, and has been the means of largely increasing the members of his congregation in Norwood. Your readers are perhaps aware that Mr. Fotheringham some time ago went South for the purpose of recruiting his health, which had been reduced to a very low condition by the stress of pastoral work here and in Hastings. Mrs. Fotheringham also accompanied him, for the improvement of her health, and both, we understand, have been considerably benefitted by the change of climate. The churches here and at Hastings, for eight years under the pastoral charge of Mr. Fotheringham, will be preached vacant next Sunday, when the present incumbent, Rev. Mr. Campbell, temporarily in charge, will deliver his farewell sermons.

SPORTING NOTES.

In their game of lacrosse with Millbrook on Friday last, the Cobourg team were again defeated, Millbrook taking first second and fifth games.

Peterborough defeated Bobcaygeon on the latter's ground on Tuesday of last week, by a score of 62 to 50 and seven wickets to spare. The Peterborough team were Hallet, Hamilton, Hartley, Hamilton (Max), Canning, Snyder, Beck, Rogers, Stratton, Rogers (H.) and Tierney. The highest score made in one innings was 18, by Max Hamilton, the second being 10 by Hallet.

The finest game of lacrosse yet played on Peterborough ground, was that contested on Thursday last, between the teams of the Cobourg and Peterborough Clubs. The game was witnessed by a very large number of spectators, many ladies gracing the seats with their presence and inspiring the home team with their evident favor. The attendance indicated a growing interest in this manly and popular national game. The Cobourg team arrived in town in the morning and were hospitably received as is usual with the people of Peterborough. After seeing such "sights" as there are to see, enjoying dinner at the Caisse House, and equipping themselves for the fray, the party rendezvoused at the cricket ground at 3:30, and took the field in the following order:

PETERBORO'.		COBOURG.
W. Morgan	Field Captain	W. Hodder
W. Sanderson	Goal	W. Amesbury
W. Rudkins	Point	G. Minaker
J. Coughlin	Cover Point	J. Billington
P. Rudkins		R. Steinhaur
J. Simpson		H. Bannister
M. Mcdonald	Defence Field	M. Milligan
R. H. Fortye		C. Winch
H. Phelan		N. Whitelaw
W. Halpin	Home Field	Steinhaur
C. Rutherford		G. Stephens
M. Hacket	Home	P. York
A. McNeil	Umpire	A. Woods.

The Cobourg men were apparently, in point of physique, much superior to our own boys, being heavier and more muscular, and having, moreover, the advantage, which proved a doubtful one, of two "Indians" in their ranks. The Indian may be a very good man on his native heath, but Rice Lake has not yet produced the champion of the lacrosse field. The first game was opened by Mr. Samuel English, the referee, facing Nelles and Sheehy, two men who did remarkably good playing during the whole day. After a vain attempt to assault the Peterborough goal, the rubber was sent down to the Cobourg flags, where a splendid and stubborn defence was maintained by Amabury. Occasionally the ball would be sent to centre field, but not for long, the indefatigueable work of Hackett, Fortye, Phelan and Rutherford ever pressing it on the attention of the sturdy goal keeper of the visitors. Finally, after seven minutes hard play, Rutherford put the ball through, winning the first game for Peterborough. The second game want of space forbids our noticing in detail. It lasted an hour and forty-four minutes, during which the men of both sides not only played desperately, but played well. Rudkins, Sheehy, Hackett, Fortye and Simpson put in some remarkably good work to the credit of the Peterborough boys; and on the other side, besides the splendid goal-keeping of Amabury, Nelles, Billington and Steinhaur distinguished themselves. Finally Rutherford secured the ball and passed it through the Cobourg flags, amid the excited applause of the large gathering of onlookers, who had become deeply interested in the game. The third game was won by Peterborough by a lucky throw through the visitors' flags by Simpson, after a few seconds' play, making three straight games, for one of which the boys had to work as they never have before, and as they are not anxious to do again.

In the evening the visiting team were entertained at supper at the Caisse House, at which about seventy-five sat down. The chair was occupied by Mr. A. McNeil, who performed the duties of presiding officer in a very efficient and creditable manner. After disposing of the excellent bill of fare provided by mine host, Choate, whose reputation in catering on occasions of this kind is too well known to need special praise, the Chairman called the meeting to order, and in his usual happy style introduced the programme of toasts in a neat speech. "The Queen," and "Governor-General and Princess Louise," were duly and loyally honored, after which the "Army, Navy and Volunteers" was given and responded to by Corp. Nelles and Dr. Kincaid. "Our Guests" brought forth responses from Messrs. Billington, Hodder and Stephens (the Captain, President and Secretary of the Cobourg Club) and Mr. Whitlaw. "The Peterborough Lacrosse Club and Citizens" was proposed by Mr. Hodder, in very complimentary and flattering terms, and responded to by those present, Messrs. McNeil, Coughlin, Tate and Tierney favoring the company with a number of songs. "The Ladies" drew forth responses from several bashful admirers. "The Press" was acknowledged by F. J. Jamieson, of the EXAMINER, and J. C. Robertson, of the Times. After proposing "The Host and Hostess," which was responded to by Mr. Choate, a very pleasant and happy evening was brought to a close by singing Auld Lang Syne and God Save the Queen.

Last Friday evening, at a well-attended meeting of the Peterborough Boat Club, it was decided to renew the Club races, and to hold a regatta about the beginning of September. The first of the Club races will take place to-morrow evening, for which the following fours have been chosen by lot:—

RAILWAY NOTES.

Twelve cars, (120 tons) of new steel rails for the Midland have arrived and are to be put down at once between Lindsay and Beaverton.

It is said the new Grand Trunk station at Port Hope is to cost $20,000. A mile of double track is to run westward from the new building.

The Toronto & Nipissing Co. have now under construction at Uxbridge a large number of freight cars for use on the broad guage as soon as the extra rail is on the track.

It is the intention to carry the annual supply of corn to Gooderham & Worts' distillery via Midland City and Nipissing this fall instead of having it come by the old routes.

The Midland route is attracting business. The steam barge Josephine Kidd, of Goderich, with a cargo of 320 bbls of salt arrived at Midland on Tuesday evening, the cargo consigned to Morgan Davis, Bowmanville. Mr. Joseph Kidd, owner of the barge, also proprietor of the largest salt works in the Dominion, accompanied the steamer, and stated that this is the first cargo of a prominent business in shipping salt to the east via Midland. A great deal more will follow.—Lindsay Post.

We understand that extensive improvements are to be made at once on the Grand Junction docks here, which are to be extended 350 feet, which, together with other improvements to be made, will cost $60,000. The contract has already been let for the timber for the elevator, which will cost $30,000 in addition to the amount to be expended on the docks, and will be built by the Midland Elevator Co., who are also the owners of the elevators at Midland and Port Hope. It will doubtlessly be in the interests of the Railway Company and Belleville as well, that all the large elevators on the line belong to one company, as it will prevent any strife as to the destination of grain, which will then find its natural outlet.—Belleville Intelligencer.

Mr. Thos. Brownlee, who recently severed his connection with the G. J. Railway, intends going west.

The Belleville Intelligencer says, referring to the proposal to aid in securing the construction of the road from Peterborough to Omemee:—"It is to be hoped that the result will be favorable, as the advantages which Peterborough will secure by being placed on the main line of the shortest route to Chicago and the North-West cannot fail to be very great. A large through grain trade is certain, so soon as the direct line is built, and besides, the timber now shipped at Port Hope will pass through Peterborough for shipment at Belleville. The consideration which Mr. Cox asks is reasonable and ought to be granted, the more especially as Peterborough has secured the Grand Junction without costing her anything.

Trains now run regularly over the old Cobourg bridge, which has been thoroughly repaired and is in perfectly safe condition. The bridges along the line of the Grand Junction are being put in perfect order.

The surveying party of Mr. Lumsden for the Ontario and Quebec railway line have surveyed the following townships eastward from Peterborough:—Otonabee, Asphodel, Dummer, Marmora, Rawdon, Huntington, Madoc, Elgin, Kaladar, Kennebec, Olden, Oso, South Sherbrooke, Bathurst, Drummond, Beckwith, Gouldbourn, and the party is now at work in the township of North Gower.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL.

The Council met at the call of the Reeve, on the 8th instant, at 1 o'clock p. m., all the members being present,—the Reeve in the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and signed. A petition from James Brown, asking the Council to grant him the sum of ten dollars, to be laid out on his beat, that amount having been paid by Mr. E. Chamberlain in lieu of statute labor for last year. Mr. Brown's request was granted, and an order given on the Treasurer for said amount. On motion of Mr. Foster, seconded by Mr. Dunlop, the following accounts were ordered to be paid:—Wm. Collins, for gravel from Mr. Wm. Metheral, $9; Francis Goodfellow, for string pieces for culverts, $1; Wm. Robson, for work done on Gravel Road, $76.25; Thomas Armstrong, work on Quarter Line, $35; D. A. McDonald, 1,000 feet plank, $8; Dennistoun Bros. & Hall, law expenses and balance of Fitzgerald account, $32.66; Matthew J. Johnston, work on Crawford's Line, $9.75; William Collins, extra work on Gravel Road, $2.75; Henry Collins, for attending Court in Fitzgerald suit, $1; Richard Lillico, for gravel supplied F. Poulsome, $6.60. Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Brealy,—That Mr. Bradburn, Treasurer, be exonerated from all blame on account of cheques which should have been given to him by the License Inspector in July, 1880, but was overlooked by the said Inspector till the 22nd day of June, 1881, and that the Reeve be hereby instructed to hand the said cheques to the Treasurer.—Carried. On motion of Mr. Brealy, seconded by Mr. Dunlop, orders were given on the Treasurer in favor of John Tully and James Davidson, for $8 each, that being an equivalent to the amount voted to their respective beats by the Council of Simth. Moved by Mr. Brealy, seconded by Mr. Forster,—That the taxes for the year 1877, abated to the Collector and returned by the Treasurer to the County Treasurer as a charge against part (50 acres) of Lot 1, in the 9th Concession, assessed as property of Thomas Elliott, be written off, the said taxes having been charged in error.—Carried. On motion of Mr. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. Brealy, the Council adjourned till Monday, the 29th day of August next, 1 o'clock p.m.

A Maine Sunday-school teacher asked his class, "What kind of little boys go to heaven? A lively little four-years-old boy raised his hand. "Well you may answer," said the teacher. "Dead ones?" the little fellow shouted at the extent of his lungs.

Translated from the omnibus; Boy out of school coming—"Father, is it true, what us to-day the teacher told has, that the mankind from apes descended?" Father, enraged—"Thou little blackguard! that can with thee perhaps the case be, with me but certainly not."

Raspberries were in good demand and sold at 60 to 70 cents per pail. Black Currants sold quickly at 10 to 11 cents per quart; not enough offering to supply the demand. JULY.—During this month summer complaints commence their ravages. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the best known preventative and cure for all forms of bowel complaints and sickness incident to the summer season. 29-2t.

The Cobourg World says we believe we are correct in saying that Mr. C. E. Ewing has been appointed Collector in place of Mr. Perry, superannuated, and Mr. D. McAllister, Surveyor and Landing Waiter, in place of Mr. Ewing, promoted, in the Custom House at this port.

A barn about one mile from Consecon, belonging to W. J. Robinson, and rented by John Donnan, was destroyed by fire on Saturday evening about seven o'clock. The fire also caught in a fence, destroying about half a mile of it. Lost probably $500; insured. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Last Wednesday lightning entered a bed-room window of H. Littlejohn's house near Valentia. Lindsay gaol seems to possess some singular fatality, another death occuring there last week, that of a vagrant named Sproule. He had served ten years in the 100th Regt. His death was caused by general break-down of his constitution, ruined by drinking and bad habits. It is said he had wealthy relatives in Brock, who did not look after him. An inquest was held by Dr. Poole, and a verdict returned in accordance with the facts.

The Electric Light at Cook's Mill is the great attraction of Midland just now. The engine, machine, wires, &c. cost in the neighborhood of $5,000, and is really worth travelling a long distance to see. There are in all sixteen lamps or lights in and about the mill which so light up the premises as to enable the work to go on outside as well as inside at night as in day.

AUGUST.—The summer season now reaches its climax, and is prolific in developing bowel complaints. Over indulgence in fruit, immoderate drinking of iced water and summer beverages, in a few hours produce fatal ravages among children and adults. A train conveying an excursion from Toronto to Penetanguishene on the Hamilton & North Western Railway, on arriving within six miles of Penetanguishene had to return to Wyevale with the passengers, on account of the bush fires on the track a mile in extent. One of the cars took fire, and some difficulty was experienced in extinguishing the flames. A great quantity of cordwood was burned along the track, and the farm houses were in great danger.

On Tuesday, Mr. James Allen, who lives about three miles from here, on the boundary of Verulam and Fenelon, had about three acres of standing wheat burned by a running fire. The fire which started at the burning of Mowry's mill last week, caught into the adjacent swamp and has now extended for more than a mile, doing a very great deal of damage to the young timber. The Victoria Railway Co. have had a good deal of their fence destroyed by fire which caught by sparks from the engines.

The schooner Flora Emma, on her way from Oswego to Oshawa, with about 360 tons of coal, came to grief opposite Port Britain, about four miles west of Port Hope, on the 16th inst, being struck with a sudden gust of wind, taking off her jib boom, carrying away the topmast, and the mainmast and foremast below the trestle trees, and splitting the mainsail in too. The tug Albert Wright, of Port Hope, went to her assistance and towed her into port. Fortunately the crew escaped unharmed. The damage is estimated at $800 to $1,000.

HONORED AND BLEST.—When aboard of eminent phyiacians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well knows valuable remedies, which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispenced with, many were skeptical; but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all as benefactors.—Democrat. 29-2t

Last Friday morning the fire alarm was sounded, and on enquiry it appeared the lock-up was on fire. It seems that a man named Andrew Egleston, who lives in the township of Cavan, had been put in the lock-up on a charge of insanity. He had been wandering about the streets all night and had by some means fallen into the river. Shortly after being put it the lock-up he set fire to his straw hat, which in turn ignited the sidings of the cell. The firemen promptly turned out and extinguished the fire, not, however, until the cell was considerably burned, and Egleston was somewhat scorched and nearly suffocated. He is quite a well-to-do farmer in Cavan, and has friends there to whom he was sent by the noon train by the Chief Constable.—Lindsay Post.

A FOOL ONCE MORE.—"For ten years my wife was confined to her bed with such a complication of ailments that no doctor could tell what was the matter or cure her, and I used up a small fortune in humbug stuff. Six months ago I saw a U. S. flag with Hop Bitters on it, and I thought I would be a fool once more. I tried it, but my folly proved to be wisdom. Two bottles cured her, she is now as well and strong as any man's wife, and it cost me only two dollars. Such folly pays.—H. W., Detroit, Mich.—Free Press. 29-2t

Last February all Oshawa was startled by the finding of the body of a little murdered babe. Speculation ran rife as to who the mother and supposed murderess was, but the whole matter was shrouded in mystery. An inquest was held, and the jury returned a verdict of murder by some person unknown. About this time a girl named Mary Cotter, disappeared mysteriously, and the finger of suspicion was pointed at her. Ever since the authorities have been looking for her in vain, till Sunday, when the chief constable of Oshawa, put the case in the hands of Detective Burrows, who, after a sharp run, nabbed the girl on Adelaide street, Toronto, on Sunday night at eight o'clock. She was brought to Whitby last week, and tried before Mayor Harper, P. M. Dr. McGill, Mrs. Barrett, Mrs. Hallett and others gave testimony for the Crown. Prisoner admitted that she was the mother. The case will be tried at the September assizes.

'A SOUND MIND IN A HEALTHY BODY.' The old Roman idea of the highest degree of happiness. The Liver rules the roast, Indigestion creates anarchy in the physical system. Costiveness, Billiousness, dizziness and bad taste in the mouth, yellow skin and eyes, loss of appetite, loss of energy, bad low spirits, pains in the back and sides, wind and foul stomach all these create bad blood. Regulate the Bowels, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys with Zopess (from Brazil,) try a 10 cent sample and ask J. D. Tully or T. Ruston about it. 44-1y.

SEE TO IT? Zopess, (from Brazil) will cure the worst case of Dyspepsia. A single dose will relieve in a degree that shows its wonderful curative powers, and its peculiar action upon the Stomach and Digestive Organs. It is a positive and absolute cure for Costiveness and Constipation, acting in a remarkable way upon the system, carrying off impurities. As a Liver regulator its actions are most remarkable. It tones and stimulates the Liver to action, it corrects the acids and regulates the bowels. A few doses will surprise you. Sample bottles 10 cts. 44-1y.

The latest sea serpent story comes from Lake Simcoe, and is told by Mr. Allan G. Canava, Dominion Land Surveyor, in a letter to his uncle, Mr. Chas. Gibbs, this city. Mr. Canava has been employed lately in examining the waters of Lake Simcoe and Couchiching and the marshes adjoining. A day or two ago he was engaged with an assistant examining the swamp bordering on Lake Simcoe, on the boundary of the townships between South Orillia and Oro. They were in a boat and were moving slowly along when their attention was attracted by a peculiar puffing sound similar to that produced by the escape of steam from the exhaust pipe of an engine. Mr. Canava remarked that he thought that was a strange place to have a mill, upon which his companion rejoined that the sound came from the cars on the railway. But it seems that both gentlemen were wide of the mark, for in a few seconds they saw emerging from the rushes an extraordinary creature, having a head as large as that of an adult human being, and a body resembling a serpent, and increasing in thickness downwards. It seemed frightened and made a peculiar puffing sound like a small engine. After going out into deep water it stopped for a short time, and with the cessation of locomotion there was an end to the puffing noise, already referred to. Mr. Canava and his companion propelled their boat forward a short distance to have a better view of the creature, upon which the puffing recommenced more vigorously than before; and it moved off at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour. It carried its head about three feet out of the water as it went. The above is the strangest of the many stories recently told about sea serpents, but as the reciter of it is, Mr. Gibbs says, trustworthy, there seems no reasonable ground for withholding its publication in the absence of any other objection than that it is a somewhat strange tale.—The Globe.

THE ALEMBIC OF THE BODY.—The stomach is the alembic of the human system. In it those wondrous chemical changes take place which result in the transmutation of food into blood. When it is vigorous the necessary processes of digestion and assimilation go on uninterrupted, and the system is suitably nourished. When it is feeble or disordered, they are obstructed, and being in consequence ill supplied with blood of a vitalizing quality, the physical organism becomes weak and feeble, the nerves suffer, the liver and bowels are semi-paralyzed, and appetite and sleep fail. These disastrous consequences may, however, be prevented, or remedied with the supreme stomachic and aperient, NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE, a medicine of rare purity and efficacy, which reforms a disorderded and repairs a weakened state of the digestive organs, overcomes billiousness, relieves the bowels when obstructed without straining or weakening them, and promotes the exit from the system of impurities which infect the blood, which cause serious organic maladies. No objectionable mineral contaminates it, and its value is not marred by a subsequent re-action prejudical to the general health. Far preferable is it to the ordinary nauseous drugs used to produce a similar effect, but which are frequently ineffective as well as unpleasant; nor is it a cheap and valueless medicine, puffed into existence. It is used for dyspepsia, billiousness, affections of the blood, kidney complaints, famale weakness, lumbago, &c., and in all blood diseases is unequalled. Price, $1,00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

A BITTER VENGEANCE

BY RACHEL BERNHARDT.

CHAPTER VII.

"I will not ask your answer now," Jack proceeded, gently. "My abruptness, I perceive, has startled you. Take time to think over it; and will you meet me here again to-morrow, to let me know your decision? Ah—if you can say yes, Hilda, you will make me the happiest man on earth."

She lifted her head, tears were in her eyes, but they shone like stars. Impulsively she extended her hands.

"Oh, Mr. Bramber, you carry your joke too far—you are too good!"

"My pity!—it is my love, Hilda," he exclaimed, clasping her hands, and drawing her to him. "Can you love me?"

Before he could reply, there was a distinct sound of some one among the trees. The scared girl, instantly taking alarm, started away. Jack had but time to whisper, "To-morrow," when, nodding back at him, she was gone.

"Well," repeated the young fellow, as he strode to the gate giving on to the road, "I'm glad I've done it. Whatever happens in the future, no state shall ever dictate on my affections; and, at least, she will know it was sincere."

He proceeded with quick strides to The Firs, the fingers of one hand in his trousers-pocket, those of the other pulling his moustache.

"It's a confoundedly queer crotchet," he muttered. "How the chance it popped into my head I don't know. As the world is made up of atoms, p'raps this idea is—the atoms of words, circumstance, molded into form by imagination. Ha, ha! One thing is certain—it's there, and will not be dislodged; and I think there's foundation for its tenacity. There is another thing positive; I'm bound to Hilda Horne, and"—lifting his hat, as he beat his sparkling love-lit eyes on the sky—"bless Heaven for it!"

That these cousins, with Hilda's whispered, happy confession of a reciprocal love, were not the only ones that occured during the three weeks.

One morning, Lord Bramber, looking younger than ever, having been longer than usual over his toilet, which, save to his valet, was a mystery of mysteries, took his seat at the breakfast-table with an air of gaiety, and exclaimed, as he waved the delicate perfume from his handkerchief, "My dear Jack, congratulate me. Yes, egad! you are such a decidedly unselfish, right-minded, right-seeing young fellow, that I can really ask for your congratulation."

"I am ready to bestow it, I assure you, uncle, if it be for your happiness."

"My happiness? Gad!" kissing his finger-tips. "What Goth could doubt it? Have you really over in love, my dear boy?"

Jack evaded the question by saying, "I suppose, uncle, in your case, love and Lady Cunningham are synonymous? I draw from your words that she has accepted you?"

"She has, Jack; I am the happiest man in the world. Gad! I feel twenty years younger. And she is as amiable as beautiful. Imagine, she made not the slightest demur. Indeed, she approved of your remaining my heir as far as the world is concerned. In fact, she spoke most flatteringly of you, and of the excellent marriage such a fellow as you with your appearance is certain to make."

"I am really much obliged to her ladyship for taking an interest in my affairs," said Jack.

"Not surprising. She, of course, feels like one of the family. A high-sounding alliance—ha! ha!" laughed his lordship, gaily. "Yes! your lovely step-mother and I shall expect it of you. Remember that, Jack; we shall expect it."

"I'll not forget," responded Jack, offhandedly, muttering, however, beneath his breath, "Confound her!—does she suspect?"

Breakfast over, Jack set off to the village. He had a call to make, and it was upon James Stone.

That awful shock he had received was never to be got over by the wretched inebriate. He was rapidly sinking. No water proof was needed than the loathing he had taken for the drink that had been his ruin.

All day he would sit in his chair in a state of apparent stupor. Only Jack knew that there was vitality enough in him to throw this off if he chose.

Lady Cunningham carried her sympathy so far that she would have sent Jane Verner to nurse him; but James Stone had refused in a fashion that her ladyship had found advisable to argue against. He only allowed the wife of a neighbor to come in as she had always done for a weekly visit, to "tidy up," and also Jack Bramber.

"You saved my life at the risk of your own," he said. "And I can trust you, for you can't want a poor old chap dead."

Lady Cunningham, toward the close of those three weeks, had jested her future step-son upon turning nurse. He had answered carelessly, "I am no nurse." but it seems the right thing for me to take an interest in his wretched life. So, as an idle man, I drop in to say 'How are you?' and that is all!"

"You think him ill?"

"Very. The stupor increases. I shouldn't be in the least surprised to find some day that he had died peacefully in his chair."

Had Jack Bramber been looking at Lady Cunningham instead of covertly watching the conservatory, where Hilda had been sent to gather the table flowers, he might have been startled by the singular light that appeared in in her ladyship's eyes.

As he entered James Stone's cottage, he found the old man not in his usual place by the window, but seated in the corner near the fireless grate. He was in a state of evident agitation.

"What is the matter?" asked Jack. "Aren't you so well?"

"Well! It's my opinion, sir, I'll never be that," moaned the old fellow. "I'm going to die!"

"The surest way not to recover is to give up hope, Mr. Stone," said Jack, kindly. "Though every one should try to be prepared for death when it comes, for it must come one day to us all."

"That's it—that's it! Prepared! I might die to-day—I might live for years to-day?"

"I see no reason why you should not," said Jack, not truthfully, but encouragingly.

"Well, that's cheering. If you don't mind, would you sit down? I'd like to chat a bit."

Jack Bramber was one of the best fellows out.

Drawing forward a chair, he sat down.

Half an hour later he made an inquiry.

"Is there any one in the cottage besides ourselves?"

"Mrs. Mother—she's tidyin' up; and a furious row she makes, bother her!"

"She'll do. I'll fetch her. You'd better have some beef tea, too, I think."

Jack went in search of Mrs. Mother, whom he found banging old Stone's feather bed, as if it had been her mortal enemy. After a brief, but rapid conversation, he led her into the parlor.

A quarter of an hour later than that he left the cottage, a strange elation on his handsome countenance.

"If—if—if!" he kept half singing to himself; but if what, he did not state.

That evening he told his uncle that he thought he'd run up to London for a few days for a change.

"That's right, Jack; by all means!" remarked Lord Bramber. "I have some commissions, if you will take the trouble."

So Jack prepared to start next morning. As he was in the act of mounting the dog-cart to drive to the station, a man came hurrying up from the village.

"What is it?" enquired Jack.

"Please, sir, I wor told to come and tell 'ee as ole Jemmy Stone wor found dead in his cheer this morning."

"In his chair? Then he had never been in bed? Who saw the poor fellow last?"

"It mus 'a' been Lady Cunningham. She called to ask how he wor yesternoight."

"Good Heaven!" gasped Jack beneath his breath, far an ugly thought had sprung into his brain.

James Stone's death, however, did not prevent his going to London.

CHAPTER VIII.

AN UNFAIR FIGHT—THE ROOM IN THE WEST TOWER.

On the night of James Stone's death, Lady Cunningham, returning from her visit to him, had proceeded at once to her bed-chamber. Here throwing off her outdoor attire, she disclosed a face pale with indignation and passion. Her very beauty made the expression of rage the more awful.

Her bed-chamber was the large, dark oak-panelled one in which Sir Hereward had died. She had always disliked it for its gloom, but when it was in her own power to quit the apartment, a feeling, a fear kept her there.

They were the oak panels which had witnessed those midnight pacings; and now her ladyship began walking to and fro, her fingers twitching convulsively, and a thin line of froth lying upon her lips.

"No sooner do I remove one obstacle from my path than another springs up in it," she muttered. "But I'm not to be balked—balked by her! I have vowed to set all beneath my feet, and I will. Beggars I made them, beggars they shall remain! Oh," and her eyes wandering round the darkling room, "if only—if only I had succeeded in that, I need have had no fear—none! Now any accident, or any day—But that is not the most important subject at this moment," she interrupted. "It is this girl. So there are clandestine meetings between her and Jack Bramber! I wonder for how long this has been going on? Oh, how cunning has miss been! But she shall find I can outwit her! Does she—can he mean honorable love? Impossible, in his position! Still, men have been known to sacrifice everything for a pretty face—witness Herbert Cunningham! Then, if I die childless, the Castle would go by right to him and her. Never!"

The voice alone could describe the deep significance there was in that last word.

"I must discover—I must ascertain the truth," proceeded Lady Cunningham, as, crossing to the bell, she rung it three distinct times. Then she sat down, her lips compressed, her face gleaming strangely white from the dark, high-backed chair, and waited.

In a brief space the door opened, and Hilda's slight, fair figure appeared on the threshold.

"Your ladyship rung for me?" questioned the low, sweet voice.

"I did. Come in, close the door, and come here."

Hilda obeyed, with a shiver, for the expression on the features of her patroness startled her. The cold, hard, clear gray eyes seemed to pierce her.

"I scarcely expected you to answer my summons, Miss Horne," began my lady, in chill, sneering tones, as the young girl timidly halted in front of her, with drooped, clasped hands, and bent head. "I feared you might not have returned from your assignation with your lover."

A wave of brilliant red flushed over Hilda's fair skin at the idea that her secret had been discovered.

Involuntarily she raised her frightened eyes as she gasped, "your ladyship!"

"What well-acted amazement!" broke in Lady Cunningham, with a short laugh. "Or is your alarm created by finding, Miss Horne, you are detected? I suppose you do not mean to deny, after what I witnessed to-night, his arm round your waist, his lips pressed to yours, that Mr. Bramber is your lover?"

"You witnessed, your ladyship?" gasped the poor girl, overwhelmed with terror and confusion.

"I witnessed. Returning from my visit to that wretched old James Stone, I came through the trees, and saw your parting, I suppose, as you have so soon followed, from your lover, Mr. Bramber. Answer me, girl," her voice breaking into anger, and bringing her white fingers sharply down on the oak arms of the chair, "is he not your lover?"

A violent struggle seemed going on in Hilda's slight frame. Then, rendered bold by the knowledge of Jack's affection, she said, low, but firm, while her glance calmly met the other's. "Yes, your ladyship, Mr. Bramber loves me."

"How?"

"How?" and the girl's pure eyes opened, mutely interrogative.

"Yes, how? He is a gentleman; you a beggar, a pauper dependent for your daily bread! Do you think he would marry such as you?"

Again that wave of color. Then, with suddenly erect, proud head and flashing eyes, Hilda replied, "Lady Cunningham, Mr. Bramber is a gentleman; and is too noble, too honorable, to address me save as a lady. My very helpless, penniless dependence would in his eyes be my shield from insult."

Her ladyship had dropped rather back in her chair, her lips more set, her gaze riveted on the girl. She was evidently taken by surprise at this new spirit in the worm which until now she had held so easily beneath her heel.

When she spoke again she no longer did so in passion; she had measured her antagonist—this child, young, yet suddenly so resolute—and saw the uselessness.

"Well," she said, coldly; "he loves you—honorably."

"He has asked me to be his wife."

"And you?"

"Have"—with a quick radiance of expression—"consented."

"A good thing for you. But have you, in your wonderful affection, thought of him?"

"I do not understand your ladyship."

"The probable misery and trouble you will entail upon him by letting him, out of a sense of chivalry, wed a poor, penniless dependent?"

"Why am I dependent, Lady Cunningham?" broke in Hilda Horn. "Not by my own wish, but by your will. Have I not entreated to go forth into the world, to work, I cared not how hardly, that I might win independence and make my own future, instead of suffering the bondage I undergo beneath this roof? Why would you not permit me?"

Lady Cunningham rose, stiffly erect. Her face was set, but threatening, scornful.

"Why?" she answered. "That you should never mar the future of another as you would now Mr. Bramber's. That you should not bring disgrace on others that rests on yourself, as your father's daughter—a forger, a—"

"Stop!" And the girl, looking straight into my lady's eyes, said steadily, "Lady Cunningham who was my father?"

A shadow swift and fleeting swept over her ladyship's countenance; her lips turned paler; she stepped back.

"Why do you ask?" she demanded. "You know—"

"Many things. That he was, according to your account, your first husband's cousin. In that case, why am I not permitted to see my father's own kin? Why am I kept here a stranger to them?"

"Your father disgraced them. They would not own you. They cast you off."

"Stay, Lady Cunningham!" and Hilda raised her small hand. "I said I knew many things. I knew this. Your first husband had neither uncle nor aunt; therefore, he could have no cousin. You must have told me wrongly."

Her ladyship never moved. She only looked at her antagonist; yet there was a red, shifting light in the eyes beneath the half-drooped lashes, and a quiver of the mouth-muscles, that could Hilda Horne have perceived might have warned her to keep her knowledge to herself—certainly not to expose her hand to her enemy, for the contest was not equal.

But brave in the assurance of Jack Bramber's love, she no longer could, nor cared to, control the new spirit within her. She had ceased to be friendless and alone, and the bonds of her ladyship once revolted against, she desired to break them entirely. In her ignorance, she hoped by showing her knowledge to terrify the other into confession.

Lady Cunningham, after a space, slowly resumed her seat, a smile parting her lips.

"Really this is wonderful," she said.

"Then if not Edmund Horne's daughter, who do you think you are?"

"I do not know; I only have my suspicion."

"Am I permitted to learn what that points to? You think you are—?"

"I think very possibly I am," said Hilda, quietly, "Sir Herbert Cunningham's daughter."

Perhaps her ladyship expected that answer. Certainly, directly it was given she burst into, for her, a loud, derisive laugh.

"You Sir Herbert Cunningham's daughter! Sir Herbert, the mysterious!" she exclaimed. "Well, this would add to the mystery and romance, certainly. Girl," she added, sharply, "who put this absurdity into your head?"

"Fancies," responded Hilda. "If it be an absurdity, then, Lady Cunningham, I am just where I was before."

"And where will you continue to remain," was the answer, with a scornful shrug. "Had I known you would have flown at such high imaginings, never would I have had anything to do with you, nor shown you any charity. But I must pass to more serious matters. The other can wait until you can prove Sir Herbert had a daughter. You are aware that I am engaged to wed Lord Bramber?"

"I am."

"Then neither he nor I would countenance such a misalliance as his nephew, according to you, contemplates. I have agreed that Mr. Bramber shall yet remain his uncle's heir, but if he wed you he will be disinherited—cast adrift on the world, even as was Sir Herbert. Reflect. You say you love him. Will you marry and cause his ruin, or will you sacrifice yourself, and save him?"

Hilda paused, and then replied, "I must see Mr. Bramber before I decide."

"Impossible! You may write. There—write! Give him up, and you shall have your wish. You shall go abroad, and I will start you to win your independence."

"Your ladyship, what you have said about my ruining Mr. Bramber may be true. If so, be sure I should hesitate before doing that. Yet, I must see him again. I can consent to nothing until I have. There are circumstances which make it absolutely necessary."

Lady Cunningham looked at the girl through her long, drooping lashes, and her lips began to tighten with rage as she noted her calm, resolute demeanor. Then something like a sensation of fear stole over her.

What did she mean by "circumstances?" What was their nature?

"Do you intend to say that nothing will make you alter your mind?" she asked, quietly, after a pause of reflection. "That nothing will change you? That you will subject yourself and him to the pain of an interview?"

"Nothing."

"Then the matter is ended," remarked her ladyship, as if abandoning the subject. "John Bramber's ruin rests with you, so look to it. Only know this, and tell him, neither his uncle nor I will be disgraced by such a union. There! pass me my desk and stay here. I may want you."

Hilda, relieved at the cessation of the topic, readily obeyed. Lady Cunningham, for a quarter of an hour, occupied herself in sorting and docketing letters, as if preparatory for her marriage, which was to take place in about three weeks. One packet she tied with red tape, and put apart from the rest.

Her manner was composed. Had that thought of Jack Bramber's on hearing of James Stone's death, any foundation? If so, this was a wonderful woman, indeed. Suddenly she rose.

"Bring the light, Hilda," she said, in her usual tones. "I have got to look for some letters."

The girl took the lamp, and followed. They ascended the broad staircase, their blending shadows nodding and waving like warning gnomes on the oak wainscot of the walls as they went.

OUR RAILWAY INTERESTS.—The Committee appointed at the recent meeting of the Council, to consider the matter of the extension of the Midland R. R. to Omemee, will hold a meeting this (Thursday) evening.

PRESBYTERIAN RECORD.—The treasurer of the Point-aux-Trembles School acknowledges receipt of $12.50 from the St. Andrew's Sunday School. Peterborough Presbytery holds its next meeting at Port Hope, on September 12th.

THE TRENT VALLEY SURVEY.—We are pleased to learn, if the report be true, that the gentlemen engaged in the exploratory survey between Peterborough and Mud Lake have succeeded in finding an exceedingly advantageous location for the work, involving a much less expense than has been anticipated.

WATERWORKS.—A meeting is being held as we go to press, of the sub-committee on waterworks consisting of Messrs. W. H. Trout, J. E. Belcher, W. Hamilton, W. Clanton, A Rutherford, W. H. Moore, J. F Dennistoun and J. Stevenson, appointed on the 10th of June last. A report of the proceedings will be given next week.

USE THE celebrated "Lardine Oil" on your machinery. Best and cheapest oil in the market. Does not clog or gum. Has good heavy body and will not thin in summer. Sold in Peterborough by Messrs. McKee & Davidson; and in Lakefield by W. H. Casement. Try it and you will use no other. 25-52t

REWARD OF GOOD CONDUCT.—Chief Johnston, our veteran preserver of the peace, gallantly and gratuitously caught a runaway horse on George street last Friday, and in doing so was thrown to the ground, receiving a pretty severe bruising. He accomplished his plucky purpose, however, at considerable risk to himself.

POSTAL ACCOMMODATION.—Post Office Inspector Griffin has located three street letter boxes at Cobourg. If a sleepy old one-horse town like that can be thus accommodated, why cannot some of our friends, who have influence with the powers that be, prevail upon the Post Office Department to do something for accommodation of the loyal residents of Peterborough.

THEIR RIGHT BOWER.—The Review correspondent of the Mail announces that Dr. Kincaid has been, and still is, "one of the right bower" of their party. After making enquiry and ascertaining the meaning of this announcement, we want to know what right the Conservative party has to hold more than one right bower, and moreover, why they were so anxious to play all the knaves in the pack, before leading the "right bower?"

GONE FROM OUR GAZE.—The Port Hope Daily Times expired last Saturday. Though conscious up to the last gasp, we regret to say that its hopes of another and a better world were not as well defined as might be. We regret exceedingly to have to miss the Daily Times from our sanctum table, and to be compelled to reflect that "the good die young." While the Times is gone to that bourne whence no newspaper returns, such sickly sheets as the Daily Evening still struggle into a hebdominal existence.

POLICE COURT NOTES.—On Friday last David, Patrick and James Crowley were charged with assault on P. C. McGhee, the more serious charge of interfering with an officer in discharge of his duty not being pressed. They pleaded guilty and were fined $5 each and $2 costs, which was paid. David Crowley was also fined $3 and $2 costs for being drunk and disorderly.....A charge, brought from petty spite against a respected citizen by Lafayette Carpenter, was dismissed with costs on the party who laid the information.

ODD FELLOWS' EXCURSION.—The Odd Fellows of the district have arranged for a grand holiday treat to all who may choose to avail themselves of it, to be given on Thursday next. A monster gathering of the brotherhood of the Midland District is to be held on Thursday next at the Sturgeon Point Hotel, where, in addition to music and other attractions, the Toronto Opera Company will give the famous "Pirates of Penzance" for the benefit of the visitors. Excursion rates are offered on all the lines of approach to the rendezvous of the brotherhood, and those who choose to avail themselves of privilege could do no better than by joining the excursion.

DISGRACEFUL THEFT.—On Wednesday of last week, Mr. M. E. Sanderson having made a sale of the cheese of the Selwyn factory, the proceeds of which amounted to some $500, went to the factory for the purpose of paying over the money to Mr. Manning, the Treasurer. Mr. Manning not being present, he handed the money to Sam. Moore, who was cheese-maker for the company, with instructions to give it to Mr. Manning. The next morning Moore went about his work as usual, but after getting affairs under way, he left, saying to the helper that he had to get some washing done, and leaving him in charge. He then started for Lakefield and has not been heard of since, nor has the $500 with which he is now, no doubt, luxuriating in the land of Uncle Samuel. On Friday evening Mr. Manning and Mr. Bell met at the factory and wondered why the cheese-maker had been two days absent from work, when it struck Mr. Manning that possibly Mr. Sanderson might have entrusted him with the proceeds of the sale, as he found, unfortunately, had been the case. Search was made for the missing man, Moore, who belonged to Belleville, but up to this time no tidings or trace of him have been secured.

The Spanish Government are making arrangements to colonize Cuba with military men.

A number of pupils of the military school of St. Cyr, France, attended Mass on Count de Chambord's birthday, in consequence of which they were expelled from the school.

The Czar of Russia will shortly, it is said, be crowned at Moscow.

Canon Farrar or Dean Vaughan will probably succeeded the late Dean Stanley.

The remains of Dean Stanley were interred, Monday, in Westminster Abbey. Three thousand persons attended.

A COMPLIMENT.—The Whitby Chronicle says:—"Rev. Mr. Shaw, the popular Methodist Minister, who has lately been transferred to Peterborough, was in town on Friday, and looking remarkably well. Mr. Shaw gained hosts of friends amongst all classes during his residence in Whitby—the last being his second term—and carries with him the regrets and good wishes of all know him."

FREE OF CHARGE.—All persons suffering from Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Loss of Voice, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs, are requested to call at Taylor & Macdonald's Drug Store and get a trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, free of charge, which will convince them of its wonderful merits and show what a regular dollar-size bottle will do. Call early.

PREPARED FOR SPRING.—After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, and all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopessa, from Brazil, acts as a gentle purgative. It is just introduced into this country. The remarkable results of a few doses are most suprising. Ask J. D. Tully or T. Ruston for a 10 cent sample, and try Zopessa, the most powerful remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Biliousness ever introduced in this country. 44-1y

FLOGGING IN SCHOOL.—Yesterday's Globe says:—About the latter part of April last a pupil, a son of Mr. Wm. Sargent, in the Public School in Norwood, Ont., alleged to have been guilty of insubordination, was severely whipped by the master and suspended. The flogging was so unduly severe in the estimation of the boys indignant father, who laid a complaint against the teacher and had him brought before a Magistrate's Court where, on the 4th of May, he was convicted and sentenced and sentenced to pay a nominal fine. The members of the School Board upheld the teacher throughout the whole affair, and refused to allow the boy to again attend the school until he had apologized to both the teacher and the Board. Mr. Sargent didn't see his way clear to allow his son to apologise. He came to Toronto recently and had an interview with the Minister of Education about the matter. He now announces his intention of bringing a suit against the trustees for damages sustained by his son bodily and by himself mentally.

ASPHODEL NEWS.

SUDDEN DEATH OF AN OLD RESIDENT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

An old resident of Asphodel, Mr. John Gebbie, died very suddenly at his residence on Friday last. Up to Tuesday evening he had been in his usual health; but then complained of pains in his stomach. Not thinking the case serious, no immediate steps were taken to heal his ailment; but on Wednesday morning it was found necessary to call in a physician, who pronounced the disease a serious one—inflammation of the bowels—and held out no hopes of his recovery. A second physician was called in, and both doctors did all they could to relieve their patient; but all their efforts were vain, as he died about seven o'clock on Friday morning. If appears that the deceased had been working hard in the harvest field on Tuesday, and being heated, had drank copiously of ice-water, which speedily brought on the disease which caused his sudden and untimely death. He was held in much esteem in the Township, as was evinced by the very large attendance at his funeral, which took place on Saturday afternoon, last. He leaves a wife and a large grown-up family in good circumstances.

There are 17,000 railroad engines in the United States, and each one averages fifty toots per day. Where does these 850,000 toots go? They go to make the toot ensemble.

THE IRISH TROUBLE.

Passing of the Land Bill—Sweeping Majority for the Government—The Bill in the House of Lords.

The Grand Jury have found a true bill against McGrath and McKevitt for attempting to blow up the Liverpool Town Hall.

W. H. Rogers, of Fulton street, a mechanic of New York, whose house manufactured the Trinity clock, thinks he made six of the explosive machines recently captured in Liverpool. Two Irishmen bought six-inch machines from him several weeks ago.

A car-driver named Swanton has been fired at near Ballydehob and mortally wounded. His hat was riddled with bullets. Swanton obtained an ejectment against a labourer. The strike of labourers is extending in the county of Cork.

PRESTON, Ill., July 31.—Crowe no longer denies, but proclaims, his manufacture of the infernal machines discovered at Liverpool. More of them, he says, are making at Peoria, and believing themselves not liable to prosecution, they will continue the work until England does justice to Ireland.

The Land Bill passed its third reading in the House of Commons on Friday, and was read a first time in the Lords. It is expected to pass through Committee of the Lords next week. The vote in the Commons stood 220 to 14; the 14 being all Conservatives. Parnell and some of his supporters abstained from voting.

When the result of the division on the Land Bill in the House of Commons was announced the House broke into loud cheers, many members in their excitement standing up and waving their hats. A moment later there was a general rush of members from the House, and as they departed cheering the House presented the appearance of a school breaking up for the holidays.

The last hours of the Bill in the House were stormy. Healey declared that the Irish people had no cause to be grateful to Mr. Gladstone, for they owed the Bill to the Land League organization. This produced considerable disorder and confusion. Joseph Cowen also declared that the credit of passing the Bill belonged to the land agitation, pointing out that agrarian legislation had no place in the Ministerial programme until the land agitation compelled the Ministers to deal with land reform. During his speech it was almost impossible to hear him owing to the howling from the Liberal benches. The angry spirit was increased by a charge made by Richard Power that Mr. Gladstone had caused the exclusion of the Parnellite members from the deputation to urge the views of the Irish people in reference to land reform early in the session. Mr. Gladstone denied emphatically that there was any foundation for the statement. This tended to calm the excitement and soon afterwards the division was allowed to be taken. On entering the House from the division lobby Mr. Gladstone received an enthusiastic ovation from the Liberals and a portion of the Irish members. For several minutes after he had resumed his seat the house rang with cheers repeated again and again.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—There was a numerous attendance in the House of Lords today for the second reading of the Land Bill. All the leaders were present, except Earl Granville, who is indisposed. Lord Carlingford moved the second reading in a long speech. Lord Salisbury severely criticised the Land Bill. He said that according to the Bill a landlord could not even select a site for colleges. He agrees to the Bill under the circumstances, but will stand by amendments for the insertion of a clear definition of fair rent, for exemption of estates managed on the English system, and tenancies of over £100 yearly from the operation of the Bill, and for the maintenance of the inviolability of cases. The Marquis of Lansdowne (Liberal) said he regarded the Bill as an attempt to quell the agrarian aggression by the indiscriminate concession of proprietary rights. The Marquis of Waterford (Conservative) said the Bill was one of confiscation without compensation. Lord Lytton said the Bill was a revolutionary concession to threats of rebellion, and a step onward in the course that must end either in dissolution of the connection between England and Ireland or civil war. Earl Spencer, Lord President of the Council, defended the Bill. The Duke of Argyll moved the adjournment of the debate, and the House adjourned.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The Duke of Argyle particularly attacked the provision enabling the Land Court to interfere in leases. If the effect of the bill was to retain a poor class of tenants in the holdings it would only perpetuate the difficulties in Ireland. No people could prosper who, like many Irish tenants, had been pleading poverty as an excuse for fraud.

Lord Selborne, Lord High Chancellor, said the Land bill was fenced in with such safeguards as would prevent and undue interference with the rights of poverty. The bill would strengthen the moral power of the Government for the enforcement of law.

Lord Cairns (Conservative) said the fact that the landlords are suffering by the present disturbed state of affairs was due to the Government's abnegation of its primary function.

Earl Kimberley having replied to Lord Cairns, the second reading of the bill was adopted without a division, and Kimberly expressed his satisfaction at the general tone of the debate, showing the unanimous opinion that legislation is necessary upon the lines of the Government policy.

Lord Denman, Liberal, announced he would move the rejection of the bill on going into committee, which was fixed for Thursday next.

A Constantinople despatch says the Porte is preparing a note pointing to the dangers to which the Turkish provinces are exposed, and to the necessity of taking immediate steps for guaranteeing order. A despatch from Durban mentions as the principal terms of the Boer Convention the right of passage of British troops through the Transvaal, the Suzerain's control of foreign relations, the abolition of slavery, and the maintenance of religious liberty. A Berlin despatch says there are demonstrations every night against the Jews at Hammerstein, West Prussia. Further excesses are feared. The gendarmes are powerless. There were similar riots at Baerwold, Pomerania, on Tuesday, when a quantity of Jewish property was destroyed. Thirty houses of the Jews at Berispol and Birinan, in the Government of Poltar, have been destroyed. The troops fired on the rioters, killing four and wounding two.

An ecclesiastical quarrel has occurred at Glasgow growing out of the long standing quarrel between the orthodox and liberal wings of the Free Church. The standard of church confession and faith and the Westminster catechism are the subjects in dispute. The liberals wish them remodelled so as to do away with the doctrines of infant damnation, election, predestination and verbal inspiration of the Bible, while the orthodox factions hold that these doctrines should be preserved. At a synod of ministers of the Free Church the discussion rose to such a pitch that the Rev. Macaskaill seized MacArthur by the throat and almost strangled him. The combatants were separated with great difficulty.

One of the latest novelties in the way of attempted suicide is reported from France. A workman, after a desperate quarrel, drove a long poniard into his head with the aid of a hammer. Unfortunately, however, his well-intentioned efforts proved a failure. Instead of dropping dead, as he ought to have done, he found himself apparently none the worse. But he could not draw the poniard out, and several doctors were equally unable to extract the weapon. "The man," we read, "was ultimately taken to a workshop in the neighborhood, accompanied by the medical gentlemen, and here he was seated on the floor, held down in a sitting posture by two persons, whilst mechanical force was used to draw the weapon from the skull." All of which is wondrous, if true.

David Hamilton (colored) was stabbed in the abdomen by his wife at Westfield Mass., yesterday morning, and will probably die. Hamilton went to Westfield a few months ago and has been before the police court for adultery and assault. His wife has not been living with him until last week. On Thursday night he had two other colored women and a man at the house and had a dance, and liquor flowed freely until the whole gang were pretty drunk. At 3 yesterday morning Hamilton attacked his wife, knocked her down, choked her and then ran into the street, and after driving the others out with blows he followed his wife and struck her on the back of the head. She had a dirk in her hand and drove it into his abdomen. He got back to the house and Medical Examiner Waterman was summoned, who found the bowels gushing out and the man vomiting blood In Hamilton's pocket were found two ugly razors. All the parties present were taken into custody.

CHEAP WOOL.

(Bobcaygeon Independent.)

The N. P. was to be a great boon to the farmers. They were told that if they voted for the N. P. they would have higher prices for their produce,—and they believed what was told them. They are now gradually awakening to a true sense of the position, and are beginning to perceive how they have been deluded and swindled. Take the case of wool, formerly wool was in active demand at prices varying from 30c. to 60c. These price ruled through a period of more than twenty years, until about two years since. Then the price dropped to 25c, and even at that price the demand was slack. How about the P. N? To-day wool is selling at 22c. How do National Policy and Protective Tariff farmers like 22c. for wool, at a time when everything they buy is dearer than it ever was before. This is the time for preserving berries. Sugar is in demand. Let every farmer's wife, when she goes to the store for sugar, remember that it is the N. P. which has caused sugar to be dearer, just at a time when wool is selling for 22c. National Policy and Protection means that the farmer has to pay increased taxes in order that merchants and manufactures may have higher profits. Sugar and wool. The farmers has to sell cheap and buy dear. In September, 1879, the Canadian farmers was fooled. That is quite clear.

It seems that there was no general Order-in-Council passed by the government in regard to Civil Service members occupying civic representative positions, but that the Order affecting Ald. Lewis and Ald. Scott is merely a departmental one, adopted by the Minister of Public Works.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, AUG. 4, 1881.

Census of 1881.

The figures are given of the general statement of the population of the Dominion, by Provinces, as ascertained by the recent Census, showing the following result:

Province.	1871.	1881
Ontario	1,620,851	1,912,460
Quebec	1,191,516	1,358,469
New Brunswick	285,594	321,129
Nova Scotia	387,800	440,595
P. E. Island	94,021	107,781
Manitoba	11,966	49,509
British Columbia & N. W. Territories	73,789	109,699
	3,670,435	4,300,933
		3,670,435
Total increase		630,498

The following is a comparative statement of the increase by Provinces during the past two decades:—

Province.	1861.	1871.	1881.
Ont	1,396,091	1,620,851	1,913,460
Que	1,111,566	1,191,516	1,358,469
N. B	252,047	285,594	321,129
N. S	330,857	387,800	440,595
	3,090,561	3,485,761	4,033,643

These figures show that in spite of the enormous expenses incurred for immigration purposes, not only by the Dominion but by the various Provinces, and notwithstanding the temptation held out for settlement in the North West Territory, the country has barely maintained the natural rate of increase of the population. By referring to the comparative statement of the arrivals of immigrants, reported as settlers in Canada, furnished in the last report of the Minister of Agriculture, we find that since the last Census there have been 256,389 settlers, not including those who have settled since June 30, 1880, who must have added a large number to the present census owing to the field of employment opened up by the Canada Pacific Railway, and the increase of settlement in the North-West. Taking out, however, only these 256,389 souls from the reported increase in population, we have, as natural increase, 424,109. The percentage of increase as compared with the decade, 1861-71, was, in Ontario, 1-95%; Quebec, 6-83% greater; while the decrease in the rate of increase in New Brunswick was 87% and Nova Scotia 3-60%. The extensive falling off in the rate of increase of population in Nova Scotia is a fitting commentary on the reckless extravagance of Sir Charles Tupper's boastings of the "progress" of his Province under the National Policy The apparent impetus to the multiplication of population in Quebec, is explained by the fact that the census manipulators, the Department being almost wholly French Canadian in its personnel and morale, to obtain figures showing Quebec to be entitled to an increase of representation under the arrangement of the Confederation Act, which provides for a readjustment of Provincial representation on the basis laid down at Confederation. Thousands who have emigrated to and are living in the United States were counted, by the ingenious method of taking the numbers of the families, whether the members were still residents of Canada or citizens of the United States. The design of this unfair procedure failed in accomplishment, and the representation, as readjusted, will stand as follows:—

Province.	Present Representation.	Future Representation.
Ontario	88	92
Quebec	65	65
New Brunswick	16	15
Nova Scotia	21	21
P. E. Island	6	6
Manitoba	4	4
British Columbia	6	6
	206	209

New Brunswick loses one member, and no doubt in the readjustment which must take place Sir John will resort to his time-honored "gerrymandering" trick, and will deprive the Opposition of one seat thereby. In the same way, no doubt, he will take good care that the four additional seats in Ontario will be arranged so as to give the greatest possible assurance of an addition to the number of his followers. It will be consoling to know that if we continue the rate of increase of the last ten years, we will have reached the present population of the United States in the year 1933: which may we be there to see.

The Opposition Programme.

At the recent meeting of the Conservatives of the West Riding we observe by the [illegible] that a resolution was discussed during the evening without discussion or dissent, viz:

"Moved by J. Carnegie, seconded by Angus Williams,—That, in the opinion of this meeting, no candidate will be acceptable to the Conservatives of the West Riding of the County of Peterborough in the Legislative Assembly of this Province unless he is prepared to [illegible] to support by his vote and influence the following measures, viz:—

1. A substantial reduction in the number of representatives in the said Legislative Assembly.
2. A curtailment of the patronage of the Ontario Government, as indefensibly increased during the last and present Parliaments.
3. The abolishment of the Upper Canada College.
4. Unless he is prepared to give an unwavering opposition to ex post facto legislation of all kinds

As the meeting subsequently accepted a candidate who distinctly repudiated and refused to be bound by these resolutions, they are of no particular moment as connected with the present position of our local politics; but as the author of them lays them down as a platform for a party, and as he is desirous to be such himself to the Legislature to carry them out, they may be worth a brief dissection, in the light of Mr. Carnegie's explanations, as presented by himself to his readers. He said:—"With regard to the first that we "are too much governed, and with regard "to the second that he disapproved of "the Ontario Government taking all the "patronage in their hands and making "all the appointments from pound-"keepers up. With regard to the third, "he believed that the greater portion of "country was in favor of its abolition. "and our own County Council at its last "sitting had passed a resolution favoring "its abolishment. As to the fourth, ex "posto facto legislation, he inquired how "those persons who owned land to be "traversed by the extension of the Mid-"land Railway to Omemee would like to "be compelled to accept any price for "their land put on it by the Ontario "Government and Mr. Cox? And yet that "would only be doing what was done last "session in the case of McLaren vs. "Caldwell. He submitted the resolution "as an important one with reference to "the campaign which was about to com-"mence." Their "importance" in the present campaign has been exemplified by their not very dignified retirement from the field. We will discuss them seriatim on their merits.

Now, as to the first resolution, demanding a substantial reduction in the number of legislators, that is a thorough Tory proposition,—reduction of the power of the people, and limitation of the franchise. Experience has taught us that in order to afford fair representation to all classes and interests, a legislative body should have, as nearly as possible, about one member for every eighteen thousand of the population. With a "substantial reduction" in the Local House, as proposed, the County of Peterborough might as well, according to the statement made in the Review, be represented by one as two members. What would result? Inevitably one party or another in this county must of necessity be completely disfranchised and deprived of its proper and present representation and influence in the government of the Province. No one would pretend to say that the numbers of the House could be reduced beyond eight or ten members under any circumstances, and for what object? Ten fewer members would make a reduction in the expenses of only a paltry $6,000. The cost of legislation, of departments work, of executive management, would remain the same whether the House numbered 88 members or 78. The game is not worth the candle; and moreover, involving a restriction of popular influence, a deprival of minority privileges, and a dangerous weakening of the check maintained by the Legislature upon the Executive, would never be tolerated by a right-thinking people.

Now, as to clause two of this pronunciamento, there can be no question that the patronage covers only such ground as is essential in the interests of the people. Mr. Carnegie expresses his supreme disapproval of the Ontario Government "tak-"ing all the appointments in their hands "and making all the appointments from "pound-keepers up!" A proposition based upon so deliberate a misrepresentation, not to use a harsher word, will hardly carry much weight with it in the minds of reflecting people. The only real objection the Review has ever made is that the Government have assumed control of appointments connected with the Courts, and the license law. Does Mr. Carnegie want to go back to the time when nepotism, incompetence and injury to the interests of the people, pervaded these offices for the very reason that the Judges and Sheriffs had power to appoint their needy friends to fill responsible offices, and almost invariably found pleaty of impecunious relations for the places? When people recall what our Division Courts and other machinery used to be, and what it is under the wholesome effect of Government supervision, they will hardly take much stock in the second plank of Mr. Carnegie's platform, if we may call such a crazy political structure by the name. The Government supervision of the License Act, is by common consent, not only proper, but necessary, and is hardly worth space for discussion, as everybody, but this pseudo "Reformer," agrees on this point.

The abolition of Upper Canada College is demanded by Mr. Carnegie, and in this he takes up an open question in the Legislature, at second hand from his opponents. It is a question upon which opinions are divided, and most certainly neither party will adopt it as a party cry till the result of the late changes introduced by the Minister of Education is seen. Mr. Carnegie in espousing unreasoning hostility to its existence, without, so far as we can see, any consideration whatever, lays violent hands upon one of the time-honored appurtenants of the [illegible] which has produced such wrangling in his adherents, and if he is contemplating a severance of his old associations,—we hope he will take the advice, according to a western exchange, of Satan to the man from Chicago—and get up a little party of his own.

Fourth and last, Mr. C. demands "un-"wavering opposition to ex post facto "legislation." No doubt the bare insinuation that "Mowat's misdeeds" include legislation with such a dangerous name, will at once awaken the husbandman and horny-handed son of toil to a sense of the full enormity of Mr. Mowat's crimes. In his explanation, vouchsafed to the presumed ignorance of his party, the Review says:—"He enquired how persons who owned land "to be traversed by extension of the Midland "Railway to Omemee, would like to be com-"pelled to accept any price for their land "PUT ON IT BY THE ONTARIO GOVERN-"MENT AND MR. COX." Mark the sly cunning and the malicious hypocrisy which crops out from the crafty allusion to Mr. Cox contained in a suggestion based on an impossible state of affairs! And he goes on to explain, "yet that would "only be doing what was done last session "in the case of McLaren v. Caldwell," stating what is most absolutely and unqualifiedly untrue. We fear that we have in past times done the wicked partner of our truly good friend an injustice, in ascribing all the iniquity of the Review to his baneful influence upon an unsophisticated, innocent and guileless nature. The absence of the wicked partner at this juncture brings the saddening reflection that perhaps the truly good man is but another exemplification of the fact that things are not always what they seem. No such legislation was ever passed or proposed in the Legislature, and no Government, and least of all that of Mr. Mowat, could for a moment contemplate such a thing. The statement carries absurdity on the face of it, and has not even the merit of being calculated to deceive the most obtuse.

These are the four great planks of Mr. Carnegie's raft, on which he sets out to board the ship of state, and revolutionize the administration of the government. We don't wonder that the Conservative Convention dropped them with an easy alacrity which indicated that they didn't consider them of much account, one way or another.

OPINIONS OF MR. BLAKE.

Some of the Tory organs down by the sea furnish amusing reading just now. Mr. Blake's visit has completely upset them. They hardly know what to say about the great Liberal leader. Their vocabulary of slang, vituperation and falsehood is found to be utterly inadequate to meet the requirements of their distressing condition. Pity their sorrows! The St. John Sun, described by the Ottawa Free Press as "one of the bitterest, most subservient, and most unscrupulous party hacks in the Dominion," is the organ of the Finance Minister–the "Toronto Mail" of New Brunswick—and as might be expected, pulls the bow oar in the performance. It has attacked Mr. Blake, the Free Press says,—

"With a violence and malignity which, to the credit of Canadian journalism be it said, is seldom equalled even by the most disreputable sheets. It invaded his private dinner table and manufactured stories designed to cast ridicule upon him. It misrepresented and garbled his utterances. It assailed his private character. It held him up to the public as a political villian of the deepest dye. It re-hashed all the 'facts' given in the Mail's notorious four column rib-stabbing article. It stated that during Mr. Blake's reception in St. John, passers along the street were 'collared' and dragged in to partake of rum, gin, whiskey and brandy, when none of these beverages were on the sideboard at the reception, and when the Sun knew that no one was even asked to be present, much less 'collared and dragged in.'

Turning now to the St. John correspondence of the Conservative Star of Chatham, N. B. we find a totally different and—as every man in Ontario, Conservative or Reformer, will admit—a more correct description of the honorable gentleman. The correspondent says of Mr. Blake's speech in St. John:

"On coming forward Mr. Blake was greeted with an ovation which did credit to the good nature of the people of St. John. Possessing a commanding appearance and a broad honest face, coupled with a certain air of conscious merit, he had no difficulty in ingratiating himself into the good opinion of the assemblage. At flattery Mr. Blake is an adept and his hits were ever delivered in such a pleasant tone and were couched in such delicate language that he found applauders even among his opponents and friends in the victims of his quiet satire. He seemed to understand that his mission was to convince and not to persuade, and his figures of speech were those of intuition rather than emphasis. In stating his case, it was clearly apparent either that he really believed what he said or else he is the most adroit actor that has ever visited St. John for some time. His whole speech was so entirely different from anything that we have ever heard here that it excited no little comment—engrossing attention without being declamatory and enlisting sympathy without being sensational. It was devoid of the bitter sarcasm which pervaded the harangues of Cartwright or the dry disquisitions of Mackenzie, and unlike them, too, the speaker, while his reasoning seemed labored, was not afraid to view the abstract truth accompanied by all the incidental or collateral circumstances that modify it. Whether his political ethics may or may not coincide with our own we feel pleasure in admitting his distinguished abilities as an orator and we are happy in honoring a politician who, even in the heat of argument, never once forgot his dignity as a gentleman. The conclusion of his speech was greeted with enthusiastic cheers—the Liberals feeling proud in having such an able man to champion their cause, the Conservatives regretting that, at least to their way of thinking, such rare talents were mis-directed, and everyone wishing that Canada had more Edward Blakes to brighten the pages of her constitutional history.

THE RAILWAY QUESTION.

Another Meeting and Another Committee.

Meeting of Councillors and Citizens —Proposal to be made to the Company.

On Thursday evening last a meeting of Councillors and citizens was held, the Mayor presiding, at which there were present, among others, Councillors Kelly, Chamberlain, McNaughton, Rutherford, Hatton and Richardson, and Messrs. Stevenson, Dennistoun, Hilliard, M.P., Wm. Hamilton, Kingdon, Wm. Cluxton, Jas. Whyte, etc.

The Mayor briefly rehearsed what had been done at the previous meeting of the Council with Mr. Cox, the latter's proposal, and the resolution passed by the Council in reference thereto.

Mr. Cox was called upon and said the case had been exactly put before them by the Mayor, and it was not necessary for him to repeat what he had previously stated as to the advantages of the extension. As to the workshops, he was not in any different position, but he felt certain that the Board would not make a proposition of that kind. If the town were willing to give aid to the Company on that condition and on no other, then it would be for the Board to consider if they would be warranted in entertaining such an offer; but they could not make the proposition. He himself thought, as a ratepayer, that if they were to cancel the debt together on condition of getting the workshops it would be a good investment for the town. With the line extending as it now is, and as it must in the future, the location of the workshops would be a matter of great importance. They could give them the offer and if the company accepted it, well and good; if not, it would only be an expenditure of about $80.

The Mayor enquired what would be the cost of the buildings.

Mr. Cox said he had not made an estimate, but it would certainly not be less than $25,000. They had an insurance on their property at Port Hope of $100,000, and they were adding to the shops now.

The Mayor asked what amount of business was done.

Mr. Cox said in addition to the mechanics the train men had to reside where the shops were. There were at present 16 trains stopping over at Port Hope every day, and each train would have at least 4 men. The road would be extended no matter by whom it was done, and the business will become larger and of more importance, and if they could ensure the building of the shops here permanently it would be a great thing for the town. He thought the Company was entitled to some consideration at the hands of the town. He thought a junction would be made here with the Ontario and Quebec Railway, which would make this an important railway point. Though the Victoria Railway had passed into other hands the management were disposed to act in harmony with the Midland, and he had no doubt if this connection to Omemee were made he would have no difficulty in arranging trains from Haliburton to Peterborough and return every day, and Sundays. The Midland Railway would no without doubt connect with the line to be extended to Sault Ste. Marie. If they were disposed to grant this bonus he would be glad, and if they were he would be glad to have them say so and let the matter take its course.

Mr. Richardson—Would not the line to Omemee be built whether we give the bonus or not?

Mr. Cox was not prepared to say. With the bonus it would be built; without it might or it might not. He thought it was uncertain.

Mr. Richardson desired to hear from Mr. Dennistoun.

Mr. Rutherford said he would like to hear from Messrs. Stevenson and Cluxton, who were both very large property-holders.

Mr. Stevenson said he knew very little about it. He might say that he should like it an excellent scheme if it could be carried out, and this made the headquarters for the workshops. He had been short time ago talking with a prominent gentleman from Port Hope, who said it was looked upon there as a foregone conclusion that the shops would be taken to Peterborough. He supposed Mr. Cox would naturally like to get the shops here, but he had to be governed by his Board. Apart from that there was a good deal to be said in favor of opening up this connection.

Mr. Cox said it would open up communication with a grand section of country.

Mr. Stevenson said if we had the shops it would afford a large amount of business to the merchants. Some of the men at Port Hope did business to the extent of $8,000 a year with the shops. That was what Port Hope had done for the bonus, the money came out of the Municipal Loan Fund, and the Province had to pay it. Port Hope did nothing for the road whatever, while Peterborough furnished the freight that gives the road a value. He thought it would be just as well, however, to make the bonus direct instead of releasing the debt, which was practically good. The railway debt was set aside by Act of Parliament to pay the Municipal Loan Fund debt, and could not be interfered with except by an Act.

Mr. Richardson implored Mr. Dennistoun to give his views.

The Mayor would like to hear from Mr. Cluxton, but that gentleman said he would prefer to hear the views of others, as he had not been at the first meeting.

The Mayor called on Mr. Menzies, who said he was there to listen.

Mr. McNaughton said Mr. Menzies was a large ratepayer, and he would like to hear from him, but Mr. Menzies was dumb.

Mr. Cox said the way to look at it was, would we be willing to give anything for a road from here to Georgian Bay? The way things stood now the line passed us at a distance of fifteen miles, and trade that might be brought here now goes in another direction. They should look at it on its merits as a simple matter of dollars and cents. He believed it would be a decided advantage to the town to get the line constructed. They could pass a By-Law requiring the shops to be located here, and leave it optional with the Company to accept it. He thought however $40,000 would not tempt them. They had expended $11,000 in building at Port Hope in the last 18 months.

Mr. Richardson suggested $50,000.

Mr. McNaughton asked where they got their flat cars built now.

Mr. Cox said a good many of them were built at Port Hope.

Mr. Hilliard did not see much advantage to be derived from the line to Omemee. He thought the trade of the back country was now pretty well settled at Lindsay. Altogether he was in favor of giving the road such a sum of money as would induce them to remove their shops to Peterborough. If $40,000 would not do it, he would give more. It was more important to get the shops here than anything else. The people of Peterborough certainly owed Mr. Cox a great deal of gratitude for his efforts to promote their interests. The increase of population would enlarge the business of the town.

Mr. D. G. Hatton had not given the matter consideration, but he agreed with Mr. Hilliard. He had always advocated Peterborough being placed on the main line, but to pay $40,000 for a line going past our doors, he didn't think the people would do it. He thought the better plan would be to make a proposition to grant aid on condition that the road to Omemee is constructed and the workshops located here, making this the headquarters. This $40,000 would cost them $2,400 a year, and the question was what would they get in return? If they got the expenditure of the shops and the earnings of the workmen in the town, he thought it would be a great advantage, and personally he would like to see it done.

Mr. Stevenson said it would be better to give the money direct. The Company paid 6 per cent. on the debt, while they could borrow money at 5 per cent. He thought the offer should be made to strengthen Mr. Cox's hands.

Mr. Cox said there were a great many things of which he was not in a position to speak, which convinced him that it was desirable for the town to give this money. Knowing what he now knew, he felt the advantage it would be to the town to make a liberal proposition.

The Mayor asked if it was probable the offer would be accepted.

Mr. Cox said he could not make any such proposition to the Company. Even if the town offered the bonus for the shops he knew that it would meet with violent opposition of the Board.

Mr. Paterson thought it would take a great deal more than $40,000 to get the shops here. Port Hope might be equally willing to give $40,000 to keep them there.

Mr. Hatton said Port Hope would have to get the money first before they could offer it.

Mr. Toole said people wanted to know what they were to get in return for this expenditure if they made it. Could they get the monthly pay list of the shops now in operation? From that they could form a good idea of the increased circulation that would be brought about by the removal of the shops. The road lost some trade from the east by the opening of the Grand Junction, and it would be a compensation if we could by this link open up a gateway to the trade westward. The road was, he thought, entitled to fair consideration. They had spent $12,000 on station buildings here, and he was satisfied Mr. Cox's estimate of the cost of the machine shops was altogether too low; $30,000 would not build the shops, round house, etc. If we could secure the shops, with the present staff even, it would make an increased trade of $150 a day, and there would be at least twenty families requiring houses and paying rents and taxes. He would make the grant conditional on the shops being moved and maintained here. They could grant Spaulding's Bay to the Company, on condition they filled it up. It was no use to the town in its present condition. He thought the town could not spend $40,000 or $50,000 to better advantage than by securing those workshops.

Mr. Cox said Mr. Toole's estimate of the number of houses that would be occupied was altogether too low. Even at present the Midland Railway men occupied 27 houses in town that he knew of personally.

The Mayor asked what the pay list would be?

Mr. Cox said it seldom or never came under $16,000 a month. Last month it was $18,600. Then there was a large amount of material which necessitated additional outlay. As it was now they spent a great deal of money in the town. He thought it would be to the advantage of the town to pursue a liberal policy towards the railway. The railway always treated the interests of the town with consideration. In the matter of the paper mill spoken of, they had offered Toronto freight rates as an inducement to get the enterprise located here. In fact the interests of the town and the railway were tied up in a good many ways.

Mr. Rutherford said as a ratepayer he was glad to see the manner in which this matter was discussed. He thought even if the road and the shops cost them $80,000 they would be greatly the gainers if they could get them. He thought this line was something they had wanted badly for some time past. There was a large trade now centered at Lindsay which would find a better market here if the line were built. Goods were sold as cheap here as at Toronto or Belleville. A short time ago they had voted a bonus of $150,000 to a road which only offered them a third of its workshops, and he was sure these were of much more importance. Peterborough had been fortunate in regard to not having to pay its bonuses after granting them. He thought a by-law could be carried without difficulty, but the feeling was not for a bonus to the road independent of the workshops. If they got the workshops it would be the best spent money Peterborough has ever voted.

Mr. Carnegie said his ideas were not altogether clear. He thought something should be done to secure the missing link, but did not think it worth $40,000. Like others, his ideas on railway matters had changed, and he now thought it was fortunate the town had not had to pay some of the bonuses he had at one time advocated.

Mr. Hilliard said we should come right to the point and tell Mr. Cox what we want. He thought we should offer him such inducements as would get the workshops. The road, he was satisfied, would be built, bonus or no bonus.

Mr. Cox said one very important feature had been overlooked. The distance to Belleville by the Grand Junction was 51 miles, and by Port Hope 53 miles, or only a difference of two miles. They could carry the traffic by way of Port Hope almost as well as by Belleville. Whether the Board would accept the offer spoken of he could not tell. It would depend on the local feeling of the Board, but he believed it really essential that his hand should be strengthened, and that the company should receive some encouragement from the town. If the bonus were not granted, of course he would do what he could for the town in his own interests, but he was not so sure that he could do much. He had been urging this matter on the Board for two years, but till recently he got very little encouragement. They seemed to care nothing about it. Even if the bonus were offered he would meet strong opposition in getting the Board to accept it. He was satisfied the road would ensure a large business from Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Bobcaygeon and Midland.

Mr. Hilliard thought the Grand Trunk would ultimately have to build the road as a freight road—that they would lower the grades and straighten the curves, and use it in preference to the heavy grades of the Midland.

Mr. Cox said the heaviest grade on the Midland was going north. It was really a question of no moment whatever.

Mr. Richardson said there was no use submitting a by-law without the car-works condition. He beseeched Mr. Dennistoun to favor them with his opinion.

The Mayor asked if they would give security for permanent maintenance of the shops?

Mr. Cox said he could have nothing to say about it. They could fix it up to suit themselves. He was sure it was not worth while to offer less than $50,000 if they wanted the Board to entertain any proposition to remove the shops.

Mr. McNaughton knew the feeling among the ratepayers and there was no use submitting a By-law for the road alone.

Mr. Rutherford suggested a select committee be appointed to make enquiries as to the financial benefits to be derived from the shops if they could be secured.

Mr. Chamberlain—What will be the cost of submitting a by-law?

Mr. Rutherford—$100.

The Mayor—From $80 to $100.

Mr. Richardson again besought Mr. Dennistoun to illuminate the meeting with his opinion, which he thought would have great weight.

Mr. Dennistoun, in finally gratifying Mr. Richardson, said he, (Mr. R.,) had surely not read the EXAMINER this week, or he would conclude he, (Mr. D.,) would possess a great deal of cheek to stand up and offer any opinion on any subject after having been described, as he alleged, as bankrupt in brains, pocket and principle.

Mr. Richardson said he never read the EXAMINER.

Mr. Dennistoun thought what they now wanted was detailed information, presented in such a way as would enable them to come to a conclusion. They had now held two or three meetings and had made substantial progress. He thought the road would be built any way, but if they could secure the workshops it would be an advantage. Every man who comes here to occupy a house becomes a ratepayer and helps to bear the burden of running the municipal machine. The city of Kingston, which was not a much larger place than this, was offering $200,000 with other advantages to the Grand Trunk to get them to move their workshops from Point St. Charles. If it was worth while to give such a large sum, Peterborough could afford to give something for shops, which would do all the work for the Midland and Grand Junction Railway. He presumed they could go to the Secretary of the Midland and get all the information they required as to pay lists and other expenditure. Mr. Cox, he thought, would have no objection to that?

Mr. Cox—Not in the least.

Mr. Dennistoun—And on that information they could base the amount to be granted. They might do well to offer say, $1,000 a mile for the construction of the road, and the balance of such sum as they might decide upon, on the workshops being located here.

Mr. Richardson then moved that the following be a committee to procure information as to the pay lists, etc., to report to a future meeting: Messrs. Smith, Dennistoun, Carnegie, Hilliard, Cluxton and Toole.

The meeting reduced the number to four, consisting of Mr. Stevenson, Mr. Cluxton, Mr. Carnegie and Mr. Lundy, who was added on motion.

The Committee held a meeting on Friday evening and decided to frame a by-law for submission to the freeholders of the town at an early date.

ENNISMORE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The adjourned meeting to consider the advisability of establishing a cheese factory in this township, was held in Donohue's hotel, on Saturday evening, Daniel Costello in the chair. Messrs. Robertson, of the township of Smith, and Reid, of Emily, being in attendance, stated the conditions and principles on which they could manufacture first-class cheese. After several speakers belonging to Emily and Ennismore had expressed their views on the industry of cheese making, the vote being taken by those who had signed their names as joining the enterprise, Mr. Reid, of Emily, was selected. A committee has been appointed to push forward the details, when in the spring of 1882, there is no doubt, we will have a large and prosperous cheese manufactory flourishing in our midst.

Prescott, Ont., May 3rd, 1881.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & CO., MONTREAL:
Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Yours etc.,
GEO. LABATT,
Manager P. B. & M. Co.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents.—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you predicted for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our horse we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, AUG'T. 4, 1881.

The Ontario Press.

We augur much good from the visit of the Canadian Press Association to Peterborough, and the favorable opinion which we know they took away with them of the place, its advantages, position, prospects, and people. The result will be to make the town more widely known, and in a better light than heretofore, which cannot but redound to our advantage. We must also congratulate Bro. Pense, of the Kingston Whig, and Mayor of the Limestone City, on his elevation to the position of President of the Association, which we are sure he will worthily fill.

The Road to Omemee.

At the meeting of the Council on Monday evening the following letter was read:—

DEAR SIR,—Since the meeting of the Committee on Thursday evening, I have had an opportunity of discussing the question of the proposed By-Law with my Directors, and I am now in a position to say definitely that there would be no use submitting it in the way proposed, and it could not, even if approved by the ratepayers, be entertained by the Company.

Thanking yourself and Council for the trouble you have taken in the matter,

I have the honor to be yours truly,
GEO. A. COX,
President M.R.R.

Peterborough, Aug. 1, 1881.

We regret very much to observe this turn of affairs, which involves a possibility that a quarter of a million of dollars that might have been spent at our doors will not now be expended. Considering the liberal and considerate manner in which the interests of the town have always been dealt with by the Midland management, we certainly think there should have been extended confidence where they have met with distrust, and been dealt with in a generous instead of a niggardly spirit. It would be a misfortune which few people, perhaps, have reflected upon, if the Midland Board, finding its motives misconstrued and its friendliness repulsed, should in the future give a different shape to their policy. The town would undoubtedly suffer, and those whose dictatorial spirit in this instance has resulted in the above letter, would have reason to repent their folly—or rather the whole community would have to suffer for it.

THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION.

The Association met at Port Hope, on Tuesday, in the Council Chamber, the President, J. B. Trayes, of the Port Hope Times, in the chair. The following members were present:—

J. B. Trayes, President, Times, Port Hope.
James Innes, Mercury, Guelph,
Thos. Hilliard, Chronicle, Waterloo.
E. J. B. Pense, Whig, Kingston.
H. Hough, World, Cobourg.
E. Jackson, Era, Newmarket.
W. Gillespie, Hamilton.
James Summerville, True Banner, Dundas.
Robt. Boyle, Picton.
John Smith, Guelph.
R. Mathieson, Belleville.
M. A. James, Statesman, Bowmanville.
Wm. F. Clarke, Western Advertiser, Listowel.
F. J. Gissing, Goderich.
Geo. Wilson, Guide, Port Hope.
W. R. Climie, Sec.-Treas., Bowmanville.
W. L. Smith, Economist, Markham.
A. Blue, World, Toronto.
A. Pattula, Sentinel-Review, Woodstock.
John Masaie, Observer, Cowanville.
J. J. Bell, Times, Picton.
C. B. Robinson, Presbyterian, Toronto.
And an interloper formerly connected the Guide.

After the reading of the minutes of the last year, and their adoption, the President, Mr. Trayes, gave his "address," which was pregnant with good sense, kindly feeling, good advice, and humor. We only regret that we are not able to give it in its entirety. We select a few extracts:—"Newspapers are the first to suffer from the pressure of hard times, but the local press is particularly dependent on good crops and the prosperity of the agricultural portion of the population." * * * * *

The well-regulated newspaper of today is looked up to by the masses for information on topics of local, Provincial and Federal importance, and in consequence the occupation of the wily self seeker is not only gone, but he has totally lost his power over the simplest people. * * * * *

The recognized journalists of Canada are gentleman. They are not the offscourings of all the professions and trades. They are not men whose character can be assessed by dollars and cents, and whose utterances by ignorance and unveracity. They are men who know something and tell the truth. This is what we claim for our Association; this information and this honesty are the very foundations of it—the very sources of its life. But unhappily there are men owning and conducting papers who can give no such credentials as I have said to be necessary. At once ignorant and dishonest they bring our craft into disrepute. They can neither settle a political problem nor a tradesman's bill. They affect to be religious, and end the profession with the affectation; they devote themselves to the task of pulling others down to a level with them. They are superlative in their impudence, not content with the work which the conducting of a paper demands of even the most industrious and able, they enter on fields of of public activity in which their presence entirely uncalled for. * * *

Newspapers are read by nearly every one, and whether it be our largest influential dailies or the most obscure and poorest looking weeklies, they each have their field, and in their own sphere wield a vast, and, I may say, controlling influence. * * * * * *

It seems almost like repetition to call attention to the systematic dead-heading with which newspapers have to contend. I think it but fair for us to lay down the principle—and stand by it—that no matter what the object may be—whether social, lecture, concert, or meeting of any kind—where an admission charge is made, or a collection in, tahap up—such notices must be paid for.

As a closing remark I would say that it is impossible in the very nature of things for the President of a Press Association to complete his address with the Apostolic benediction—"Finally, brethren live in peace." We cannot do that. But we can, so far as our light goes, obey a behest which is given on the same authority, "Fight the good fight of faith." Each of us has his own idea as to what the good fight, politically, is, and I, as presiding officer of the Association say we all hold ourselves entitled to construe the text as we please."

The Secretary Treasurer read his report which showed the Society to be in a flourishing condition—a large amount of assets, and no debts.

Messrs. John Smith and R. Mathieson were, on motion, appointed auditors for the ensuing year.

Mr. Pense, of the Kingston Whig, was elected President.

Mr. Geo. Tye, of Brampton, first Vice-President.

A. Blue, of the Toronto World, second Vice-President.

W. Climie, Bowmanville, Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. A. J. Matthieson, of Perth, Assistant-Secretary.

The following gentlemen were appointed the Executive Committee: C. D. Barr, H. Hough, E. Jackson, J. Innes, C. B. Robinson, J. Summerville and J. B. Trayes.

After the adjournment of the meeting the press men were driven round the streets of the town by the Corporation, headed by Mayor Randall, who by the by, is never more at home than when making himself agreeable to the members of the fourth estate. The water-works were not in operation and the principal points of interest visited. At five o'clock the company set out on the journey to Peterboro, and shortly after six the train arrived at the Midland Station here where a number of citizens were assembled at, including Mayor Smith, Councillors Menzies and McNaughton, Messrs. Carnegie and Stratton, D. G. Hatton and others. Conveyances being in waiting, the party were quickly embarked, the ladies being sent on to the Huffman House, on the tour round the town, which was accomplished under the guidance of Mr. Carnegie, who showed himself to be an expert whip and an accomplished guide. The visitors united in admitting that Peterborough was a much finer town than they had ever anticipated, and were especially struck with the live business aspect and handsome store-fronts of George Street. The drive being over the party repaired to the Huffman House where mine Host McIntyre had lunch spread in a manner worthy of the mantle of Mr. Huffman which he worthily wears. The Peterborough Fire Brigade Band played a choice selection of airs during the supper and the subsequent procession to the steamer Golden Eye, which had been chartered for the occasion by Messrs. Carnegie and Stratton, who had issued invitations to a number of the leading citizens to meet the members of the Press Association. Shortly after eight o'clock the steamer got under way and a very pleasant trip down the river was enjoyed, the party returning about 10:30. The arrangements were everything that could be desired, and we have been requested by the gentlemen of the fourth estate who were visitors on the occasion to express to the proprietors of the Review and EXAMINER their appreciation of the kindness and courtesies received.

The party left on Wednesday morning for Bridgenorth, thence to Bobcaygeon.

PETERBOROUGH ABROAD.

BELLEVILLE INTELLIGENCER.

Mr. Cox is an estimable gentleman and has a high degree of personal popularity in the riding, besides which his prominent connection with the Midland and Grand Junction Railways adds largely to his influence, but his political views are not of the right stamp. If the electors should choose him on personal grounds, in preference to a candidate of the Conservative party, well and good; but as the opponents of the Government have a majority in the constituency the people should be allowed to pronounce in the premises.

PORT PERRY OBSERVER.

The West Peterboroians in this instance have made a move in the right direction, and while like the old cow which gave a gook pail of milk and then put her foot into it, they upset the whole; still it was good so far as it went. * * * The Grits, however, fearing to disturb the repose of the Mowat happy little family, agreed to vote for the Tory if that party would withdraw the pledges. They did withdraw them, and Dr. Kincaid is returned without a contest to occupy the seat of the late deservedly esteemed W. H. Scott.

IRISH CANADIAN.

Under these circumstances we do not see that the Catholics of West Peterborough are under obligations to tie themselves to either party, as a party, in the impending contest. They should rather maintain an attitude of independent indifference, and give those whom it concerns to understand that their sympathy and active support are not to be depended upon so long as they are not treated as political equals. The pursuit of such a policy will leave the Catholic elector largely to his personal preferences, and enable him, if he sees fit to vote at all, to support the best and most liberal candidate placed in the field. We should stamp out bigots, no matter by what party nominated. By rendering the success of bigots impossible, we would do something to pave the way for a recognition of our rights. It is rumored that Mr. Cox, President of the Midland Railway, will be the Reform candidate; and we are assured that he is a gentleman of broad sympathies and liberal instincts. In such case we should prefer his election to that of any candidate deficient in these respects.

MAIL'S EVENING EDITION.

It is a conceded fact that the millenium has not yet arrived, and that when the lion lies down with the lamb, the lamb is always on the inside. This being the case, the Conservatives and Reformers of West Peterborough must settle who owns the lamb. The death of the late member for that riding in the Ontario Legislature, Mr. Scott, was a source of unfeigned regret to his political opponents, who, in convention assembled, passed a resolution to that effect. But the vacancy had to be filled, and as two sessions of the Legislature had already expired, a compromise that would avoid the turmoil of a contest was proposed, the result being an agreement to elect Dr. Kincaid by acclamation. By what authority the wire-pullers of the two parties disposed of the suffrages of the electors in this manner is not stated, but we presume that check was their sole warrant. If there are any independent electors in West Peterborough, they should assert themselves by sending a candidate to the polls. Things have come to a pretty pass when a score or-so of conspirators can say who shall and who shall not solicit the votes of the electors. The Opposition are not so strong in the Legislature that they can afford to throw away a seat which they once held, and which they now propose to give to an "independent," who will be more than human if he does not support the political friends whom he finds in power. The Reformers of West Peterborough have decidedly the best of the bargain. The Conservatives own the mutton, if we are judges of sheep.

EDUCATIONAL INDEPENDENT.

Dr. Kincaid is a gentleman in every way qualified for the position, and the constituency is to be congratulated on having arrived at so sensible a conclusion, but those who give the subject consideration cannot fail to perceive that the system of Conventions is entirely opposed to the theory of representative institutions, and is one that threatens danger to popular Government. In the case before us, a representative has been elected not by the people but by the wire-pullers, and in all cases a candidate has to win two elections before becoming a M.P.P.—he has to be first elected by a Convention, and secondly he has to be elected by the people. The Convention system effectually keeps out of the field the most respectable, intelligent, and independent classes, and confines the choice of the people to two men each holding the strongest possible party opinions. The representative theory is that any man may become a candidate who desires. The Canadian practice is that no man shall become a candidate until he has succeeded in satisfying certain party wire-pullers that he is a sufficiently strong partizan. The system is a bad one, and sensible and patriotic men should protest against it. In the particular case before us, however, the result has been favorable, and an exceptionally good representative has been secured without the turmoil of an election. We congratulate the constituency, we congratulate the Doctor, and "shake" all round.

LINDSAY POST.

The negotiations between the reform and conservative conventions has resulted in the acceptance of Dr. Kincaid as an independent and unpledged candidate for the west riding of Peterboro in the local legislature. It seems Mr. Geo. A. Cox did not share in the opinion of some that he would go in unopposed and he accordingly withdrew. A strong desire was evinced on both sides to save the trouble and expense of a contest; but a good many would prefer an old-time battle, and from the mutterings of discontent in the Tory camp we should not be surprised if a three cornered fight were yet to take place. That is generally the result of these compromises or arrangements unless the grounds therefore are exceptional. The Mail's Peterboro correspondent claims Dr. Kincaid as "one of the right bowers" of the party and considers him one of the faithful. The Examiner wants to know how a party can have more than one right bower; and it does look as if some the local tory leaders had been taking lessons from Bill Nye of Heathen Chinee fame and were trying to stuff their sleeves with aces. The Review does not like the arrangement. Its heart is evidently too full for utterance.

MIDLAND DISTRICT POPULATION.

According to the figures furnished to the Ottawa Citizen by the Minister of Agriculture, and we do not suppose that Mr. Pope would mislead an organ on which he has a $14,000 mortgage invested, the following are the populations of the Midland counties:

	1871.	1881.
North Simcoe	47,258	53,719
East Hastings	17,392	17,313
West Hastings	14,385	17,402

CIVILIZATION OF THE CHINESE.

It is stated that the Chinese Government abolished the student mission at Hartford because an official in high rank, who came on a tour of investigation, reported the Chinese students as getting Americanized in an alarming degree, also because the American schools do not furnish practical industrial education. The investigator now believes that he was wrong, and has vainly tried to have his Government revoke the order abolishing the mission. The Chinese Commissioner, after the proper tests, is satisfied of the superiority of American over English machinery. A Boston engineer has been offered $100,000 to go to China for five years and superintend the establishment of industrial enterprises.

TERRIFIC POWDER EXPLOSION.

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 1.—Details have just been received of a terrific powder explosion at Mazatlan. The explosion occurred in the Government magazine, in which were stored several tons of powder, and was caused by the carelessness of one of the guards detailed at the place smoking a cigar within the magazine. The building was situated in the centre of the town. The explosion completely razed the magazine, and destroyed many houses in the immediate vicinity, besides doing considerable damage to others, and killing a large number of people. Immediately after the explosion soldiers and citizens went to work to recover the bodies of those known to have been burried in the ruins. Seventy bodies have been recovered, among them Francisco Pena, district judge. The number of killed and wounded is not yet known, as many bodies are said to be still buried under the ruins.

A writer in the Providence Journal predicts a useful future for the milk weed, which has heretofore been considered only a cumberer of the ground. Its seeds yield a finer oil than linseed; its gum can be used in place of India rubber; and from its floss a fabric resembling Irish poplin has been made; while the young shoots are used in the spring by some people instead of asparagus, which they resemble in flavor.

PREPARED FOR SPRING.—After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, and all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopess, from Brazil, acts as a gentle purgative. PETERBOROUGH, Aug. 3, 1881.

No business doing in grain—nothing of any account offering. Spring wheat will bring $1.18. Oats are wanted at 36 to 37 cents—few offering. Other grains not offering. Saturday's market was poorly attended. Butter was wanted and sold from 19 to 22 cents. Eggs were plentiful and brought 11c. to 12½c. Raspberries were in fair supply, and brought 65 to 75 cents per pail. Black currants are scarce and sell well at 10c. to 12c. per quart. Gooseberries are about over. Red and white currants slow at 8 to 10 cents. Apples are becoming plentiful and better in quality, selling from 25 to 40 cents per peck. New potatos in fair demand; Selling from 15 to 20 cents per peck.

At the cheese sales last Thursday nine or ten factories were represented. The only sale reported was the L. Davis factory, sold in P. S. Several factories held at 10½c. for early part of July, others asked 11c., but as these figures were above buyers views, the representatives concluded to hold over for next sale day. The best offer made was $10.00½. Buyers present were Grimson, Wrighton, Dundas and Elliott.

CUTTING DOWN

Cutting Down

In a business like Dry Goods, it is next to impossible to purchase goods at such quantities as will meet the exact requirements of the trade, and I always find it beneficial to my customers and to myself to commence in the early part of the end of the season.

Remnants! Remnants! Remnants!

I have a large lot of remnants on hand, which I will run off very low, in fact as the intention, to get them off our hands. They consist of

The Peterborough men claim that as the game was commenced with the first five rinks, Mr. Whyte coming in later and joining in, the game should score 24 majority for them, the Tully-Whyte score not counting.

In the Boat Club races on Friday evening the following contested the four-oared race:—McClelland, (stroke,) A. St. A. Smith, Stevenson and Eastwood in No. 1 boat, and Elliott, (stroke,) Mercer, Budden and Dixon in No. 2 boat. The first-named crew won easily. The boys' race was very well contested, the winners being Dunsford, (stroke,) Rogers, W., Alford and Fairweather, who rowed in very fair form. Their opponents were Hall, (stroke,) Menzies, McClelland and Rogers, H.

The Idyl-Wild Regatta took place on Monday, when quite a large party went down on the Golden-Eye. The "events" comprised a canoe race, single, in which Wetlock, who had won the cup twice, was beaten in his third essay by Wallace, a "row over" for Laing, of Montreal, who finally secured the coveted prize, the the Champion Cup, and a double canye race won by Adams and Wallace against the Wheatong brothers, of Mud Lake.

CRICKET.—A game was played Tuesday between Lindsay and Peterborough. Neither club had strong elevens engaged in the contest. The ground was "bumpy" which prevented scoring. The visitors did not arrive till late in the day which prevented the match being finished. The home eleven would have undoubtedly won having only 14 runs to make in their second innings. Below is the score:

A CASE OF CONFIRMED CONSUMPTION.—From Mrs. M. M. Ball, of East Stoneham, Me.—I feel it my duty to write a few words in favor of Dr Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. In the early part of last winter I took a severe cold, and shortly afterward a distressing cough was added to it. My friends did everything they could for me, but without avail. The best physicians that could be procured did not relieve me, and my cough continued with me all through the winter with increasing severity. I spit blood three or four times a day, and my friends, considering my case hopeless, gave me up as a confirmed consumptive. I was in this condition when I heard of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I began its use, and before I had taken half a bottle of it my cough and all my other troubles left me, and I was cured. I feel so truly indebted to this great remedy for what it has done for me that I send you this voluntary testimony, hoping it may be the means of inducing others, who are suffering as I was, to make use of it. It is the best remedy for lung complaints that I ever heard of, and I am constantly recommending it to my friends." 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

THE OLD RELIABLE.—The remedy that has stood the test of time is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Almost infallible to cure dysentery, cholera morbus, and all manner of fluxes, cholic cramps, cholera infantum, and every form of summer complaints. 31-2t

PERSONAL.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, of the Lindsay Post, was in town on Saturday last.

Mr. Jas. Jagb, of Smith, left on Wednesday morning for Whinipeg, Man., to visit friends and tdo the country.

Mr. Alex. Haggart, of the Winnipeg firm of Ross, Killam & Haggart, is in town visiting friends and relatives.

Mr. Flood, of the Warder, Mr. James McKibbon, Mr. Harry Walters and Mr. R. Wright, were among the Lindsay excursionists.

Messrs. H. LeBrun and John Hackett returned home from their Manitoba trip on Friday last, looking as if they had enjoyed themselves, but apparently not likely to be induced to "go west."

The Port Hope Guide says Major Lee, of Toronto, has been in town for some days past, the guest of Capt. Robins. The Major is not unknown to fame in the vicinity of Burleigh.

The Winnipeg Times announces that the Rev. J. E. Starr, assistant minister to Dr. Rice, began his duties on Sunday, 24th July. He preached in Zion Church in the morning, and in the Hall in the evening to a large congregation.

Mr. Cornwall was sworn in Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, on the 20th July, by Sir Matthew B. Begbie, Chief Justice of the Province. His predecessor, Mr. Richards, was to have sailed for San Francisco, en route to his home in Ontario, on the 30th ult.

RAILWAY NOTES.

The Traffic Returns of the Midland and Grand Junction Railways for the week ending July 21, 1881, were:—

The Intelligencer announces that Mr. Martin Hennessy has been appointed Roadmaster of the Grand Junction Railway, from Peterborough to Belleville, and from Belleville to Madoc.

MIDLAND RAILWAY.—Passengers and Mails, $2261.39; Freight, $6243.00; Total, $8504.39, as compared with $6902.92, for the corresponding week of 1880, being an increase of $1601.47; and the aggregate traffic to date is $160970.59, being an increase of $22445.70 over 1880.

GRAND JUNCTION RAILWAY.—Passengers and Mails, $792.67; Freight, $1279.45; Total, $2072.02, as compared with $882.78, for the corresponding week of 1880, being an increase of $1189.24; and the aggregate traffic from 1st of June to date is $13006.02; being an increase of $3953.43, over 1880.

The Ottawa Free Press says:—"Since the Midland company obtained control of the Grand Junction, they have effected improvements that are really wonderful, when it is considered that they have had possession for only such a very short time, and at this rate of going on it will not be long before the Grand Junction occupies as enviable a position as the Midland does for safety and comfort."

The Madoc Review says that the work during the past week has been progressing steadily on the T. & O. road, about a mile from this village. A number of carts arrived this week, and we understand between 50 and 75 men are at present employed, with a number of horses, and a number can yet get employment. Workmen are hard to get. An Ottawa telegram also says that the engineers of the Toronto and Ottawa railway have run a line and are now on their way toward Casselmans to form a connection with the Canada Atlantic road at or near that point.

PESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

Mr. David Wallace, well and favorably known to many of our readers, who has been for thirteen years clerk at the foundry of Mr. William Hamilton, was the recipient of a valuable and handsome presentation on Saturday evening, of a silver ice-pitcher, stand and goblets, elegantly chased and appropriately engraved, and also of a still more valuable expression of esteem of the employees of the manufactory, on the occasion of his retirement. The presentation was made at the Mechanics' Institute rooms, the chair being occupied by Mr. John Fraser, who on behalf of the employees, some thirty of whom were assembled, read the following address:

PETERBOROUGH, July 30th, 1881.

To D. Wallace, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—We beg to tender our sincere regret at your departure from amongst us, and ask you to accept this piece of plate as a slight token of the regard felt for you by the employees of William Hamilton's foundry. While regretting the removal of one who has in all proved his gentlemanly qualities, we can only wish you increased prosperity in whatever station you may hereafter fill in life.

On behalf of the employees,
JOHN FRASER, ROBERT ROBERTSON, WM. HICKEY, JOHN BARRIE, JOHN ROBERTSON.

Mr. Wallace made the following reply:

GENTLEMEN,—I feel very much gratified with the handsome gift you have presented me with, and for the kindly feelings which have prompted you. I take it as an evidence of the satisfaction I have given you during my thirteen years connection with the foundry, as well as of the friendship and goodwill which you bear towards me now on my separation. My position as book-keeper, &c., in an establishment doing so large a business was a very laborious and confining one, but of course I had daily contact with you as fellow-employees, so that it is gratifying to me to know that I have gained your respect and been made the humble object of your kind consideration this evening. Believe me, this piece of plate will be carefully cherished as a life-long memento of Hamilton's foundry and machine shop, and the pleasing recollection in connection therewith.

Thanking you again for your kind wishes, and hoping you may all be similarly favored as you wish me to be, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
DAVID WALLACE.

Of the 30 who have failed: 11 failed in Dictation, 3 in Composition, 3 in Geography, 6 in English Grammar, 10 in Arithmetic, eight in the Fourth Book and Spelling, 13 in History, and many of them low in almost all the subjects, except Penmanship and reading, in which there is very marked improvement on former examinations. Some who have not succeeded stand high in several of the subjects. It is thought that some of the candidates must have had slight hope of success, and where this is the case pupils should not cause the trouble of examining papers which manifest very little exact knowledge of the subjects.

DUMMER NEWS.

From our own Correspondent.

Dr. Stark of Norwood is rusticating at Mr. Hugh McFee's at present and enjoying himself thoroughly.

Fall wheat is an excellent crop, and the faces of the merry farmers are radiant with smiles as they view their broad acres of the latter crop.

The farmers of this neighborhood are all busy at present; hay being an excellent crop has involved a great deal of labor but is now nearly all saved.

Quite a number of the young people of the neighborhood have been out camping and have come back considerably sunburnt, but looking the better on account of their season of relaxations.

NORWOOD NEWS.

THE CENSUS—EPIDEMIC—EMIGRATION—THE RAILWAY.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Mr. W. E. Roxburgh and a few others from the neigborhood, left for the Prarie Province on Wednesday, on speculative purposes no doubt.

There are a few cases of diarrhoea amongst children in this vicinity, a child of Mr. D. Brennan, Hotel Keeper, having succumbed to this disease after a very brief illness.

The Census commissioner, Mr. J. B. Pearce last week received his cheques for the payment of the enumerators in his Census district, and without any delay delivered them over to the parties who had been some time anxiously waiting for their dollars and cents.

Mr. Thos. Fraser, our indefatigable tinsmith, has purchased the Village lot on Queen Street belonging to Mr. Joseph Ford, Peterboro. This eligible building site is in really good hands and I am sure it will not be long ere our enterprising townsman erects thereon a handsome and creditable dwelling.

The Railway intelligence of the past week has been received in Norwood with unbounded gratification, and a lively hope exists in all minds that a Railway, striking this village in its meanderings will be built. The news that Mr. Campbell of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, is now purchasing the right of way between Madoc and Peterboro, and the assertion by that gentleman that the company will commence the construction of the line between those two points at once, are favorable indications towards the realization of the hopes of the Norwoodites.

A meeting of the Norwood School Board was held on Monday evening last and among other business transacted the chairman of the Board was authorized to engage a lawyer to defend an action brought against that body by Mr. W. Sargent for suspending his son from school anent the late whipping case. Mr. Sargent is determined to test the legality of the action of the Board in the course they pursued in this matter, and has interviewed the Minister of Education on the legal points at issue. He is quite sure he has the Board in a tight plan, and the trustees are quite certain that the prosecutor has not a leg to stand upon. The case will be reviewed at Norwood on the 24th inst. A great amount of interest is caused in this rather disagreeable matter, and sympathy pretty much is all one way.

We know from sad experience that nothing is more disheartening than the insidious approaches and periodical attacks of malarial and miasmatic disorders. The remedy prepared by Dr. Ayer & Co. has been in use many years, and has proved a positive antidote for disorders of this nature. It is, withal, a safe and harmless one to take, being composed entirely of vegetable ingredients, without either quinine or minerals, unlike other so-called Ague Cures, and consequently incapable of producing the deplorable effects which follow the use of these drugs. Our Western people owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Ayer for the production of this valuable medicine. Its timely use will save much suffering, and we recommend it with the greatest confidence in its ability to do all that is promised for it.

Midland District Notes.

Compiled and Condensed from County and other Convenient Contemporaries.

Mr. G. A. Jacobs, jr., was elected councillor in Newcastle, in place of Mr. Stowyer, deceased.

The residence of P. McCallum, jr., of Cobourg, was burglarized last week, a gold watch and chain and some money being taken.

NEW AND RECHERCHE.—The most exquisite little toilet gem extant for the teeth and breath is "Teaberry" sample 5 cents. 44-1y.

A young lady of Brantford named Miss Westbrook has taken to the lecture platform, her subject being "Canada and the Canadians." We would like to hear Miss W. in Peterborough.

Messrs. M. Tierney and T. Lynch, of this village, raked and bound, says the Hastings Star, the former 1,750 and the latter 1,200 sheaves of wheat, one day last week, on Mr. John Lynch's farm.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS cures all diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys, female complaints, nervous and general debility, and builds up the entire system when broken down by disease. 31-2t

Wm. McCaul, a young man of 24, whose parents live on Scugog Island, was drowned while bathing in Mr. Henry Bichell's millpond, on Sunday of last week. Deceased was working as hired man for Mr. Thomas Luke.

A Mr. Stoutenburg, of Markham, claims to be the heir to an estate now worth $30,000,000 left years ago in New York city by nine parties who came from Holland. Mr. S. has a big job before him.

The friends of Rev. T. B. Wilson, who has been on the Manvers circuit the past year, met in the Lifford West Methodist church on the 20th ult., the eve of his departure for Minnedosa, Man., and presented him with a kindly worded address and purse of $55.

A GENERAL DEFEATED.—A Mrs. J. G. Robertson writes:—"I was suffering from general debility, want of appetite, constipation, etc., so that life was a burden; after using Burdock Blood Bitters I felt better than for years. I cannot praise your bitters too much." 31-2t

The Whitby Chronicle of the 28th says: "A child of Mr. John McCarl, aged two years and seven months, was found dead in a field of oats on Friday. The child was missed in the morning and search made, and was not found until after one o'clock. Death is supposed to have been caused by sunstroke."

The Colborne Express says:—"The last number of the Brighton Ensign received by us contained a genuine live piece of news in the shape of a sprawling, flat-backed, bloodthirsty looking bed bug. Query: how did it get there? We hope the quill of the Ensign will rise and explain."

WHAT'S IN A NAME.—The virtue of most of the patent medicines with which the market is flooded lies in the name, but the virtues of Burdock Blood Bitters lies in the fact that they cleanse the blood of impurities, and cure dyspepsia, biliousness and indigestion. Price $1.00, trial bottle 10 cents. 31-2t

Says the Lindsay Post:—"It is reported that the lucky Mr. John Carnegie has come in for another fortune by the death of a rich old uncle in Scotland. The sum is said to be $200,000. This is better than the Tory nomination for West Peterborough. Mr. Carnegie leaves for the old country shortly to take possession of his inheritance.

Newspaper subscriptions are always paid in advance; that is to say, if the subscriber does not do it the publisher is obliged to, as the paper dealers, the compositors, the type makers, the ink dealers, the scissors grinder, the pencil sharpener, the pressmen, the landlord and others, will not wait for their pay until the year expires.

Mr. Robert Grandy, of Manvers, has lately been in the neighborhood of Coboconk buying fat cattle for the American market, and stopped at Bannan's hotel on Thursday night with forty head of very fine steers. He had driven them from Coboconk and yesterday started to drive them through to Port Hope, where they are to be shipped to the American market.—Post.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.—That terrible scourge among children may be speedily cured by Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All forms of bowel complaints, nausea and vomiting, from an ordinary diarrhœa to the most severe attack of Canadian cholera, can be subdued by its prompt use. It is the best remedy known for children or adults suffering from summer complaints. 31-2t

—As Boyd's drive of square timber, in charge of Antoine Brabrant, was passing through Minden on Tuesday, an employee by the name of Joseph Dumas fell and was drowned about four o'clock in the afternoon. The body was brought to Lindsay on Thursday, and sent on to Peterborough by the afternoon train. Dumas leaves a wife and three children, who live in Peterborough.

Last Thursday's Campbellford Herald says:—"The body of Mr. Charles Haig, was found on Wednesday evening last by Mr. Mr. J. Keller, at the foot of Crow Bay, very near the spot where the unfortunate young man is supposed to have broken in. When found the body was very much decomposed, it having been in the water nearly seven months. The remains were taken to the B. C. Church burying ground, on the English Line.

HAVE YOU TRIED IT?—If so, you can testify to its marvelous powers of healing and recommend it to your friends. We refer to Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, the grand specific for all summer complaints, diarrhœa, cholera morbus, dysentery, cramps, cholic, sickness of the stomach and bowel complaints of infants or adults. Let its merits be known to all who have not used it. 31-2t

Hugging parties, at so much a squeeze, the proceeds to go to the poor, are a purely Western invention. The following schedule of prices is adhered to:—Girls under sixteen, twenty-five cents for each hug of two minutes; from sixteen to twenty, fifty cents; from twenty to twenty-five seventy-five cents; another man's wife, one dollar; widows, according to looks, from fifty cents to three dollars; old maids, three cents each, or two for a nickle.

The Picton Times says:—"The 3rd of September has been fixed for the military camp which is to be formed here. As it will be necessary to take steps to carry out the obligations undertaken, when it was agreed that the camp should be here, a requisition has been signed asking the Mayor to call a public meeting to make the necessary arrangements. The meeting will, if necessary, be held next week, when a committee of citizens will no doubt be formed to see that the promises made shall be carried out. The drawing of water and other services required will probably be let by contract."

Last Friday's Bowmanville Statesman says:—On Wednesday morning John R. Allin, book-keeper in Mr. J. B. Martyn's grocery store, had died suddenly at Mr. C. L. Munson's. It seems that he was attacked with a fit of coughing which produced hemorrhage of the lungs. Hearing an unusual noise in his room Miss Munson rapped at his door and received no answer, opened his door and found Allin on the floor in a pool of blood. He was not quite dead, but expired in a moment or two. A physician was called but his skill could not avail. Having no friends in this country, he was given a respectable burial by the Masons yesterday. He was unmarried, and was about 28 years of age. He has two sisters in London, England, and a brother in the Isle of Wight.

The sudden death by accident of an old and much respected resident in this neighborhood will not soon be forgotten by the many friends and large circle of acquaintances of the late Mr. Dougherty, who, on the evening of the 12th July, met with so untimely an end. It would seem from report, that Mr. Dougherty having returned from a pleasant drive with Father Higgins who was visiting with him, went to the back of the farm to help to get in a load of hay; and while driving, owing to the sudden lurching of the loaded wagon, lost his balance and falling to the ground dislocated his neck causing instant death; though at the time of the accident this was not ascertained; medical aid being at once summoned and of course, was of no avail. The heart-rending screams of the immediate members of his family will not easily be forgotten by those who heard them, on being told that John Dougherty was no more.—Hastings Star.

The Lindsay Post says:—"The many friends of Miss Lizzie Johnston will be shocked and pained to hear of the sudden death of that amiable and accomplished young lady, last Friday morning, at the residence of Mayor Taylor, in this town. It seems Miss Johnston, who had been in her usual good health, had been with the Methodist Sunday School excursion to Orillia Park the previous day with Miss Taylor, and in returning went to Mr. Taylor's residence. She retired to rest apparently quite well, but in the morning Miss Taylor noticed that she was breathing heavily, and tried to arouse her, but without success. Mr. Taylor was called Drs. Kempt and Burrows were speedily summoned, but before they could arrive the young lady was dead. Indeed her spirit took its flight a few moments after the heavy breathing was noticed. The doctors pronounced heart disease the cause of death and an inquest was unnecessary. It was known that the young lady was subject to heart disease, but she had never suffered much from it. The remains were taken to Bethaney Friday afternoon for interment in the family burial place. Miss Johnston had a wide circle of friends and acquaintances at Bethany and in Lindsay, and from her amiable disposition was universally beloved and esteemed."

OBITUARY.

We notice to-day the death of James McCue, of Chemong Indian village, who entered into rest the 16th of July, aged 40 years. James McCue was born in 1841. His father Wm. McCue came from Ireland when a young man, and began a trading post at Gannon's Point,—where Smith's lodge now stands. He married Chief Whetung's daughter. The Indians were then all heathen and their children were trained by their mothers to heatheniam. Their father never once mentioning the Christian religion to them. Young James was of a contemplative turn of mind, and went to one of their old men for instruction, who told him he must fast until the great Spirit gave him a vision, so he painted his face and told him he must eat nothing, only occasionally he might take a mouthful of water. After some days he took a handful of snow. He then went to the old man and told him, who said, "Your days of fasting are of no use you must wash your face." Some of the men thought it would be amusing to see the small boys drunk, so they gave young James and some others liquor. When James woke from the sleep which liquor produces, he found himself lying on the very edge of a high bank over-hanging deep water. From that day he never drank intoxicating liquor, and ever afterwards was an able advocate of the temperance cause. The last time he spoke in public was at a temperance meeting. At another time he and another lad were employed as guides by a party of surveyers. James' clothes were in good condition, but the other boy was very ragged. The gentlemen gave the ragged boy a suit of clothes, to James they gave three sovereigns. He had never seen money before and he was so indignant that they should give the other boy a whole suit of clothes and him only a few buttons that he threw his sovereigns into the lake. He was educated in the school at Hiawatha, and while thee he was employed by Mrs. Case as intrepreter, when she instructed the people of Hiawatha while her husband was away visiting scattered bands of Indians. When he left school he returned home, and there in his camp alone with his God, he sought and found the peace, that "The world can not give nor take away." He united with the Methodist church, in which he was an earnest worker for more than 30 years. He was an able preacher, had a very pleasant voice and was eloquent in his own language. At the age of twenty he was employed by the New England Company, as Interpreter for their agent at Chemong and Hiawatha, in which capacity he continued a faithful minister till the time of his death. He was naturally of a very amiable disposition, his gentle manner, pleasant smile, and ready sympathy, caused him to be loved by all who knew him, —he will be much missed. Through an illness of eleven weeks he was very patient. His only wish was to go to be with his Lord, whom he loved so well. His simple child like faith was beautiful; his mind was in perfect peace, being stayed on Christ. He "fought a good fight," he "kept the faith," and now he has received the crown which the "Lord the righteous Judge" shall give him, "and not to him only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." "Well done good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord".—COMMUNICATED.

A St. Petersburg despatch says there are rumors of extensive frauds in the Naval Department, with which the name of the Grand Duke Constantine is associated. Another statement made in connection with his dismissal is that he was engaged more or less directly in the Nihilist conspiracy which ended in the assassination of Alexander I.

A man named Beaumont arrived at Kilrush, Ireland, from Norway, on Wednesday evening, in a half-decked boat, thirty feet long, and sailed again for America, when he expects to arrive in fifty days. He carried eighty days' provisions.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends its self so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Nyman." Sold by all druggists

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, laryngitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung mebrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of these elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER VIII.

Passing the next corridor, they ascended to the next, which, like the former, had [illegible] disused rooms giving on to them, for they were [illegible]. Presently Lady Cunningham unlocked the door of what used to be called the west tower room, being situated in one of the towers. On rare emergencies, the servant of a guest would be put there, as there were the most fashionable requisites. Yet, the place being round, and with the merest slit for a window, it had a prison-like aspect, especially as the [illegible] furnished with a "[illegible]" wretch at all.

Lady Cunningham, going to a [illegible] drawers, unlocked one, and put some papers in it, then began to turn over some other articles. Abruptly, she said, "I think I will put those other letters here too—those tied with tape. Fetch them, Hilda; you can take the light. I am not afraid of the dark."

The girl took the lamp, and went. It was exactly [illegible] minutes before coming back. She entered [illegible] placed the [illegible] down.

"Here it is, Lady Cunningham," she said. Then, with a start, looked round, for she heard the door close, and the key turn!

She was alone, and a prisoner.

Trembling, she [illegible] wooden door [illegible] Lady Cunningham's [illegible] opened it.

"What do you mean by this, your ladyship?" cried Hilda, terrified, half-indignant. "Is it a jest?"

"Far from it. It is a method, Hilda forms, to cure romantic, refractory children. If you will not listen to reason, you must be made to submit to force. Do not fear—you are safe. Here you will have time for quiet reflection. Lord [illegible] and [illegible] intend wife, cannot be disgraced. Directly you promise to give up John Bramber, and never see him again, you shall be free. Until you do, you remain here!"

"This is shameful! It is terrible!" cried Hilda. "Oh, help!—help! Is there no one to free, to help me?"

"None. As you are aware, directly the door is closed, your cries, be they ever so loud, cannot through this oak be heard, even down in the next corridor. As to the window, it runs slanting upward, so your cries could never reach any one in the grounds. Now, for the last time, will you go abroad, and give up John Bramber?"

"Never, now," replied the girl, mournfully, "though I die!"

"I shall have you asked the question every day for two months," said her ladyship. "Then, if you still remain obstinate—"

"Then!"

The gray eyes glittered like a cat's; the voice came tense, clear:

"Then—I will kill you! Farewell!" And without another word, Lady Cunningham [illegible] the slide, and groped her way back to her bedroom, where, sinking into the high-back chair, she murmured with satisfaction, "That is accomplished. It was well thought of; but could have made her hit upon that [illegible] of being Sir Herbert's daughter? It is singular. For her, it is dangerous. Better to cross the panther's path than [illegible]!"

Her beautiful brows contracted. She drummed her fingers thoughtfully on the table; then rung for Jane.

CHAPTER IX.

THE LAWYER'S LETTER—DESPERATION.

In a week matters went on pretty much as usual at Weirbourne—that is, as far as appearances went. James Stone had been buried, much to the village's relief, and the preparations for Lord Bramber and Lady Gwendoline's marriage were progressing rapidly.

Large packages from West End tradespeople were incessantly arriving at the Castle or The Lodge.

His lordship fell into a beautiful dream, and all the time he was not with his future bride, was busy with selections of [illegible], carriages, upholsterers, tailors, and others.

The village caught the infection, and, expectancy of gay doings, began to prepare for the day, too.

In the midst of the bustle Jack Bramber came back, looking decidedly better for his trip, though at times his manner was marked by a restless excitement that was unusual to him.

When he saw his uncle's arrangements for the soon-coming ceremony, his countenance changed somewhat. A certain gloom settled about his heart.

"Confound it all!" he muttered. "Yet what can a fellow do?"

It appeared not easy to decide, especially as Lord Bramber was full of talk, and in excellent spirits, as they sat at the late dinner, in time for which Jack had arrived.

"Are you engaged this evening, my boy?" asked the nephew, abruptly.

"I am, Jack. You see I did not know of your return. I shall leave you to drink your wine alone, my boy. I'm going at half-past-seven at the Castle."

"Not, I suppose, to meet the lawyers, and settlements of that kind of thing?"

"No, not yet; that matter is to take place the day after to-morrow."

"Ah," said Jack, thoughtfully, then. "Well, uncle, what I have to speak to about will do as well at breakfast as now."

"Not caught in Hymen's net yourself, Jack?"

"I don't know,"—with a careless air. "But as to the castle, I suppose things are going on just as when I left? Influx of visitors?"

"No; those that are invited are to come only within a few days of the ceremony. All is yet the same; except, by the way, that pretty girl, Gwendoline's protegee, Hilda Horne—"

"What of her?" inquired, Jack, quickly. "Has left the Castle to visit some of Ladyship's friends."

"Left the Castle?" repeated Jack Bramber, an imperceptible fall in his tones. "When went away, I was told, the very day after. I don't know whether she is to stay for the wedding or not. Now, my dear, I must ask you to excuse me,"—and Lordship rose. "It would hardly be right thing, you know, for a lover to keep his mistress waiting; and such a one!"—kissing his finger-tips. "She divine; as lovely as she is good."

"Does he really, sincerely love her?" mused Jack, watching the antiquated Jeames's jaunty exit from the room.

Then dropping back on his chair, his countenance graver; he muttered, "Hilda left the Castle, and so suddenly! She knew nothing of it when we met that night, I'd swear, or she would have told me. Can there be anything in it? 'He who does will get there,' says the proverb. Well, that is a game two can play at. I must find out. Hilda will surely have found means to leave some communication."

Finishing his wine hurriedly, Jack Bramber rose, took his hat, and set off for the old rendezvous—for old it was now—in the Cunningham grounds. Of course he did not expect to find Hilda; but he did a notice from her, as to why and where she had gone.

Walking straight to an old oak, whose [illegible] hollow base was covered with fern, he drew the latter aside, and put his hand into a small hole, till then concealed, in the trunk. Naturally, he found it empty.

"It's strange," he muttered. "She couldn't have found an opportunity to come. And I've a strong suspicion if I were to ask Lady Cunningham where she is gone, she would not tell me. I should fear for my darling's safety if I imagined her [illegible] suspected. But that's impossible. I've taken [illegible] and worked in silence like the mole."

During these reflections he had quitted the grounds. He was annoyed, but not angry, even when it occurred that in a week's time Hilda might have written. Fear of her letter falling into other hands would have prevented that, as she did not know his London address, and was uncertain about the time of his return. [illegible] So, as he strode along the road, he [illegible] different feelings upon the Castle than he would have done had he known that his beloved lay pining a prisoner in yonder high, gray tower, rearing itself up into the slate-blue, gloomy sky, and how frequently her piteous cries issued from the loop-hole to beat themselves against the vault of heaven, but never reaching [illegible] from whence help might come.

Ignorant of this, Jack Bramber retired early, fatigued by his journey; but mental excitement overcame physical weariness, and, broad awake, for long he tossed, thinking about that conversation with his uncle on the morrow, which was to be no pleasant one, and for which Lord Bramber might blame him and feel excessive anger; also of the communication which he knew was to arrive for Lady Cunningham by the earliest post.

In fact, he knew the next day would be an eventful one. He was right. But it was to exceed even his expectations.

As her ladyship, awaking to it, pushed back the heavy curtain, she saw the morning was bright and beautiful.

"How oppressive has been the night, Dernge!" she said to the servant who had entered.

"And so still, my lady!" was the curt response. "If there's any more such nights, that girl up there may make herself heard. I feel sure I heard her once last night."

"Never!" cried her ladyship, starting up. "If so I must see to it."

Jane Derner, facing round, looking fixedly at her; then, raising her finger, said, in sentences that were not vague to the hearer, "Not in that way, my lady! Recollect that. There's been enough of it already."

Lady Cunningham's fine shaped lips compressed viciously; but she rejoined, with a mocking laugh, "As if there were no way of keeping a child quiet but one!"

"Humph! you can laugh; I can't. As I've said over and over again, it isn't fair. But there! ill seed once sown can't be picked up again."

"You are right; so help me to dress, Derner, and cease maundering."

Elegantly attired in a tasteful morning toilette, Lady Cunningham descended to the bright little apartment where she always breakfasted.

A heap of letters awaited her, and those in blue envelopes predominated.

They were from those West End tradespeople; and between discussing her chocolate, my lady opened them, made notes on the backs, and put them aside.

At last she came upon one, blue enveloped, and having no distinctive mark outside to warn her that it was no tradesman's polite missive, like the rest.

Carelessly she broke it asunder, then abruptly sat erect, for her eyes had rested on the printed address at the top—Lincoln's Inn Fields.

Curiosity, perplexity, surprise, interest, blended in her face, and she read:—

"MADAM,—

"It having been told us, upon clear, authentic evidence, that the late Sir Hereward Cunningham, anterior to his demise, in secret executed a later will than that read at his funeral, we beg to inform you that, as the solicitors retained by those who are acting in the interest of Sir Herbert Cunningham and his heirs, we find it necessary that a search should be instituted through the Castle, and strict inquiries made, for which purpose the head of our firm will wait upon you the day after to-morrow, when we should like to be put into communication with your solicitor, as it is wished to have the unpleasant matter amicably arranged, if possible.

"We are, madam,

"Your obedient servants,

"GRANIT, HARDWARE & SON.

"To Lady Cunningham, Cunningham Castle."

Before my lady had ended the perusal, a greenish hue had spread over her countenance. Not a muscle moved. Only her eyes seemed to contract, and the light in them grow more brilliant. She sat gazing on the letter, motionless.

Finally, with an effort, she raised her head, and strove to speak. She could not until she had moistened her lips; then, in a hard whisper, "Whose work is this?" she gasped, hoarsely, her eyes fixed before her, as though she were addressing some unseen person.

She paused as if for a reply, then went on.

"I know. I cannot doubt. This is John Bramber's work. I see it all. I was too late. I hastened the old sinner's end to little purpose. He must have confessed—before—Oh, Heaven!"

Suddenly she dropped back, covering her face with her hands. Soon she burst forth again, more rapid and with increasing excitement.

"It is he who has been working against me, and for love of that girl! Is love to prove my overthrow, as it has been the ladder of my revenge? John Bramber must have told her, hence her suspicions that she is Sir Herbert's daughter. Sir Herbert! If so, he held his title but a brief space. But why think of that now? Is not this,"—and furiously she struck the letter—"enough, and more than enough, to occupy me? What am I to do? Deny all knowledge of this will, of course. Yet how can I tell what James Stone has said? The old villain, to turn upon me when he could no longer benefit by my bounty! Let me think—let me think!"

Too restless to remain still, rising, she paced the room, pressing with her hands the hair back from her temples. Her face was of a strange pallor, save for two glowing red spots on the cheeks; while her eyes, fixed, stony, yet seeming to emit a red, angry light.

"If I lie to them," she proceeded, "do not let me be idiot enough to seek to deceive myself! Of course it is James Stone who confessed! And he has told all—all; else why should these men turn it on 'supplement section,' and desire 'an amicable arrangement?' No; they know, they know—know that I paid him, one of the [illegible] to that accursed will, to hold his tongue! While he lived terror held him mute! But dying, what cared he for me? Well—ha, ha!—I had my revenge on him, too; and I am glad, glad!"

She was silent a space, during which her countenance changed to many expressions.

Sometimes to fear, but that was rare and transient; sometimes she gave short, sharp laughs, but as if unconscious, and having no connection with her thoughts.

"They will be here to-morrow," she broke out once more. "Of course to search! Well, they can do nothing without the will; and cannot I forswear James Stone?—for they will never find it! Have I not searched everywhere? But they may possibly pull down the panels, or tear up the floors! Ah!"—and with fierce passion the beat her hands together—"why did I not carry out my first intent, and burn the place to to the ground? There would have been no finding then! I dare not do it now! And yet I would, this instant, accepting all the consequences, rather than a child of Sir Herbert's, this man I hated, hated, did—and killed—yes, let me say the word—should call this place theirs!"

This thought, somehow, got a hold over her brain. Never had Herbert Cunningham read a nature so well as when he called her hard and pitiless.

For an hour she remained lost in [illegible] reflection. Once she had been on the point of summoning Jane Derner, but refrained.

"No," she muttered; "better take no one into my confidence! She, too, has begun to [illegible] and finds she has a conscience!"

"Taking the letter, she went to her room, where she locked Messrs. Granit, Hardware & Son's away in her desk. Then she dressed; for she had promised to drive to visit a friend that morning, and determined no alteration in her plans should create suspicion.

As, handsome, stately, statuesque, reclining amid the soft cushions of the carriage, she drove through the lodge-gates, she saw a man talking to the lodge-keeper. My lady's eyes and lips contracted.

"I am watched!" she reflected. "If that man be not a detective, I never saw one!"

She was made sure of it before she returned. For the man, now on horseback, passed her on the road, and every now and then kept turning up in her path.

"I couldn't escape if I would!" she muttered. "That man has a warrant for my arrest in his pocket! I know it! If I attempted to fly, he would serve it! Affairs are desperate! Well, so am I! Before all things, my revenge; and it shall be bitter! They shall see!"

THE SIOUX NAPOLEON.

THE CELEBRATED INDIAN WARRIOR CHIEF'S CHECKERED CAREER.

With the surrender of Sitting Bull ends one of the most remarkable careers in Indian history. As a fighter his reputation stands than that of the Seminole chief, Billy Bowlegs, who gave General Spot so much trouble in Florida. As a diplomatist he headed the list; as a strategist and commander he has been styled the Sioux Napoleon. His history begins about 1869. Before that he was a mere "blanket Indian" on the plains. In that year his hatred of the Americans began to be shown and under the regime of General Morrow at Fort Buford, on the Missouri River, he was charged with, but denied, a series of depredations on the troops and the settlers in the neighborhood. The settlers retaliated and one of Sitting Bull's was killed unjustly. The slaying was apparently atoned for by presents to the relatives of the dead warrior. But Sitting Bull was not really propitiated. He became a dangerous enemy, and the centre of a large body of Indians, who developed into one of the most dangerous bands upon the plains. The Sioux chief now refused to live upon a reservation, and went into camp in a wild country on the Yellowstone River, claiming as his all the land on that stream and its tributaries. In 1876 Sitting Bull ordered away some Montana settlers who had built a fort on this ground. As they refused he blockaded them. One of his band being killed by the besieged he retaliated by killing two of the Montana men, thus beginning a war which lasted till the beginning of 1876. Fort Pease, which contained only 47 whites was blockaded for three months, during which 500 Indians were at bay, with a loss of six killed and nine wounded on the side of the defenders of the fort. As starvation threatened them, they sent two men under cover of darkness to Fort Ellis, whence General Terry sent four companies of cavalry, three of Montana militia and 100 friendly Crow Indians. Sitting Bull evacuated his position without firing a shot, declaring that his only desire was to rid the country of the white man. These having been removed, the Sioux destroyed Fort Pease and retired to their camp, when war was at once declared against them, and Sitting Bull was ordered to surrender within ten days. This he failed to do, and Generals Crook, Terry and Gibbon were sent to operate against him from three different directions. General Gibbon found him on the Rosebud, but as he had only 600 men to oppose to his enemy's 3,000 he kept on the other side of the Yellowstone awaiting reinforcements. Meanwhile Sitting Bull gave battle to General Crook and stopped his advance. Hearing next that General Custer was on the way to attack him, he crossed over to the Little Big Horn and encamped in a strong position. Custer gave him battle on June 26th, 1876, but having been drawn into an ambush he was cut off with his entire command after a bloody struggle, Sitting Bull earning for himself the double reputation of a great commander and a merciless savage. From that day to the present he has been a fugitive.

He escaped to Canada and secured protection and food for a while, occasionally crossing over the lines as necessity forced him. In the end, however, desertion from his band, poverty and scarcity of food reduced him to such straits that he has been obliged to surrender himself unconditionally to the United States Government, in whose custody he and his men remain. Sitting Bull is said even yet to show a most sullen and, as the officials style it, a most insolent spirit. To the last the chief and his braves rode their own ponies, and would neither dismount nor shake hands until they had arrived at the place fixed on for their camp.

Among the pains and aches cured with marvellous rapidity by Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, is ear-ache. The Young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are especially subject.

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "adv't" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands every youth and every man in the land.

TAKE TIME BY THE FORELOCK.—The undersigned respectfully desires those requiring furs altered or repaired, to send them in before the first of October, owing to the pressure of extensive engagements for manufacturing. As repairing has always seriously interfered with his manufacturing department, he is compelled to confine the work of repairing strictly to to his own customers and to goods purchased at his store. WM. LECH. 31-1t.

PROPOSED PAPER MILL.—On Wednesday last Mayor Smith and Mr. Geo. A. Cox went to Toronto and had a conference with the promoters of the proposed cotton mill, to which reference has been made, representing the advantages offered by the town for such an enterprise, and Mr. Cox offering Toronto rates for freights, a very important saving to the Company if accepted, and one for which the town owes Mr. Cox a vote of thanks. As a result, Mr. Trout, of the Monetary Times, and Mr. Tower, an American expert, accompanied them to Peterborough, where the various sites were inspected. Nothing definite has so far been concluded.

ANOTHER FIRE.—Shortly after one o'clock on Monday evening an alarm of fire resounded through the town, and people on the outskirts, or at a distance from the locality, were not a little alarmed at the prodigious blaze and the red and angry glare of the clouded sky overhead, which seemed to indicate that the warning of the water-works advocates that the people would "wake up some fine morning to find George street in ashes" was at last on the point of being realised. The fire brigade turned out with commendable alacrity, and were not long in throwing one, and afterwards two, streams of water upon the cause of the disturbance, which proved to be the Market Hotel, lately known as "Quinn's Opera House," in flames. The building being very old, and as dry as tinder, and containing an incredible amount of timber—being built on old-fashioned principles—burned with great strength and obstinacy, despite the efforts of the firemen. Luckily, however, there was no wind, so that no trouble was experienced in preventing the flames from extending to the adjoining buildings, and its force was finally spent, leaving nothing but a mass of charred and blackened debris. The building had been empty for some time previous to the occurrence, and this, in conjunction with the time of the night at which the outbreak occurred, points strongly to incendiarism. The building was owned by M. Rea Dickson, of Port Hope, and was insured for $400 in the Royal. It was an old landmark, and with the exception of the building occupied by W. H. Wrighton, and the butcher shop of Mr. Wainwright, was the only building on George street from Mr. Yelland's carriage shop to Charlotte street, that has not been destroyed by fire at one time or another.

SCHOOL BOARD.—Tuesday night was the regular meeting time of the Board of Education, but the indispensable "quorum" not having turned up, the meeting was adjourned.

THE SUMMIT.—St. Andrew's Church Sabbath School will hold their annual excursion and pic-nic on Friday, August 5th, (to-morrow) at the Summit. Train will leave Peterborough at 10:30, a.m., and return at 5:25, p.m. Tickets, 30cts. each; children, 15cts.

FOR MANITOBA.—On Tuesday a party consisting of Geo. A. Cox, President of the Midland Railway, Dr. Kincaid, Lewis Ross, of Port Hope, Rev. Mr. Shaw, Mr. Jaffray of Toronto, and a few others, left on a special car going through to Winnipeg. The party expect to be absent about two weeks.

Drs. Williams and Nash may both be consulted on all diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs, also on all Chronic, Blood and Nervous diseases, at the Huffman House, Peterborough, on Wednesday and Thursday, August 10th and 11th. Consultation free. See advertisement in another column of this paper.

LEARN TO SWIM.—Numerous drowning accidents are reported and it would be well if children were all taught to swim. In England increased attention is being paid to this matter and swimming schools have been established. A similar course might be adopted with advantage in Canada, where aquatic pursuits and amusements are so much engaged in.

GOING TO NEW YORK.—Mr. Albert Loch, who has been in the employment of Mr. John Bertram for the past five years, is about to leave for New York. Mr. Bertram on parting with him gave him a most practical and handsome "character" in the shape of a douceur, a cheque for $50. We wish him every success in Gotham.

CIVIC HOLIDAY.—Most of our sister towns and cities have before this fixed the date of their "civic holiday." Peterborough this year has been a little dilatory, but we were shown, as we go to press, a petition to the Mayor to declare Thursday, 18th inst. as the civic holiday, so largely signed that there can be little doubt that that date will be fixed upon for our annual civic relaxation.

A CHARTER SPECULATION.—According the Canada Gazette, of Saturday, Messrs. D. G. Hatton, Robert A. Morrow, Peterborough; Thomas Turnbull, Quebec; George Williams and John F. Olmstead, of the United States, have applied for incorporation under the name and style of "The Canada Mutual Telegraph Company," capital stock to be $1,000,000, and chief place of business Montreal.

BUILDING CONTRACTS.—Mr. John Alford, the energetic builder and contractor, has received the contract for a new brick residence to be erected on the corner of Water and McDonell streets by Dr Geo. Burnham, at a cost of about $4,000. Mr. Alford has also secured the contract for a handsome residence to be erected at Cobourg, by Dr. White, of that town.

CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.—Several accidents are reported from the vicinity of Campbellford last week. Mr. Alfred Denmark in adjusting some part of a reaping machine cut off the tops of two fingers, which disabled him for some time. A son of Mr. Wm. Arnott, of Seymour West, was kicked in the hand by a horse, which lays him up for several weeks. Two daughters of Mr. Ketcheson, of Seymour East, who had been visiting some friends in the neighborhood, met with a very serious misfortune in returning home. Some part of the harness broke, causing the horse to run away, smashing the buggy and throwing the young ladies violently to the ground. One of them had several ribs broken and sustained other injuries, whilst the other sister escaped more favorably, but also had some scratches and contusions about the head and body.

A CHEAP TRIP TO THE THOUSAND ISLANDS.—Rev. F. B. Stratton, of Orono, was in town on Monday making arrangements for a grand excursion on Friday, the 26th instant, to Brockville, the Thousand Islands Park, and the St. Lawrence Camp Ground, the choice of a place to stay being at the option of the excursionist, the tickets being good for all. The Camp Ground is only six miles from Brockville, and the Sunday following is the last of the summer Sabbath services. A train will leave Peterborough at 10 o'clock, arriving at Port Hope at noon. The steamer Norseman leaves Port Hope at 3 o'clock, and will lie over at Kingston on the way down a sufficient time to enable the excursionists to get a view of the Thousand Islands by daylight. On the return the boat will reach Port Hope on Tuesday noon, the Peterborough excursionists getting home by the evening train. Tickets from Peterborough for the round trip only $2.50, good for the trip on the boat, and on the cars for ten days.

POLICE COURT NOTES.—On Friday John Joseph Watkins sued Silas Jacobs for non-payment of wages, amounting to $1.72. The Court ordered the payment of the wages, and that complainant should pay the costs, $1.75, which leaves John Joseph just three cents out. On the afternoon of the same day Dennis Lyons, a pensioner, was fined $1.00, to be paid next pension day—for being drunk on the streets. On Monday J. L. Dafoe was brought before the Magistrate on charge of keeping a house of ill-fame. Two women were arrested by the constable, found in the house. Jos. Cobb, who rented the house, gave evidence as to the visitation of men in large numbers at all hours, and of the disorderly manner in which it was conducted. Dafoe was fined $10 and $3 costs, which he paid. Mrs. Dafoe and a girl named Bertrand, were charged with being inmates, and the cases enlarged, with a view to their leaving town.

WATER-WORKS.—On Wednesday evening of last week a meeting of the Water-works Committee was held, and the various schemes which have been suggested, and those which have been formerly reported upon, were discussed at length. It was agreed that a general system for fire and domestic purposes, to extend ultimately over the whole town, was the most desirable, and also that the water should be taken from Hilliard's mills, the plan being to sink a well in the river to secure spring water. This matter will doubtless be fully discussed at the general meeting, as the proposition is a somewhat singular one and it is difficult to comprehend any difference in the water at Hilliard's mill and that nearer town, while the extra distance will involve an expense of no small amount. Mr. Hilliard made an offer for free power, free site for well or reservoir, free water for fire purposes, and a moderate charge for water for domestic purposes, the offer being similar to that made by Mr. Hazlitt some time since. The Committee adjourned till to-morrow evening, when a report will be prepared to be submitted to a general public meeting.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The Annual Show will be held in Bradburn's Hall on September 1st. The prize lists will be ready in a day or two, and can be had at Davidson's bookstore.

SALE OF A FARM.—The Weir Estate Farm, composed of 125 acres in the 11th concession of Cavan, advertised in the EXAMINER during the past month, has been purchased by Messrs. E. F. Sutton and James Howden, for $8,250 cash.

TOWN COUNCIL.—A special meeting of the Town Council was held on Monday evening to receive an invitation from Capt Bottum, in connection with the press excursion. Capt. Bottum's invitation was accepted and a vote of thanks passed. A communication from Mr. Cox will be found elsewhere.

MANUFACTURING ENTERPRISE.—Some days ago Messrs. Brownscombe and Goodfellow, of the Peterborough Potteries, received their first consignment of 100 tons of clay from New Jersey, the first, we believe, imported into this country. It is for use in very fine stone ware, in which this enterprising firm are striving to reach a perfection that will give Canadian productions in this line an equality with, if not a superiority over, the best that can be imported.

EXCURSION FROM LINDSAY.—A large number of people from Lindsay and vicinity came to town excursion of the St. Paul's Sunday School of that burg on on Tuesday. The pic-nicers used the Agricultural Grounds for dinner, and very pleasant and convenient they proved to be. It is only a wonder that townspeople go to broil in the sun, swelter in the dust, and endure much misery in out-of-the-way places, while they have so pleasant a spot at their own doors.

THE EXAMINER OFFICE.—On Tuesday a deputation composed of R. Mathieson, Superintendent of the Deaf and Dumb Institute, at Belleville, Mayor Pense, of Kingston, Mr. Jackson, Reeve of Newmarket, Mr. Climie and other veteran newspaper men, inspected the newspaper offices of the town, and did us the honor to say they the EXAMINER office in point of completeness, extent of material, and variety of type, machinery and appliances for turning out superior work, was not excelled by any in the Province.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO.—We notice by yesterday's Toronto papers that the following candidates from the Peterborough Collegiate Institute were successful in passing the senior Matriculation Examination:—W. Sanderson, with first class Honors in Mathematics, standing 12th in the list and second class honors in History and Geography; J. Stevenson, with first class honors in Mathematics, standing 21st, and second class honors in English, History and Geography; —Eastwood, second class honors in English and History and Geography.

AN EXTENSIVE HARDWARE ESTABLISHMENT.—Not long since Mr. Geo. Stethem was compelled by the exigencies of a growing trade to remove into larger and more commodious premises, a few doors north of his old stand. In making this change Mr. Stethem had the advantage being able to have his new store specially fitted up and equipped for the more convenient and systematic handling of his extensive trade, and his hardware establishment is now without doubt not only one of the best furnished in the Province in regard to the stock, but one of which it will be hard to find the superior, even in Toronto, in point of economy of arrangements for the display and sale of goods and the despatch of business. Behind its expensive plate-glass windows stretches a splendid salesroom, 22 feet in width by 135 in depth, and here are arranged in ample store almost every article entering into the requirements of a first-class hardware business. Every article in shelf and heavy hardware which it is possible to conceive, or which can by any possibility enter into the requirements of any business, may be found here, the stock being supplemented by an extensive warehouse in the rear, by a second storey stored with shelf goods, etc., and a cellar stocked with oils, ropes, chains, etc. Mr. Stethem's business is not confined to the local market alone. He is sole agent in Canada for the celebrated Wetmore axes and scythes, Jewell's oak-tanned leather belting and Rangoon machinery oils. He not only advertises his business extensively, both at home and abroad, and does business on thorough business principles, but has the advantage of personal long experience and thorough acquaintance with every branch, and every detail of every branch, of the business. People have come to place thorough reliance on every article they get from the establishment, finding from experience that what they buy turns out as represented to them in buying. A close and keen buyer, with exceptional facilities, from capital, experience and acquaintance, for buying at the lowest rates, he need not fear that what he sells at a moderate profit can be undersold in any honest business competiton.

AN ELEGANT OUTFIT.—We are always glad to chronicle special strokes of enterprise on the part of our citizens, and certainly the enterprise of Mr. D. Belleghem is worthy of attention. We had the pleasure yesterday, of examining, at the warerooms of Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stanger a] funeral equippage which certainly has no superior in point of elegance, expense, or superiority of finish on wheels in Canada. In fact the trimmer specially employed for the work, states that it is superior in every respect to the best hearse in Toronto. The design is elegant, the oval plate glass sides and doors being relieved by curtains of fine black cloth, trimmed with rich and deep braid and fringe of the finest bullion. The interior frame, on which the coffin rests, is surrounded by silver railing, with three pieces projecting upright, the centre one of which is surmounted by a handsome boquet-holder, the three being connected by a drooping chain of gold-plated material; an elegant silver railing also surrounds the top of the equippage. In addition to the handsome plumes, used on ordinary occasions, there are also in connection with it, for special use, most magnificent plumes of real ostrich feathers, the set costing, we believe, some $300 alone. For similar occasions there is an exquisitely made hammer-cloth of sombre but very fine material, which when used gives a most imposing appearance to the funeral carriage. The plumes and trappings for the horses, are rich and faultless in taste, and in keeping with the rich and quiet costliness of the coach. With harness specially ordered for the suite, and a team of horses purchased for the purpose, the whole turn-out is something for the town to be proud of, and almost suggests that it would be "a pleasure to get buried." It is the more gratifying to say that the hearse was built in Peterborough, and Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stanger certainly want no better recommendation to public favor than it affords. The finish especially, is like a mirror, and everything about the equippage is most creditable both to the enterprising proprietor and the manufacturers, who have shown that it is not necessary to go outside of Peterborough for an article in their line, which would do no disgrace to the first undertaking establisment or carriage factory in New York.

THE IRISH LAND BILL.

Amendments in the House of Lords.

The Commons Throw Out the Lords' Amendments.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7—The Tribune's London cable says:—The Lords have not made more changes than was expected in the Land Bill—sufficient, however, to change largely the character of the Bill. The Lords exhibited a tendency to facilitate the creation of peasant proprietorship, provided the landlords are compensated. Their amendments restrict free sale, increase the landlord's power in the disposal of holdings, and give them the right to appeal from the decisions of the Land Court, which virtually destroys the efficacy of the court for tenants. The Tory leaders left the Duke of Argyle to direct the chief attack against the Bill. The Duke evidently enjoyed the task. The Government is expected to make some concession regarding English-managed estates, where the landlord makes all the improvements, though it will resist most of the other points. Influential opinion considers that the Bill must become law substantially in the form in which it was created by the House of Commons. The struggle between the Chambers will be sharp, and will prolong the session of Parliament to the last week in August or the first week in September.

The World's London special says:—The amendments of the Land Bill passed by the Lords are deemed by the Ministry fatal to the principle of the measure. Mr. Gladstone has not hesitated to let the Lords know that he will not accept amendments striking at those sections specially intended for the benefit of the tenant. Lord Salisbury, however, has persisted in the work of throwing out the most drastic clauses of the Bill as his majority in the Upper House promises to stand by him. He seems to have made up his mind to make a heroic stand for Toryism on the Land Bill. The Radicals are spoiling for a fight with the Upper House. Next week Lord Salisbury will be compelled to surrender many of the most important amendments which he has pressed or take the risk of involving the Lords in a struggle with the Commons and the people.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—In the House of Commons the Duke of Argyle's amendment to the Land Bill, excluding from the right of free sale tenancies on which permanent improvements have been made by the Landlord, was accepted by the Government, with the amendment that the improvements must have been substantially maintained. Parnell wished to amend it still further, but the amendment in the form in which it was accepted by the Government was passed by 258 to 100. The minority was composed of Parnellites, Home Rulers, and Radicals.

The unexpected release of Mr. Dillon created almost as much excitement in Dublin on Monday as his arrest on the 3rd of May last. No reason whatever has been assigned for the step on the part of the Government. Mr. Dillon is not in bad health as was at first reported. The statement that he had been released on this ground turns out to be a mere guess. The imprisoned "suspect" was at his evening meal, when the Governor of Kilmainham visited him and informed him that he was no longer under restraint. In less than twenty minutes Mr. Dillon was driving home. As he passed up Sackville street he did not even stop at the Land League's offices, although there were lights in the windows. The news of the release was accidentally made public by a reporter who called at an out of the way detective station, but it was not credited until the reporters inquired at Mr. Dillon's house and found him in bed. In answer to inquiries he stated that his release was unconditional. He had not the slightest expectation of his imprisonment being so suddenly curtailed.

An Ottawa contemporary states that the engineers of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway have their line up to the lake at Moberly, and are now working on the final location of this section, when the plan of the line through Bathurst will be filed. Mr. Lumsden expects to get an excellent route all the way to Peterboro', but the party will probably not be able to make more than twenty miles per month through the bush country west of Moberly, as various trial lines will have to be run to get the best route. The distance from Perth to Madoc is about 65 miles.

The Dean having taken his hat off before entering the pulpit, the glove lying therein had fallen on his head, and as he stood quite still when preaching, there it remained.

LONDON Aug. 8.—In the House of Commons to-day Labouchere asked the Government's intentions regarding Mr. Bradlaugh. Mr. Gladstone replied that the Government understood that the resolutions preventing Mr. Bradlaugh taking the oath expired with the present session, and Mr. Bradlaugh could consequently present himself at the next session and ask to have the oath administered to him. Meanwhile the Government would consider the matter. In consequence of Mr. Gladstone's answer Labouchere announced that he would not proceed with the resolution enabling Mr. Bradlaugh to take the oath despite the resolutions against him.

FORESTERS' EXCURSION TO IDYL-WILD.

The second annual excursion and picnic of Court Peterborough No. 29 C.O.F., took place on Friday, Aug. 5th, to Idyl-Wild, by the favorite steamer Golden-Eye. The boat left her wharf a few minutes after 8 o'clock, with over two hundred on board, these being supplemented by a number who got on at the Locks, the crowd being amply sufficient to ensure the success of the excursion, and not so large as to interfere with the comfort and freedom of movement of the excursionists. A covered dancing scow was attached, and, to the excellent music of Martin's quadrille band, many of the excursionists defied the intense heat, which, however, was tempered by a refreshing breeze, by "tripping it on the light fantastic toe," an exercise which was pursued with unabated zeal and vigour, both going and returning. Idyl-Wild was reached about noon, and parties who had brought baskets with them betook themselves to the well-sheltered tables which Mr. Calcutt's thoughtfulness has provided at this favorite resort, and proceeded with a zest, that can only be acquired by a trip over the water, to discuss the substantials and dainties which had been provided for the occasion. The "Tea Committee," Messrs. Nesbitt, Byrne and Kingdon, received profuse compliments from all quarters for the completeness of their arrangements, which added much to the comfort and convenience of the pic-nickers. A large number took dinner at the Lodge, where an excellent spread was laid and everything done that could add to the enjoyment of the guests. The "season" has just set in at Idyl-Wild, and promises to be a good one. The establishment is under the management of Mr. W. A. Kelsey, whose politeness and unfailing good humor, and indefatigable attention to the wants and enjoyment of guests, is not among the least of the attractions which Idyl-Wild offers to the holiday-seeker. Bathing-houses have been added, and are a very welcome acquisition and are very largely patronized. Fresh improvements have been made upon the grounds, and still further improvements are contemplated. As it is, Idyl-Wild is the pleasantest place we know of for a holiday outing, whether for a single day or an extended stay. The proprietor is well represented by Mr. M. Y. Calcutt, who seems determined that nothing in connection with the line or the island shall lose anything of its favorable reputation. The company reached home at an early hour, unanimously voting that they had spent a most pleasant and enjoyable holiday.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERWORKS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Having read the report on the construction of Waterworks in the Daily Review, of Aug. 6th, I would beg leave to make a few remarks thereon. While I fully agree in, and have always been in favor of, the construction of such works, which not only would protect the town against fire, but would also supply the town sufficiently with water for other purposes, I have always held the opinion that if it is important to encourage the building up of a town, it is equally and more important to preserve that which is built up already, and this can only be done by an efficient system of waterworks, although costly they might be for construction. But as to the proposal of having the waterworks constructed by a company, half of the capital subscribed by the town and the other half by private parties, as suggested, I for one would cast my vote against such an arrangement, and I fully believe my vote would not stand single against such a plan. As the rate of interest is low, and the credit of the town good, I cannot conceive of a better or cheaper plan than to have the waterworks constructed and owned by the town. Whilst the town can furnish water at the nominal cost of providing for interest and sinking fund on capital, no company would feel contented without a handsome dividend dropping into their pockets. I do not think it desirable on the part of the ratepayers to make the waterworks so profitable for the town and company, as suggested for the sole object of gratifying a few shareholders at the expense of the many. Will anyone say the waterwork system would prove to be in any way better than the gas-work system, constructed by a company? There are many private houses furnished with gaspipes, an expense of money utterly thrown away, as gas has proved too expensive a luxury, and how can the public help themselves against the exorbitant charges of an unscrupulous water company? Well, some may say, "You need not take the water, and there will be no charge for it," but this would be but poor consolation for the aim the public were striving for. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for this space, I remain,

Yours truly,
W. LEECH

THAT LANE AGAIN.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I have just been reading another scrawl from "Veritas," on the gravel business, written part in prose and part in rhyme, published in the Review, of the 1st ult., and winding up with the statement that it is not likely he will again trouble the columns of that paper on the subject. Can it be possible that the Editor of the Review has refused to publish any more of his innocent ravings? or is his physician afraid such a continuous attention to gravel might weaken his brain, and thus give his friends more anxiety than his present harmless state calls for? or has the change in the moon anything to do with it? Whatever may be the cause, I and all my neighbours are very glad, since we may now hope that he will be allowed to live amongst us a few years longer, a hope, which the publication of another such pome must have utterly destroyed, poets of his class having at all times been scarce in every civilized country.

To township shows and county fairs,
"Poor Tom," thy horn is dry.

Of course a weakness for facts can not be considered one of our rhymster's failings, and on this account I cannot help thinking he should never have attempted prose, for though there be no more truth than one word in ten, we can not help making a great effort to be amused (just a little) reading "Poor Tom's" delightfully witty rhymes. But most people have an unaccountable prejudice in favor of facts, in prose, which has very much injured "Poor Tom's" attempts that way. I did intend correcting a few dozen of our poet's inaccuracies, but having considered that nothing less than an extra, would furnish sufficient space, and that his good natured, innocent way of telling about things that never happened, is well known round here, I thought it unnecessary. "Poor Tom" is very ambitious, and would fain be a member of our council, a position which nature has unfortunately rendered him unfit for. But after reading the last line in this his great poem, I am of the opinion that had he lived in the days of Don Quixote, his peculiar talent would have most deservedly earned for him an honorable place amongst the aldermen of Braywick. On his promising to write no more for one month, I have agreed to forward for publication the following lines, which came into his head, and by which he hopes to be judged hereafter:—

Since two aldermen, of Braywick, the mountain around,
In search of a lost ass, brayed over the ground.
To this year of our Lord, '81, Tom would say,
That your genuine ass may be known by his bray.

NO GOOD PREACHING.—No man can a good job of work, preach a good sermon, try a law suit well, doctor a patient, or write a good article when he feels miserable and dull, with sluggish brain and unsteady nerves, and none should make the attempt in such a condition when it can be so easily and cheaply removed by a little Hop bitters. Sir Charles Tupper, had the shameless mendacity and audacity in a recent speech in the East to refer to the Canadian Syndicate who made an offer to construct the Pacific Railway, as a sham and a fraud, and described its members as dishonest and bankrupt men. Men who on a few days notice were able to deposit with the Receiver-General one million and three hundred and fifty thousand dollars, as an earnest of their good faith, and financially are dishonest frauds! The members of the new Syndicate were Sir William Howland, Mr. Allan Gilmour of Ottawa, Mr. Carruthers of Kingston, Mr. McLaren of Ottawa, Mr. H. H. Cook of Toronto, Mr. Gibson of Fredericton, and Messrs. Wood, Gurney, Proctor, Stewart and Hendrie of Hamilton. Several of these men are worth from one to two millions each, and they comprise the wealthiest and foremost of the citizens of the Dominion. Sir Charles is as worthy of credit in this assertion, as he is in anything he says when there is an audience to be deceived and an opponent to be belied.

PETERBOROUGH, AUG. 11, 1881.

West Peterborough.

On Friday last Mr. Sheriff Hall received the writ ordering a new election to fill the vacancy created by the death of the late Mr. Scott, and has issued his proclamation fixing the date for the nomination for Wednesday, 24th instant, polling, if any, to be held on the 31st.

The Water-Works Question.

The new proposition to construct water-works, now under discussion, is one which requires some consideration. The proposition is that the town subscribe one-half of a capital of $40,000, the other stockholders of the company subscribing the other half; the town to be represented on the Board of Directors by one Director out of five. It will thus be seen that, aside from such restrictions as may be embodied in the By-Law granting aid, the control of the proposed company and its capital lies in the hands of the private subscribers of the $20,000.

We are of those who favor the earliest possible construction of a thorough system of water-works, both for fire and domestic purposes, as being in the first instance the most effective and the cheapest protection, and in the second as an essential to the sanitary safety and security of the town. And we believe it would be wise, perhaps, to provide the main arteries of supply, in the first place, with a view to gradual extension. So far we are at one with the views of the Committee, but while not absolutely pronouncing against the plan of joint construction, or the proposed selection of a site, we must frankly state that we view both propositions with distrust. We think it doubtful if the scheme for location of the supply would be found to work well, and certainly should not feel disposed to urge the ratepayers to accept it on the recommendation of a non-professional theorist. In a matter involving so large an expenditure, and affecting so nearly the interests of the town when constructed, a blunder would be a crime, and the opinion of some expert engineer, skilled in the construction of water-works, should be procured to endorse any scheme before the ratepayers ought to be asked to adopt it. That, in our opinion, should be the initial step, as in such a matter, the trifling expense involved would be a small price to pay for the avoidance of a blunder, that might plunge us, as other towns have been by similar errors, into irretrievable financial difficulty. Having once assured ourselves that the location proposed is not only an available one, but also that it is the most available one—that equally pure water with other equal advantages cannot be got nearer to the town, on equally advantageous terms—then it is to be considered whether the works should be constructed by the town, or by a company in which the town should supply one-half of the expense, the stockholders having the full control. There may be, no doubt, some advantages, as pointed out by Mr. Dennistoun, in the latter proposition, but it is to be remarked that these advantages are only based on the supposition that the works could not be managed by the town with due economy nor without abuse; neither of which condition is, that we can see, a necessity. If our financial affairs can be prudently and and profitably managed by our own corporations, why not the water-works? Again, if there are citizens ready to put in $20,000, they will do so on the assurance that it will be an investment for profit. If so, why should not a company supply the whole capital? Or, if the profit is so well assured that private investments are anxious for it, why should not the town retain the advantage in its own hands?

Then there is another consideration—if the whole town is to be taxed for half the cost of the first expenditure of $40,000, in what manner will the necessary extensions be controlled? Would the town have to pay its pro rata share of such extensions? If not, would it be in a position to demand its fifty per centum of the profits? It is certain that a company would not extend works except at an assured profit on such extension, whereas if the works were in the hands of the town, the area of supply would be extended whenever the revenue derived from the constructed portion would warrant it, or whenever the share that would be met by revenue from the extended district. Again, the charges of the company would be certain to be guided by the object of securing the greatest profit, while the rates fixed by the town would never go beyond a scale sufficient for interest and sinking fund, cost of management and necessary periodical extension.

One thing above all, should be seen to: That no company, formed on any basis, be allowed to obtain incorporation under the Act of 1874. No corporation could be safely entrusted with the extraordinary, and for that matter, we believe, illegal powers, conferred in that Act, whether of entering upon and expropriating properties, rivers, ponds and water privileges, of general management, or of the unrestricted liberty of imposing tariff. Any company to whom aid should be given, or who should receive permission to construct works, should submit their charter in full as they would require it from the Legislature, to the electors, with the By-Law when voted upon.

We present these views merely to give the ratepayers something to reflect upon, with a view to awakening their interest to see that in any action taken by their assent, their interests shall be fairly protected.

The Trent Valley Canal.

We give elsewhere, a report from the Mail's Ottawa correspondent, in reference to the Trent Valley Canal Survey, now in alleged progress, and also an article from our contemporary the Review, both of which will be read with interest, the latter especially, inasmuch as it shows how ready it is to swallow its own demand that the government should devote the surplus dishonestly squeezed out of the people's earnings, to meet the revenue, to the work of constructing this enterprise, and also to accept any instalment of sham progress which the government may choose to throw as a sop to it and to others of its friends, who, we believe really desire to see the canal built, but have not the backbone to take a determined stand on the question with the government. The Mail's report shows definitely, as we at first surmised, the object of the survey is not to hurry construction, but to find impediments to enable the government to stave off its friends who are favouring the scheme. When Sir Charles Tupper came here last year and "looked at" the route, we predicted that he would keep the scheme dangling before the parties interested, till just previous to the general elections, when by means of promises of the future he would use it as an engine in favor of his friends. Subsequent events indicate the correctness of our position. After a lapse of a year a survey is entered upon with an appropriation of $6,000. Now it is announced that the engineers have been "directed to confine their future operations this year to the most difficult portions." That throws over the completion of the survey till 1882. The elections come on in 1883, and then, and not till then, we shall hear from Sir Charles Tupper how ready his government are to construct this work if the people keep them in power—promises, it is needless to say, he will, if his game should succeed, find as easy a method of evading, as he has of bamboozling the Review and other advocates of the scheme. The county and township municipalities, which have spent their money freely in the hope that they were promoting this enterprise, can now see more plainly exactly what they have been doing and what they have so far accomplished, and are likely to in the future. So long as a government dependent upon Quebec influence remains in power we may have small hope of ever seeing this desirable and important enterprise put under way. We can only look forward to a change of government to secure some measure of justice to public undertakings in which this Province is most nearly interested.

The Case of Mr. Bradlaugh.

In another column will be found the proceedings in the case of Mr. Bradlaugh, the member elect for Southhampton, England, who, having been refused permission to take his seat, and ordered not to appear within the precincts of the House of Commons, endeavored to enforce entrance, being violently and with contumely and humiliation expelled. The ground of expulsion is that Bradlaugh is an atheist, and though he had professed his willingness to take the oath, had publicly stated that he did not consider it any more binding upon his conscience than the affirmation which he at first desired to take. It is a singular spectacle that in this age a British constituency should be deliberately and repeatedly disfranchised on such a ground, it being well known that notorious infidels and Jews, who are equally under the ban of the law of opinion, which has been acted on in Mr. Bradlaugh's case, have frequently sat in the House, as well as peers and commoners whose infamous lives have been a greater reproach to religion than the mistaken views of a man like Mr. Bradlaugh. The case as it stands is an invasion of the right of the British ratepayers to elect whom they please to represent them in Parliament, and no doubt, as in the case of the Jews, special legislation will be had next session, dealing with the principles involved in Mr. Bradlaugh's case.

Editorial Notes.

THE NAMES of Sandfor Skead, of Ottawa, and Mr. Jos. Royal, M. P., are mentioned in connection with the North-West Governorship, in which Hon. David Laird's term of office will soon expire. The Government would do wisely to nominate the former for the office. Mr. Skead is a man of exceptionally high character, and of good abilities. Formerly one of the most extensive and enterprising of Canada's pioneer lumbermen, the business misfortunes which during late years have overtaken him, by no fault of his own, would render this appointment a graceful and grateful act from the leaders of a party who owe him much.

CURSES, LIKE CHICKENS, are said to come home to roost, and we very much fear that the weakness of the present Government in yielding to the malignant influence of the Quebec Ultramontanes, is laying up trouble in the future for their appointees. Recently they have committed a most disgraceful act in the unmerited dismissal, without even the allegation of a cause, of Mr. Matthew Ryan, appointed by the late Government some years ago Stipendiary Magistrate of the North-West Territories. Mr. Ryan was formerly a very active Liberal politician, and one of those enlightened liberal Catholics in the district of Montreal who fought a stern battle with the baneful encroachments of the Ultermontanes. He was specially obnoxious to the Langevin party, and now he is made a victim to relentless persecution. The name of Mr. W. McKay Wright, formerly M. P. for Pontiac, is mentioned as his successor. Mr. Wright would no doubt fill the office with ability; but on a change of Government it would be one of the first duties of the Liberal party to see Mr. Ryan reinstated.

A FIRST-CLASS agricultural journal has been a long-felt want in Canada, and we are glad to see that it is about to be supplied by the enterprising publisher of the Canada Presbyterian, Mr. C. B. Robinson. He has been fortunate in securing the services, as editor of the Rural Canadian, the title of the new publication, of Mr. W. F. Clarke, the well-known veteran agricultural writer, under whose guidance the new journal will without doubt fulfill all that may be expected of it, and become a power for good, in the education of the farming public in scientific agriculture, which is being more and more recognized as an essential to successful husbandry. The new journal will be issued fortnightly, and will be devoted to agriculture, horticulture, and rural affairs. Toronto: C. Blackett Robinson, 5 Jordan-street. Price per annum, one dollar; with reduction to clubs. It will be similar in form and arrangement to the Rural New Yorker, and we have pleasure in recommending it to our agricultural friends, by whom we are sure it will be favorably received.

SOME enthusiastic office-seekers in St. John recently—determined, at all costs, to rival the splendid reception given by the people of that city to Hon. Messrs. Blake and Huntington—took the places of the horses and drew the carriage of the Great Stretcher about the streets of St. John. There is some discussion down east as to the propriety of presumed "intelligent electors" making such an exhibition of themselves and their idol, on which the Halifax Chronicle rises to remark that it is not a question of much importance to the public whether Sir Charles Tupper's carriage be drawn by horses or asses.

MURRAY AND TRENT CANALS.

OTTAWA, Aug. 4.—Mr. Rubidge, chief engineer of the Murray and Trent Valley Canals, arrived in the city this morning on business with the Department of Railways and Canals. Considerable progress has been made on both the surveys under his charge. The location surveys for the Murray Canal will very shortly be completed, and it will then be for the department to decide which of the two routes surveyed will be selected. One route proceeds to Weller's bay and the other to Presqu'isle. At the inception of the Murray scheme the route to Weller's bay was considered the best, but since then circumstances have so changed that there is now very little to choose between the two routes. Three parties are now making exploratory surveys and taking levels in order to find a practicable route for the Trent Valley Canal. One party has just about completed a survey of what is known as the old portage from Lake Simcoe to Lake Balsam, which is situated on the height of land. The second pary is engaged in surveying from and have already worked as far as Nassau. The third party is working from Heely's to Chisholm's rapids. Since the first survey and report was made by Mr. Baird, nearly fifty years ago, circumstances have so changed that it would be impossible to follow the route laid down by him. When he made his exploration the country was to a great extent a wilderness, but it has since become so thickly populated that to follow his route would necessitate going through so much private property that the expense would be to great. For instance, at Campbellford there are now large milling establishments which would be destroyed were the river dammed up at this point as proposed by Mr. Baird. At Peterborough a practical route has been discovered which would carry the canal back of the mills at that place. In many other places the surveying parties have been obliged to survey entirely new routes. For the reason stated above the surveys cannot be completed this season, and it is probable that the engineer will be directed to confine his attention this year to the most difficult portions of the route. The greatest engineering difficulties are in the neighborhood of Peterboro', and from Matchedash bay to Lake Huron. The prospects of a practical route for the whole canal are, however, much better than was expected.

ODD FELLOWS' EXCURSION.

Pirates of Penzance and Other Pieces.

The grand assembly of Odd Fellows at Sturgeon's Point on Thursday last will long linger in the recollection of those from this part of the country, who left Peterboro' on the morning of that day, full of confident anticipations of a day of pleasant fraternal enjoyment. The inducements held out were most alluring, the Lindsay brethren offering them a trip from Peterborough to Sturgeon Point and return, including both rail and water, for the low sum of $1.00, with the assurance that arrangements had been made for a first class dinner at 25 cents per head, and that an Opera Company composed strictly of Star performers from Toronto would play the "Pirates of Penzance" during their stay for the low admission price of 25 cents. The whole thing in fact was to be put in at cost price for their special delight and edification. Accordingly on Thursday morning the company set forth, about 75 by steamer Ena, from Bridgenorth and 40 by the Midland, full of high hopes and confident elation. The trip to Lindsay was a pleasant one in every respect, and by the time that point was reached every one was in the highest spirits. Their hopes were somewhat dashed, however, on finding that the rest of the journey was to be made to the Point on the deck of an open scow, and during their trip through the uninspiring scenery of drowned lands which flanks the muddy Sougog to Sturgeon Lake, with the thermometer at 110°, they had ample time for solemn and saddening reflections. However on their arrival at the Point, they had at least the consolation afforded by the possession of ferocious appetites, and the anticipation of a sumptuous feast, at a price at which under the circumstances it wasn't likely the proprietor of the hotel would make his fortune—and then there was the "Pirates of Penzance!" Not loud but deep were the expressions of disgust and disappointment, however, which arose upon the soon discovered fact that the twenty-five cent dinner was going to cost fifty cents; but hunger was inexorable, and it had to be appeased at any cost. So the party sallied into the dining hall, determined to wreak vengeance for the sell by a mighty consumption of the bounteous feast. But if the mutterings of discontent at the doubling up of the price of dinner, were loud and deep, louder and deeper yet were the murmurs of anger and the wails of anguish, as the full enormity of the fraud dawned upon them. No, it didn't dawn—it smote them across the olfactory organs with a mighty odor, that told too plainly that the principal staple of the meal was fish, a very great deal of it, and that the fish had been caught young, and had grown grey-headed out of water before they were cooked. Their fell designs on the dinner vanished. One by one the deluded emigrants rose and silently stole away, very white in the face and very sick at the stomach, and finally the company got off with one common impulse, and sought elevated and exposed positions on stumps, stones, and other eminences, where they might ponder over the uncertainty of human ambition, and let the wind blow through their clothes. One final hope remained—the "Pirates of Penzance," by the distinguished professionals from Toronto, at 2 o'clock. They had had enough of real pirates and freebooters, and they yearned for the imitation. They kept on yearning till after three o'clock, when the doors were opened, and for once they congratulated themselves that they hadn't been deceived. The price of admission was, as declared on the bills, 25 cents per head; but the prelude to the performance consisted of the edifying announcement that though it only cost 25 cents to get in, it cost another quarter to get a seat. Some were too poor, some were too proud, and some were too much hurt in their feelings, to submit to the extortion; but many fell into the snare of the pirates, and dearly they paid their adventure. The seats were made of unplaned hemlock slabs, and we draw the curtain over the untold agony inflicted on the confiding Odd Fellows. One of the boys confidentially informs us that after his return he picked enough of slivers out to keep the house in kindling wood for a week. Finally the curtain rose upon their sufferings, and then they found that their agony was only in its infancy. The distinguished "stars" had evidently been gathered from some hospital for incurable superannuated theatrical supes. The leading tenor presented, in an awful gulf of mouth, only a solitary tooth, which seemed to chop his music, and caused him to sing both bass and treble at the same time, but in an uncertain way, that was highly entertaining. As for the rest of the company, they convinced the most skeptical that all that the lurid imagination of the ten-cent novelist had recorded concerning the hideousness of personal appearance and fiendish malignity of disposition of the average pirate, fell far short of the enormity of nature, even when feebly portrayed by art. At the conclusion of the first act, the party to go by the Ena had to leave, which they did with an alacrity which left no doubt but that they felt that they would just as soon see a single act as a whole play. When the Peterborough party entered their car at Lindsay, the other passengers got up and went out into another car, holding their noses. An old drover got on at Omemee, and after getting a whiff of the prevailing odor mildly enquired where they were going to bury the corpse, and if it wouldn't have been just as cheap to have sent it by freight. And the conductor crowned the laceration of their feelings by enquiring, with great sarcasm, if they were a soap factory on an excursion, and why they didn't take a cattle car. In due time they reached home, and shed their clothes, and gave themselves up to the reflection that there would be fortune in fish as a perfume, if it could only be got into the fashion. Our boys have only one satisfaction—they can heartily congratulate the Lindsay brethren on the eminent success of the Assembly—financially. Those who made the trip on the steamer Ena had a very pleasant and satisfactory voyage to and from Lindsay, and speak highly of the courtesy of the officers of the boat and Capt. Bottam. On board the train, too, there was nothing to complain of.

During the stay at Sturgeon Point, Grand Master Coles, of Brantford, was presented with an address by Mr. J. Britton, N. G. of Lindsay Lodge, to which he made a suitable and interesting reply.

WHAT WILL HE DO WITH IT?

(From the Peterborough Review.)

UNABLE to deny any longer that the Finance Minister of the Dominion has a substantial surplus of $3,500,000 at his disposal, the Globe and its following are very anxious to know what he will do with it? Not unnaturally, in the interests of their party, they demand that it shall be applied to the reduction of the onerous (?) taxation under which they claim we are groaning, but we imagine most people will agree with us in thinking that the said surplus will be much better expended in carrying out those various public improvements which will undoubtedly do much more to promote the prosperity of the country, and especially of the labouring classes, than any reduction in taxation which it will be possible to make. The present rate of taxation is practically much lighter than that of the Mackenzie regime, simply because the people have now the wherewithal to pay them, whereas then they had it not. For our own part, and we are sure we speak the united sentiment of this section of Ontario, we will willingly continue to bear the present rate of taxation if the Dominion Government will only spend a reasonable portion of it annually in the construction of the Trent Valley route, and that we would all prefer to have that done to even having our Dominion taxation completely wiped out.

THE BRADLAUGH CASE.

AN UNSUCCESSFUL SIEGE ON THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The Telegram's London cable says:—When Bradlaugh approached the House of Commons this morning he looked pale, and evidently suffered from suppressed excitement. His black dress heightened the effect, and it was remarked that he looked like an animated corpse. The rumour ran through the lobby that Bradlaugh meant the use of actual force to obtain entrance, and resist removal. An immense throng had gathered outside. The arrangements to prevent Bradlaugh's entrance were most complete. At the door of the House stood two deputy-sergeants-at-arms, flanked on either side by policemen picked for their great bodily strength. A number of athletic Conservative members also stood close to the door anxious to distinguish themselves as volunteers in the suppression of the Atheist. The defending force looked nervous. With resolute stride the member from Northampton made directly for the door, and so eager were the members to hear and see all that occurred that the great rush near the door nearly pushed in the deputies with arms into the sacred precincts. Mr. Erskine, however, barred the way and informed Bradlaugh that by the Speaker's orders he was obliged to forbid him to pass. A parley ensued. Suddenly Bradlaugh seized Erskine and attempted to push him aside. Immediately the member for Northampton was seized by deputies and policemen, who proceeded to drag him across the lobby toward the members' entrance. He struggled violently, and a most painful scene ensued. He was half pulled and shoved through the door by force, followed by hundreds, principally Conservatives. Many indulged in jibes. Down the broad stairway, struggling all the way with might and main, with the risk of breaking his own and his captors' necks, Bradlaugh was dragged until the Palace yard was reached. Then the door was swung to, and the expelled member was released from the grasp of his assailants. A number of delegates witnessed the scene from beyond the line of policemen, and cries of "Shame!" "Shame!" rent the air as Bradlaugh was hurled out of the door. These men made a rush to his aid. Umbrellas were brandished, and the angry cries of the spectators in the Palace yard were taken up and echoed by the thousands who were shut out of the yard by the strong cordon of police. For a moment it seemed as if a physical contest with the police was about to ensue, and had the struggle with Bradlaugh continued the affair would probably have ended in a riot. When Bradlaugh, who stood in the centre of the circle of policemen, recovered, he said to Inspector Denning that he would return with a force that would compel his admission or arrest. Denning asked him how many would come with him. Bradlaugh replied, "Something less than a million." Cheer after cheer was given for Bradlaugh by the people, but the police cleared the precincts of the House and Bradlaugh was left standing almost alone in the midst of the policemen. He held this post for half an hour, and then left heartily cheered by the crowd.

THE DEATH OF MR. HONE, the famous Irish cricketer, has called attention once more to the extreme danger of high physical training. Of all the games cricket, which demands special skill rather than muscular strength, one would think, would be the least likely to lead men to overdo their training. Yet as the following record shows, cricketers are, as pointed out by an American journal, a short-lived race. Of the Gentlemen players who visited Canada and the United States in 1872, Mr. R. A. Fitzgerald, R. A., the captain, died in a mad-house; Mr. Rose, the famous slow-bowler, ditto; Mr. Pickering died of apoplexy; and Mr. C. J. Ottaway, who married a Hamilton, Ont., heiress, died suddenly from bursting a blood-vessel. Mr. G. F. Grace died suddenly last year. The old professionals rarely reach middle life. H. H. Stephenson, Carpenter, Hayward, Tinley, George Parr, Julius Caesar, T. Humphrey, Mortlock and many others were "bowled out" in their prime, and now the elder Hone, who belonged to the Irish Gentlemen team, which visited the United States in 1879, is gone, dying somewhat suddenly at Limerick a few days since.

UNDER THE FIFTH RIB.

The Montreal Post of the 27th inst., contains a seathing article on the Mail's slander of Mr. Blake. People of the present day, says the Post, are not so idiotic as to believe the Mail when it tells its readers that every Conservative is a pure unadulterated patriot, gifted with eloquence and genius, while every Liberal is a miserable scoundrel, stupid as he is knavish, whose proper place is in the penitentiary:

"If the Conservative party is stupid enough to believe half what the Mail says of Mr. Blake, so much the worse for them, for they certainly are not fit to govern Canada—to govern even a township. Every intelligent person, for instants, is aware that Mr. Blake—if not the very best—is certainly among the three or four best speakers we have in Canada, but if we are to believe the instructed correspondent of the Mail, the great Liberal leader is a blatherskite, a spouter of rank nonsense whose speeches fall flat, a mountebank who has as much idea of politics as a Flemish cow, while as for Mr. Huntington, who had intellect and power enough to over throw Sir John A. Macdonald's Government in 1873, the dictionary cannot furnish names vile enough. The Mail thinks all this enterprise, and if thinking so was all the harm it did few would complain. But unfortunately, the Mail is read by Canadians abroad, and sent from this country to England and the United States, and handed round here and there, and if those reading it believe only one-tenth of the miserable rubbish it presents, and the stupid lies it propagates about political opponents, they must have a nice opinion of Canadians. The Mail (Heaven protect us) is the recognised organ of the Conservatives of Canada, and as such, is copied and imitated by the small fry of Tory journalism, if not servilely enough to cause disgust, with sufficient faithfulness to create wrong impressions of our public men. The Globe once upon a time pursued a like policy, and hounded down political opponents wherever they were to be found, but it must be admitted that was during a period when English journalism was not much better; nor is it liberal enough now to do justice or to cease exaggeration, but it is improving, and an honest attempt at fair play can be noticed in its columns. But the Mail goes the whole hog; it has overreached itself; its persistent stabbing beneath the fifth rib has blunted its dagger. The pure party hack is not trustworthy, and being so it will not pay. For the sake of Canada let this kind of journalism be dropped. Let the Mail attack the principles of Mr. Blake until it grows black in the face, and praise those of Sir John or any other of the Sirs until it turns white again; but let it spare the man's private life, and let it try and tell at least a little of the truth as regards meetings. Where is the use, for instants, of putting such stuff as this in type:—"Sir Charles was received with tremendous enthusiasm by the vast audience," and "the flatulent and blatant nonsense of the Grit orator fell dead flat on the slim gathering."

CUMBERLAND VILLAGE POST-MASTERSHIP.

There is trouble in Cumberland village in regard to the postmastership of the place. Mr. T. P. French, Inspector of Post Offices for this district, has been busy of late in investigating a charge of irregularity against Mr. Dunning, the postmaster, and finally visited Cumberland for the purpose of despoming the official. Mr. Dunning declined to give up the post office books, and resisted the Inspector's attempt to take them, calling a son to his assistance. Mr. French thereupon retired and laid an information against Dunning, who was brought before Magistrate Rathwell and fined $10 and costs for resisting the law. The fine was paid. Mr. Wilson was appointed postmaster in place of Mr. Dunning who, however, is still running a post office of his own. It is understood that a second action will be taken against Dunning.

DEATH OF REV PROF. TORRANCE.

Prof. Torrance, for the last six years Principle of the Woodstock Institute, a Baptist College, passed from this world on Wednesday, at the comparatively early age 42 years. For the last twelve months the professor has been in a general state of debility, principally caused by overwork, and was recently ordered by his medical adviser to try a few weeks rest about the back lakes. Accordingly he arrived here on Thursday, accompanied by his wife and three children, with the intention of spending a few weeks on the shore of Pigeon Lake. Mrs. G. C. Read, being a cousin, a few days were to be spent with Mr. Read, but unfortunately the Professor was seized with a more severe attack, to which he succumbed on Wednesday, about mid-day. He was born in Scotland, and came to this country, when about ten years old. He resided for many years in Verulam township with his father, Mr. Alexander Torrance. His remains left here on Wednesday night for Cheltenham, there to be buried, that being a place in which he made many friends, during a residence there in the capacity of pastor of the Baptist congregation. He was a clever and devout man, popular in his church, and had a distinguished and prosperous future before him. He would in all probability have been Principal of the Baptist College, in Toronto, built by Mr. McMaster. A large circle of friends will regret his untimely end.

SHADOWED BY ASSASSINS

A LETTER THREATENING THE CZAR WITH DEATH FOUND IN THE IMPERIAL BEDCHAMBER.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug 5. Last night a letter threatening the Czar with death was found on a table in the imperial bedchamber, which was supposed to be thoroughly guarded, and to which access can be had only by the most thoroughly-trusted of the Czar's attendants. An officer on guard and four servants were arrested.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 2.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the National Gazette says: The Russian courts have discovered an extensive conspiracy to assassinate the imperial family during the night at Peterhof. The police on the 27th July stopped a boat which had succeeded in passing the guardships and arrested the occupant. It was subsequently discovered that sixty persons, some of them of high rank, were involved in the plot.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 5.—The trial of the revolutionists belonging to Black division will commence before a special court on the 28th of September. A newspaper publishes a notification offering a reward for the capture by peasants of persons who have been spreading false reports relative to the redistribution of the land.

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL.

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Yours etc., GEO. LABATT,
Manager P. B. & M. Co.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents,—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

J. HACKETT

Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, AUGT. 4, 1881.

Editorial Jottings.

Sir Hector Louis Langevin, by the grace of the recommendation of himself and his colleagues, Chevalier of the Thirty-Two Thousand Dollars, is about to air his nobility on a starring tour through Ontario. We would suggest that his friends put him on exhibition, at so much a head, the proceeds to go towards "re-couping" Sir Hugh Allan. What becomes of his and the other Ministers' duties during their frequent and prolonged absence from the offices where they receive some $27 a day for attending? With this quartette of Knights, the public business may go whistle—their business is to shape things to keep themselves in power, in the coming general elections.

Two editorials in the Mail, of Tuesday, make a matter of difficult conjecture whether the editor of that sheet will ultimately wind up in the care of Dr. Clarke, at the Lunatic Asylum, or Dr. Beaton, at the Idiot Asylum. It is certainly clear that he has got Blake on the brain, and got it bad. If the Mail imagines that it can promote its circulation by outrageous slander without a particle of truth to cover its naked villainy, or by ribald abuse without a single pretense of decency, it will find itself mistaken in its estimate of the character of our people. Great reputations of great men are not to be pulled to pieces by the professional assassins of the Tory press, and the Mail certainly shoots wide of the mark in launching its shafts, envenomed with malice and feathered with falsehood, at Edward Blake, who has no peer in character, ability and uprightness in his generation, and whom the insensate attacks of this poisonous reptile, doing the dirty work of his leaders, will only the more determine the people to make their next, and the first native-born Canadian Premier.

Hon. Mr. Blake, in his speech at New Glasgow, in the centre of the Nova Scotia coal district, spoke as follows:—

"He pointed out that the present duty was insufficient to send Nova Scotia coal into Ontario, and that the larger output from the mines last year was owing not to the duty but to the revival of prosperity in the country generally. Referring to his own visit to the mines, he spoke of the signs of prosperity visible in the palatial residences of the managers, and expressed the opinion that more economy was shown at the top of the system there would be more room for liberality at the bottom, asserting at the same time that the miners could not permanently better their condition by supporting a highly protective tariff. But supposing the coal owners and miners were benefited it would not follow that Nova Scotia would be, much less the Dominion. The coal duty is a violation of the first principle of sound taxation, and as such he must continue to oppose it at all hazards."

In 1873 Sir John Macdonald, in Ontario, among the manufacturers, promised protection, pure and simple; but to the people of St. John he telegraphed that he "had never advocated protection, but only a readjustment of the tariff." Mr. Blake has, however, the courage of his opinions—he does not oppose the coal duty in Ontario and support it in Nova Scotia, as Sir John would do. The difference between the two men is that Mr. Blake is honest and sincere, and Sir John is—anything that may catch a vote from his immediate audience.

The Council did wisely in deciding to take time to thoroughly consider the details of the water-works scheme before recommending it to the ratepayers, for that will be the effect of their submission of a By-Law. The Committee performed their work, we have no doubt, faithfully, and devoted their time and best consideration to devising this scheme. But the Council, while making use of the result of their labor, must satisfy themselves in the same manner. It is they who are responsible to the people, and they cannot delegate their duties to any committee of private citizens without loss of dignity and respect, nor divest themselves of that responsibility. As Mr. Dennistoun said, they are only on the threshold of their share of the work when they receive this report. It [illegible] them to apply their wisdom and [illegible] to maturing a scheme upon which the ratepayers can vote intelligently, and which will be most likely to secure water-works for the town, in the most effective, satisfactory and economical manner, and on such basis as will be just and equitable to all portions of the town, and best protect the interests of the ratepayers.

The Water-Works Question.

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

Joint Action by a Company and the Town Recommended.

The meeting on the water-works question on Friday evening was rather slimly attended, owing to the want of sufficient notification. The chair was occupied by Councillor Rutherford, and among those present were Messrs. Dennistoun, Mayor Smith, Clanton, Carnegie, J. R. Belcher, J. R. Stratton, and Trout.

Mr. Dennistoun read the following report of the sub-committee:

That it is desirable to have a comprehensive system of water-works for supplying efficient fire protection and suitable water for domestic and garden purposes.

That it is desirable that such water-works should be constructed with the view of serving the whole town at the earliest possible time consistent with the amount of capital that it may be deemed prudent to expend at once.

That the "Holly" system would be the most advantageous to be adopted, possessing as it does efficiency and economy.

That under the Special Act passed in 1874, power is given to construct water-works in any of the three ways:—

1. Through commissioners, the town providing all the capital and assuming all the risk.

2. Through the Council, capital and risk as before.

3. Through a company who would have to provide for and assume all risk of construction and running of the works.

It is believed that the construction by means of a company possesses many advantages over either of the other modes.

That under section 51 of the said Act the town is authorised to grant aid to a company for the construction in such a manner as they may consider expedient.

It is recommended that a company should be formed with a capital of say $40,000; that one-half should be subscribed by the town and the other half by private persons; that this mode would secure to the town the best guarantee for the advantageous expenditure of their money, as it would go dollar for dollar with the money of the other shareholders; that the revenues derived from such company would be divided equally between the town and such other shareholders, and if profitable, the town would share to the full extent in such profits; that the risk of loss would be reduced to a minimum, as the private shareholders would have to bear equally with the town all such loss, while the town would still have the substantial benefit and advantage of the works, which indirectly would save to them more money than would be sufficient to pay the interest and sinking fund necessary to be provided for the whole of their investment.

That the working out of this scheme would require an arrangement to be made by which the company would be paid a sum per annum for fire purposes, and such other purposes as may be required for public use. That such arrangement should provide for the erection of further hydrants from time to time, and necessary extension of the works required therefor.

That in carrying out any such arrangement it should be stipulated that a proper check should be placed in the hands of the Town Council on expenditures for salaries and such other matters as might enable injustice to the town to be done by the other shareholders or their representatives.

Mr. Stratton asked the probable cost of the proposed works.

Mr. Dennistoun said the estimates submitted stated $48,000. He said by the present system of fire protection the people on the outskirts received practically no protection while they had to pay their proportion of the expense, which had been for the past ten years from $2,500 to $3,000 a year. This scheme would give them a much more efficient protection for a smaller sum of money. The system would afford much greater safety and security to the town, and would supply them with pure and wholesome water, and it would be capable of extension in time to cover the whole town. From the use of the water in the central part of the town we were in danger of diseases, and the outbreak of an epidemic from this cause would affect the whole town, so that in the protection which a supply of pure water would afford the whole whole town was interested. If the proposed works were built by the town it was felt that there would not be the same economy in construction and management as would be ensured were it in the hands of a private company, whose own means would be at stake. By the proposed scheme, in any profits that might accrue, the town would get back dollar for dollar with the private shareholders, while they would not lose, since in any event the annual payment for interest and sinking fund would not be greater than they now pay for fire protection alone for a limited portion of the town. The checks recommended would prevent any abuse by the company. According to the water-works by-law, formerly passed, they had the power of construction by aid to a company, and the election would be held in the same manner as for Councillors, every householder having a vote.

Mayor Smith said the cost of similar works to those proposed at Sarnia was $2,400.

Mr. Carnegie pointed out that in any event the town would get the benefit. They would have the use of $20,000, and if there was any profit they would get a share of it.

Mr. Rutherford asked where the pipes would be located.

Mr. Dennistoun said 5¼ miles of pipe were recommended to begin with. The location was a matter of detail which he thought better not to discuss at the present stage.

Mr. Carnegie moved that the report be received and adopted, which was carried

Mr. Cluxton thought it advisable to have a public meeting.

Mr. Dennistoun said they would first have to get parties to say they were willing to take $20,000 of stock. They should ask for propositions from parties ready to take stock, as to how much they were willing to subscribe. The stock should then be alloted, to divide the $20,000 in proportion to the various offers made.

Mr. Stevenson thought shares should be placed at $30 or $10.

Mr. Carnegie thought $50 sufficient.

Mr. Stevenson said stockholders should be confined to a certain limit.

Mr. Dennistoun said the allotment amounted to the same thing.

Mr. Stevenson said there would be no difficulty in securing the subscription of the stock.

Messrs. Dennistoun, Stevenson and Cluxton were appointed a committee to take the necessary steps to carry out the report, and the meeting adjourned.

The Report before the Council—Lengthy Discussion—Referred again to Committee to Arrange the Details.

After disposing of their business on Monday night, Mr. Rutherford, as Chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, and also Chairman of the Special Committee, gave an outline of what had been done in the question of water-works. He said by the courtesy of Mr. Cox the Committee had been afforded an opportunity of visiting Port Hope, and were given every facility by Mayor Randall and the Council of that town for examination of the water-works there. They were much impressed by their efficiency and came away with the idea that what had proved to be a good thing for Port Hope must also be a good thing for Peterborough, though the works there were not on the same scale nor of the kind suited to Peterborough. The Committee had then appointed a sub-committee, who had entered very fully into the subject, and were now prepared to submit a report to the Council. He moved, seconded by Mr. Kelly, that Messrs. Dennistoun, Cluxton and Stevenson be heard.

Mr. Dennistoun said he understood the duty of the Committee to be not merely to present the document which formed the report, but to make a statement of the different considerations which had affected the minds of the Committee and governed them in coming to the conclusions they had submitted. The question of water-works was not a new one. It had been discussed in various ways on several occasions, extending over a number of years. There seemed now to be no question in the mind of anyone as to the usefulness of a system of water-works. The question was of the adoption of such a system as would give a supply of water for fire purposes and domestic use, and be just and equitable to the town generally. At the outset the views of the Committee diverged considerably. Some wanted a water supply for the central part of the town merely, and for fire purposes, but one feature of that view was that it had the appearance of being unjust, and it was unjust, to the ratepayers outside of the range of its operations, who would receive no benefit, nor have any prospect of receiving any benefit, from it. The views of those changed considerably after the visit to Port Hope. Though of value to that town, they were not complete, and did not deserve the name of water-works. They were simply a huge fire-engine, useful for a portion of the town, but useful for nothing else, and useful to no one else. The Port Hope people admitted their mistake—that they should have secured water for domestic use as well as for fire purposes. The Committee found that a number of hydraulic engineers had visited the town, and all of them agreed that Peterborough was so situated that water-works would be easy of construction and easy of maintenance. The idea arrived at was for a larger scheme than at first suggested, covering a considerable portion of the town, and looking to extension over the whole in a reasonable time. He pointed out that in the central portion of the town the soil was of such a nature that, it was said, the accumulating filth rendered the water in the wells so impure as to endanger the health of those who consumed it. Their idea was that a scheme which would remove this danger would be doing something that would interest every citizen of the town, and justify a larger system, which might be contributed to by the whole town. They were offered water power, which would be ample and cheap, one which would supply water for fire purposes, and pure water for domestic consumption, for a nominal sum. The old By-Law of 1875 had failed, because the effect of that By-Law would have been to give to Commissioners all the risk and trouble and expense of carrying on water-works. The second scheme under the Act was that the town should do the work themselves, and the Committee had concluded that for the same reasons this also was not a desirable scheme. The corporation would not be able to overlook, oversee and control the works as well, advantageously and economically as private individuals. The third plan, of construction by a company aided by stock or bonus, offered a safe and reasonably good method for the town. In view of construction jointly by the town and a company, the Committee considered that the gentlemen on George street who were so largely interested in fire protection, would subscribe stock in a company for construction of water-works, with a nominal capital of $40,000, one-half to be subscribed by the town, the other subscribed and paid up by private citizens. By that means we would get works provided in that desirable way that would secure the advantage of being constructed and managed by private individuals, and afford the most economical method of disposing of the question. The town subscribing $20,000 would require 4 per cent. for interest and 1 per cent. sinking fund, an annual expenditure of $2,400. The Committee had taken the trouble to enquire into the cost of fire protection for some years past and found that $2,500 was what they had been paying yearly for an incomplete and unreliable means of protection, which for a large portion of the town was absolutely useless. Take from that $1,200 and we would still have $1,300 out of which to provide for hose and such other expenditure as would be necessary for fire purposes. Going further they found, by the experience of other towns, that water-works were productive of large returns—that small sums charged for use of water, soon rolled up a large revenue. The fact of the town owning one-half the stock would ensure for the town one dollar for every dollar which went to the private company. The expenditure for fire purposes would have to be provided for by an arrangement with the company for hydrants and for their extension from time to time.

Mr. McNaughton What interest would the town get on the $20,000?

Mr. Dennistoun That would depend on the way it was managed, and the number of consumers.

Mr. McNaughton Would we have to pay to keep up a fire brigade?

Mr. Dennistoun We would have to keep a supply of good hose. There would be the advantage that the hydrants being in such close proximity a much smaller quantity of hose would be required.

Mr. McNaughton Would the town have to employ 20 men or 29 men, the same as is done in other places?

Mr. Dennistoun That would be according to the system adopted.

Mr. McNaughton How is it that Port Hope has to keep up a Fire Brigade?

Mr. Dennistoun They have a miserable system in Port Hope.

Mr. Chamberlain Does the report make any suggestion as to management?

Mr. Dennistoun The report simply blocks out a scheme for the Council to consider. The Company would be managed, as all companies are, by a Board of Directors. The attention of the council is directed to this feature of the report: The only way the town could be taken vantage of would be by the company daily running up the working expenses. e report provides this check—that ower required by the Council the pany would have to bring down a mount of their officials and their aries, and if salaries exceeded the sum ed by the Council, they would have power to object. The Council will be on the threshold of the work when report is adopted. They will then have to on and appoint persons to see if ons can be found willing to take the ssary stock, and to work out the de- ls of the scheme.

The Waterworks Question.

Mr. Dennistoun then read the report the Committee as it appears above.

Mr Cluxton said they had all been ned from time to time at the disasters that had befallen towns and cities from . They had seen a good deal of it ves. He himself had witnessed time to time the destruction of near- the whole town of Peterborough, and more he had seen the more was he vinced that it was the duty of every who can assist in preventing the rrence of similar events in Peter- ugh to use his influence in that di- tion. He referred to the great fires at John, Montreal, and Quebec, and all these were warnings that we uld do something to prevent similar sters from overtaking our town. We liable any night we went to bed to up in the morning and see the greater of the town swept out of existence. ntreal had taken heed to the lesson of misfortunes by fire, had built water- s and now there was no such thing burning a house there. Here, if we uld get waterworks, we should be in the same position of security as ntreal is. It would effect great saving to people because the insurance would se, and in that way they would be to pay a small tax for the water. In ition to the saving in premiums, they uld reduce the amounts insured. Now, insure to as large an amount as pos- , but if we get this system of water- s, we will feel easier and would not re to so large an amount. His own ion was that the Council should take construct those waterworks them- es, and get the advantage of the ome which would be derived. At ent our fire protection costs us from nt to $3,000 a year, and the interest the whole sum said to be sufficient to d the works would be less than the ent we are actually paying under the ent system for no protection, while the works we would have perfect ection. In addition we would have dvantage of supplying water to pri- parties, we would have water for houses and gardens, and in the almost dorably hot weather such as we had undergone, we would be able to keep streets watered, and not merely sprink- as now over a small portion, and the would be kept fresh and cool. He ght this the most important question had ever come before the Council, he believed that if the members of the ncil would only use their influence their constituents they would have difficulty in inducing them to carry scheme. Private people would not ely to put $20,000 into this enter- unless it were a paying concern. If Company made any money the town ld do the same. If there was any the Company would bear the half of He believed the time had come when should carry waterworks, and that feeling was that we should have both for fire protection and for do- use.

. McNaughton asked if they could have water for $20,000?

. Cluxton thought so. They had the advantage of Mr. Trout's experi- and he assured them they could get spring water for domestic purposes, iver water for fire purposes.

. McNaughton asked how much works would lower the insurance?

. Cluxton thought there would be reduction.

. McNaughton asked which, landlord nant, paid the insurance?

. Cluxton said it was divided between —the landlord paid on the building the tenant on contents.

. Taylor—Where do you propose to water?

. Cluxton said it was intended, if the w was carried, to employ engineers amine the whole town and neigh- d and select the best place. Our tion is that it could be got at Mr. rd's. Mr. Trout proposed to get water by digging down to the Taylor—You don't mean to filter through clay or rock?

Cluxton—It is not my opinion, but Mr. Trout, who is said to have a deal of experience.

Taylor—I have never heard of at the bottom of rivers.

Stevenson said Mr. Trout's plan or e was to supply water from Hil- . They could find the spring water ards. It was the interest of the y to supply pure water, which he could be got by sinking through estone. As regarded a company, ught it would be difficult to get men e stock in it, but if the town took would be an inducement. He al- to the deficient protection afforded the present system, particularly by olders at any distance from the . This extensive scheme of Mr. 's embraces nearly the whole town, the price would cover the distance it was certainly very cheap. ally no one would invest money in mpany unless they could supply pring water, because that would be rincipal source of revenue. The as to charge $5 or $10, according to mises, $20 to a hotel, etc. He be- there would be no loss, and that it pay 5 or 6 per cent. So satisfied of this that he would take all the in it he could. He referred at to the importance of the protec- orded to merchants, and the pro- uction of insurance. Some peo- they would rather see a building own, because it would afford work uild it. That was not the fair way honest way to look at it.

Kelly asked how far the water- would go?

Stevenson said down as far as ake street, and west as far as the Church.

Taylor said he didn't see how they get two kinds of water out of the in.

Stevenson said river water would put on for fire purposes.

Taylor said people would be using for domestic purposes, and when for fire purposes was put on they get it.

Chamberlain asked what was the 12 inch iron pipe.

Stevenson said he was not in a to say. The whole matter would them in its proper course.

Dennistoun, at some length, ex- d that he could not in any way be sted in the slightest degree by the ction of these works, so that his in urging them were most disin- d, and he said that this scheme was the best that could be provided. It was absolutely sure to pay, and any Councillor who condemned it without going into the figures as the Committee had done, would not be doing his duty to his constituents. He assured them, after giving it his best consideration, that there was money in it for the town of Peterborough. They would have $40,000 worth of water-works for $20,000. They could fix the rate of dividend at 5 or 6 per cent., and let every particle of money over and above that go first into the construction of extensions, and afterwards to the reduction of water rates, first to the town and then to consumers. There was nothing in it which could be taken advantage of by any ring or by any one. If any one was opposed to water-works under any circumstances, they would expect his opposition; but if they were not, they should not vote down a reasonable scheme without considering it.

Mr. Menzies moved, seconded by Mr. Hartley,—That the report be received and adopted, and referred to the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, to prepare details; and that Mr. Poussette be employed to draft a by-law in accordance with the report.

Mr. McNaughton said he came there to carry out the pledges he had given to his constituents. If this was such a money-making business, why didn't they get Mr. Bradburn, Mr. Cox, Mr. Stevenson, and Mr. Cluxton, who owned nearly the whole of George street, to take it up and build it themselves. He would vote against it as a Councillor, and as a Freeholder, and would do all he could against it. He held that it would not be fair to Mr. Hazlitt, who was making arrangements to provide his own fire protection, or to Mr. Wm. Hamilton, who had spent hundreds of dollars protecting his property, to make them pay taxes for the scheme. If there was money in it, let those who were so anxious for it build it.

Mr. Chamberlain said he was not going to say that he was opposed to the scheme suggested, but he thought the course proposed by the resolution was rather hasty. It was an important matter, and they should deal with it with due consideration. The committee had set them a good example. They had spent a great deal of time and trouble, and the Council should also thoroughly satisfy themselves, as the committee had done, before they took the responsibility of endorsing the scheme for submission to the ratepayers. He would move that the report be received and further considered at the next meeting of the Council.

Mr. Menzies thought they should go on with it at once. There was a fire the other night which, had there been any wind, might have swept the whole of George street. He thought the committee had sufficiently considered the matter.

Mr. Rutherford said it was a matter of common remark among outsiders that a town of the size of Peterborough should be without waterworks. As a citizen he might feel disposed to oppose it, as it would be no direct advantage to him, but as a Councillor dealing with the interests of the town he felt it his duty to support it. If the town was burned up it might be a long time before they could build it up again. He denied that they had dealt hastily with the matter. The committee had spent a great deal of time over it, and had given it their most careful consideration. The ratepayers would have to decide the question, and it was for the Council to allow them to do it.

Mr. Hartley favored the proposed scheme. As a company were taking half the stock, the town could afford to take the other half. The waterworks would be of no benefit to him personally, but he felt that they were required in the interests of the town. He believed the majority of the people were in favour of waterworks, and it was not for the Council to stand in the way. Now was the time to deal with the question. If the people wanted to get waterworks, let them have them. He was astonished at Councillor Chamberlain opposing the scheme.

Mr. Chamberlain said he had never been opposed to waterworks. On the contrary, he had always said that it was most desirable to have waterworks, and that if we had the money to spare it could not be expended in any better way. But he felt that they ought not to accept this scheme without any consideration whatever, or without knowing anything about its details. The Committee had taken time to consider it, and the Council should do the same. It was the Council who were responsible to the ratepayers, and not the Committee. All he wanted was, to see the Council act like reasonable men and examine into the matter before they recommended it to the ratepayers.

Mr. Taylor said he was not opposed to waterworks. If the people wanted them let them have them. But he was opposed to adopting a scheme like this. They could not build the scheme for $40,000, or $80,000. The pumps and pump house alone would cost the sum proposed. Mr. Trout was not an engineer, and had had no experience in waterworks building, and his opinion was worth no more than any other man's. Mr. Hilliard, of course, wants waterworks because he has property to dispose of. He thought they should not go into this question in the way proposed.

Mr. Cahill said the report did not throw any light on the kind of a by-law to be submitted. He was in favor of waterworks if the scheme introduced were a reasonable one, but he felt that as Councillors they had a certain amount of responsibility in the matter. They were in the dark as to the details. They did not know how many hydrants there were to be nor what they would cost. There was said to be a prospect of a saving in the cost of fire protection, but they could not tell whether there would or not till they knew how much the hydrant supply would cost. He would rather vote for letting it go through, but he did not see how they could draft a by-law without the details.

Mr. Dennistoun said all the committee had done was to give the outline of a scheme. The first thing to be done was to say whether it is a reasonable scheme. The next thing would be to take steps to ascertain whether there were citizens ready to subscribe the required amount of capital. The Fire, Water and Gas Committee would then want to sit down and consider the details.

Mr. Kelly said there was no use in having a by-law prepared now. The matter would have to come before the Council again before they could get that far.

Mr. Cahill said there was no use at all in going to the expense of a solicitor to draft a by-law until they had the details of the scheme. The whole work might have to be done over again, and it would be money thrown away.

Mr. Menzies thought they had all the information they required.

Mr. Cahill said the Fire, Water and Gas Committee could go into it and report to the Council, who would then consider the details. In Lindsay 3,750 feet of pipe had cost $12,000; at this rate these works would cost $78,000.

Mr. Rutherford thought the report might be adopted and referred to the committee.

Mr. Chamberlain thought it should be referred to a special meeting of the Council.

Mr. Menzies' motion was then altered to read that the report be received and referred to the Fire, Water and Gas Committee to furnish details and report to a special meeting of the Council.

The Council then adjourned.

On Sunday of last week, James Dryden, father of John Dryden, M. P. P., breathed his last at the ripe old age of 76. Mr. Benson Baldwin, one of the patrons of a cheese factory in London township, acknowledged at a meeting of the directors that he was guilty of a charge made against him of skimming and watering milk supplied by him to the factory. Mr. Alex. Mathieson, of Belmont, met with a serious accident on Saturday last. He was engaged in drawing in barley, and was sitting on the fore part of the load, when the wagon in going over some rough ground shook him and a portion of the load off, the wheels passing over his body and severely injuring him. We are happy to be able to state, however, that under the skilful treatment of Dr. Ford, he is rapidly recovering.—Norwood Register.

The Cobourg World says:—On Friday morning, Mr. R. Tait, while at work on the third story of Smith's new block, stepped upon the end of a loose board, or the loose end of a board, as some people call it, and fell through into the cellar, a distance of about thirty feet. He struck a time or two on his way down, and finished up in the cellar part of the trip with a kind of slide down a board. Strange to say, no bones were broken, nor was he very seriously hurt.

John Culbert, of Shanty Bay, while hurrying to catch a train, on Tuesday of last week, was observed to stumble and fall forward. He made an effort to regain his feet, but again fell, and when assistance arrived it was discovered that his life was gone. An examination showed a rupture of the artery from the heart—one-half that organ was minus the life blood. Over exertion so soon after eating, to catch the train, may be said to have broken his heart. Deceased was only 50 years of age, apparently a strong, hearty man.

The harbor storehouse in Port Hope was destroyed by fire on the morning of the 22nd ult. The building was occupied by Mr. J. J. Turner as a sail loft, and Messrs. Kniffen & Philp for storing hay, also by the steamer Norseman for holding supplies. Mr. Turner's loss was $1,800, two-thirds of which is covered by insurance. Messrs. Kniffen & Philp had previously disposed of their hay to an American firm, who lose about $150. The Norseman's loss is small, uninsured. The Flora Emma lost her suit of sails, which were stored in the loft, and valued at $400. The building was insured for $1,500. The fire is said to have been the work of an incendiary.

The Millbrook Messenger says:—Some time during Wednesday night, some evil-disposed person or persons, entered the residence of Mr. Wm. Vance, and stole his watch, which was hanging on the post at the head of his bed, and some change out of his pants pockets, which hung at the foot. From thence, they are supposed to have meandered to the residence of Mr. Alex. Ferguson, from whom they succeeded in capturing another watch, and seven dollars. The money was taken out of his pants pocket, from alongside of his bed. The bold burglar, in this instance, missed a large pile of wealth, that was in another pocket of Mr. F's unmentionables.

On Monday of last week, a sad accident occurred at Thompson Smith's Portage, about two miles north of this place. As Miss E. Durham, second daughter of Mr. James Durham, of Bradford, who was spending her holidays there, was walking along the sidewalk above the portage machinery, a board slipped out of its place, and her left foot coming between two cog wheels, the leg was badly mangled above the ankle, necessitating amputation a little below the knee, which operation was successfully performed by Dr. Corbett, of Orillia, who came shortly after the accident, by a special engine, which was standing here at the time and was kindly placed at the disposal of Mr. Cameron, manager of the portage, by the officials of the Northern Railway. Miss Durham has borne up remarkably well, and at present is doing as well as could possibly be expected. Much sympathy is felt for the family of Mr Durham, both at this place and at Bradford, where they reside, and where they are well known.—Orillia Times.

The Orillia Times says:—In another place Mr. Andrew Tait offers a reward of $200 for such evidence as will lead to the conviction of the person who drove files and spikes into saw logs now being cut at his mill. This was done while the logs were lying in Wood's Bay last winter. Latterly two saws have been more or less injured in consequence, but fortunately none of the employees have been hurt. Mr. Tait has given up sawing a certain batch of logs until the fall, when a stronger saw will be used and such other precaution taken as will reduce the danger to the least possible limit. The act is a dastardly one, and it is to be hoped the liberal reward offered will result in the discovery of the inhuman wretch and in his just punishment. For many years Mr. Tate has been dealing with farmers down the lake shore and has been on the best of terms with all of them, excepting one person from whom he purchased some logs last winter. These are the logs that are now found to be turned into engines of destruction—dangerous to property and life.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised

THE ALEMBIC OF THE BODY.—The stomach is the alembic of the human system. In it those wondrous chemical changes take place which result in the transmutation of food into blood. When it is vigorous the necessary processes of digestion and assimilation go on uninterrupted, and the system is suitably nourished. When it is feeble or disordered, they are obstructed, and being in consequence ill supplied with blood of a vitalizing quality, the physical organism becomes weak and feeble, the nerves suffer, the liver and bowels are semi-paralyzed, and appetite and sleep fail. These disasterous consequences may, however, be prevented, or remedied with the supreme stomachic and aperient. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE, a medicine of rare purity and efficacy, which reforms a disordered and repairs a weakened state of the digestive organs, overcomes biliousness, relieves the bowels when obstructed without straining or weakening them, and promotes the exit from the system of Impurities which infect the blood, which cause serious organic maladies. No objectionable mineral contaminates it, and its value is not marred by a subsequent re-action prejudical to the general health. Far preferable is it to the ordinary nauseous drugs used to produce a similar effect but which are frequently ineffective as well as unpleasant; nor is it a cheap and valueless medicine, pulled into existence. It is used for dyspepsia, biliousness, affections of the blood, kidney complaints, female weakness, lumbago, &c., and in all blood diseases is unequalled. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. ...h Heaven!" exclaimed Jack; ..., for, as the man had sped on, ...was laid on his arm. Looking ... beheld the scared, pale, terrified ...ane Derner.

"It's false," she whispered, excitedly. "He doesn't know. I've gone far, and done much with my lady, but I can't do this. There is some one in the tower, and she can't get out, for she's locked in. Oh, horror! I fancy I hear the screams above this babbling, but it can't be!" And she wrung her hands. "Oh, save her! save her! Here is the key!"

Jack seized it, as he cried, "Some one locked in, woman? Whom?

"Miss Hilda Horne—or Hilda Cunningham, for that's what she is!—that's what she is!"

With a loud cry, Jack seized the speaker.

"Woman," he ejaculated, "you speak not truly! Who dared lock her there? If it's true, I'll kill you."

"It was Lady Cunningham, I tell you. If you stop to kill me you'll never save her. Are you mad? On, on; the smoke may already have overpowered her," cried the woman, excitedly. "And, mark me, should my lady meet you on your way, she will not allow you to proceed."

By this time, Jack had recovered himself. He saw the necessity of being cool, and acting promptly. Even now, oh, Heaven! he might be too late.

Rapidly Jane Derner led him into the house, accompanied him as far as she dared, then gave him directions too clear to be misunderstood.

By the energetic efforts of the firemen, and the copious supply of water, the west tower had been pretty well separated from the rest of the building, but there the flames raged fiercely, with fiery tongues running over and clutching relentlessly the old oak panels, while volumes of smoke, thick and stifling, rolled through the corridors and up the staircases, as if on guard.

But Jack Bramber, rage and terror in his heart, was not to be driven back by heat or smoke.

Swiftly he mounted to the first corridor, then started back amazed, for abruptly, out of the dense smoke, came Lady Cunningham. Her eyes flashed with hate as she beheld him.

"How dare you enter here?" she exclaimed. "What want you?"

"To free Miss Cunningham, whom you have here a prisoner," he answered passionately.

"It is false! Who told you this?"

"That matters not. Stand aside!" he cried authoratively; for, as the smoke grew hotter and more stifling, he knew how precious was every moment.

"I shall not!" she retorted, barring his way. "I tell you there is no one there."

It was no time for ceremony. Jack caught her by the shoulder, but like a vise her arms closed fast round him.

"You shall not go!" she hissed through her teeth. "You have thwarted me once, John Bramber: you shall not again. We'll die together, rather!"

"Woman! fiend!" cried Jack, struggling to free himself; "is not your list of crimes full enough but that you would yet add to it? Know that James Stone's body is to be exhumed, and if poison be found in it you will be charged as his destroyer."

"Ah!"

Lady Cunningham could not control that guilty start. Jack seized his advantage, and flung her violently from him. She reeled, staggered back, and disappeared into the vail of smoke.

He heard her fall; but it was not to be supposed he would risk Hilda's safety by attending to her cruel enemy first. Choking with the stifling smoke, his veins swelling, his breath labored, he sprung on, stumbling at times, fearful ever that he should be too late. Oh, Heaven, should he find her suffocated—dead!

The door was reached at last, the key inserted; the next instant Jack was in the room.

That strong door, which had smothered her cries, had been her preservation. It had been a barrier to the smoke. As the young fellow rushed in, calling her name, Hilda sprung into his arms.

"Jack!—oh, dear, brave Jack!—oh, my love!" she exclaimed, in tears of hysterical joy. "Saved, saved!"

One long, passionate embrace, taken, as it were, in the very jaws of death; then, with a few hurried words of explanation, and an entreaty that she would trust in him, which she replied to by a fond hand-pressure, he half-leading, half-supporting her, and finally carrying, fought his way back through the smoke, which, to his alarm, was rapidly becoming of a reddish hue.

In his anxiety for his beloved charge, he forgot Lady Cunningham. But on reaching the corridor, no one attempted to bar their progress. The place seemed deserted. Had Jack recollected her, he would have imagined she had wisely provided for her own safety.

With much difficulty, finally, staggering and reeling as one drunk with wine, Jack Bramber at last reached the ground floor with Hilda.

As swiftly they made their way to the untouched portion of the Castle, they met others, when Jack had but time to give Hilda to their care before he fell insensible.

At the same instant, there was a fearful crash. Those without beheld an instant's darkness, quickly followed by a mighty cloud of brilliant sparks, followed by an upward rush of a great spiral flame.

The lower portion of the west tower had fallen in, bringing much of the upper with it.

In falling, Lady Cunningham's temple had come in such violent contact with a projection of the cornice of the wainscot as to cause insensibility, and there she still was lying unconscious when Jack Bramber hurried by with Hilda.

Hardly, however, had they passed, than her senses began to return in a dazed fashion.

Stunned by the blow, stifled by smoke her intellect was not clear enough for reason, or perception of her imminent danger. All she remembered distinctly was that Jack Bramber had gone to rescue Hilda, and her resolve to back him.

She groped her way to the stairs, and ascended them, reiterating like a madwoman, as at the moment she was, "he can't save her—he can't—he can't. He hasn't the key—he hasn't the key! They'll both go—both! My revenge will be complete!"

When, however, she found the door open, and the room empty, with a scream of rage, she rushed out and down the stairs.

Blinded, giddy, dazed, her hands burnt, on reaching the first corridor she missed her footing, and fell before she could recover herself.

The crash came, the wall and staircase were carried away, and Lady Cunningham was carried with them, never to open her eyes in this world again; proving Sir Herbert's words to have been true—that she was hard and pitiless unto death.

Had it been Lady Cunningham's intention, as no doubt it was, to destroy the will and Hilda, the only heir to Sir Herbert, in part she had succeeded.

The will was never found!

That it had existed was put beyond dispute by James Stone's confession, signed by Jack and the neighbor's wife Mrs. Mather.

That had stated that he, James Stone, and Sir Hereward's valet had been summoned into the Baronet's presence during the absence of her ladyship, and required to witness their master sign a paper. They were paid to hold their tongues, and given to understand it was a will, reinstating Mr. Herbert, and most handsomely providing for Lady Cunningham.

He dismissed them with the entreaty that, should he die suddenly, they would make the existence of this will known, if he had not done so previously.

The Baronet dead, the valet had believed that he was doing right in telling her ladyship of the will. Whereupon, not without much difficulty in either case, she had with a large sum purchased the witnesses' silence, James Stone consenting to take less if he were kept in idleness all his days.

In regard to Hilda, her identity was equally placed beyond dispute, for Jane Derner also confessed everything. Lady Cunningham had sent her the very day after the Baronet's death to London, to remove Herbert's child, as if to take it to its father, and to pay any debts that might be owing in Herbert's name.

The little thing was at once put to school as Hilda Horne, and there she remained until fourteen, when she was taken to Lady Cunningham, who was then abroad.

There was one mystery yet that needed elucidating—what had become of Herbert Cunningham?

Here Jane Derner could give a little, but very little, help, and that, she averred, was only obtained by chance.

Having been down to the village on the night previous to the Baronet's death, in taking a short cut through the trees she had come upon two persons. One she knew to be my lady; and the other she had imagined was Herbert Cunningham.

She could not get near enough to hear what was being said, but the two seemed on friendly terms.

Before they parted they had come closer, and Jane Derner heard Lady Cunningham distinctly say these words: "Farewell until to-morrow, I need not say be punctual."

The next day, entering the oak bedchamber while the Baronet was under the influence of a soporific, she had seen my lady coming through the secret panel into the room. Jane Derner had noiselessly withdrawn, unperceived; but when her time came to watch, she had entered the passage herself, but found nothing, save that the boards were very unsafe, and at one part had, as it appeared to her, recently broken, or been broken away, exposing a dark, yawning chasm below.

Whether Jane Derner's recital was true, or she had reconstructed it to shield herself from the punishment of complicity, could not be decided, but the connecting link of her story and Sir Herbert's singular disappearance was arrived at when the workmen, removing the ruins of the west wing, came upon a skeleton, which the letters and remnants of clothes found near, proved to have once been Herbert Cunningham, at a spot that must have been immediately beneath the secret passage.

Lady Cunningham had lured the unhappy man to his ruin, and he had fallen into the trap.

Little remains to be told. Though the second will was never discovered, Hilda, by the first, came into her right, as Lady Cunningham had died unmarried.

Being so friendless, she readily consented to a quiet union with Jack, when they started for the Continent, to which Lord Bramber, rather crestfallen, but thankful for his escape, had already flown.

It was three years before Mr. and Mrs. Bramber returned to Cunningham, which soon put on quite a gay and festive appearance. Happiness, as unalloyed as earthly happiness can be, took up its perpetual abode there. The ancient walls, and the dim, soft shadows among the old trees, were made musical by children's laughter. But to their dying day, a cold, chill shudder would pass through Jack and Hilda, even in their supremest moments of happiness, when they thought of beautiful Lady Gwendoline and her bitter vengeance.

THE END.

ABOUT BEARDS.

Beards in these days are not as popular as formerly, nor are they as long. Rauber Von Talberg, a German Knight and councillor of Maximilian II., who died in 1575, sported a beard reaching to the ground and then back to his waist. John Mayo a celebrated painter of the sixteenth century, who was a small man, had a beard that dragged on the ground when he stood upright. The beard of George Killingworth, one of the agents of Queen Mary to Ivan the Terrible in 1565, was five feet and two inches long. While the loss of a leg was only estimated at 12 shillings, that of a beard was twenty shillings. The desire for beards was so strong, that the false article was worn, and Pedo IV of Aragon, in 1351, was compelled to prohibit its use. The King of Persia, according to Chrysostemus, wore a beard made of gold, and the Kings of France of the first dynasty, had their beards entwined with gold. In England beards were taxed. The sheriff of Canterbury paid three shillings and four pence for his beard, and in the first year of Elizabeth's reign, all beards above two week's growth were taxed three shillings and six pence, but the law on this subject was never enforced. Peter the Great also taxed beards, one rouble, but his law like Elizabeth's was two absurd to be regarded.

LIVER COMPLAINT AND INDIGESTION.

DEAR SIR,—My business has been that of an engraver and carver in wood. Owing to confinement to ill-ventilated rooms my health gradually declined, when I was unable any longer to prosecute my business. At this time I was suffering from great prostration of strength, extreme indigestion, and disordered liver. My usual weight was 135 pounds, but I had become so much emaciated that I weighed but 100 pounds. In the early part of May, last, I commenced taking the Peruvian Syrup, and almost immediately felt its tonic and invigorating influence. In the course of four months I used four bottles. My weight this day is 149 pounds. I have neither liver complaint nor indigestion, but consider myself in a perfect state of health, and in good spirits. James Morse, No. 43 Pleasant St., Charlestown, Mass. Sold by all druggists.

Sure but not slow.—People who have used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil to get rid of pain, find that it is sure but not slow. A cough, even of long standing, is speedily controlled and cured by it. Rheumatism, neuralgia, corns, lame back, and swelled neck rapidly disappear when it is used.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 60c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

A Great Cause of Human Misery

In the Loss of

MANHOOD

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands every youth and every man in the land.

AGAIN!

Once again time has brought us to the farmer's busy season, and the merchant's correspondingly dull one. With the fall in trade comes the usual annual cry for HELP from the unfortunate merchant whose injudicious buying has again placed him in the unenviable position of having too much left over. The cry comes in many ways, but whether it comes as "cutting down prices," "Monster clearing sales," or a discount of five or ten per cent, it is still the same melancholy wail, the oft repeated acknowledgment of business incapacity.

We are again in a position to inform our friends that we will happily be under no necessity of making any extra effort to dispose of our summer stock, as we shall CARRY NONE OVER.

We are now constantly receiving by express such lines of goods as are in daily demand at the present season, including:—

Robe Prints,
Gold and Black Prints,
Embroideries,
Curtain Nets,
Athole Shirtings,
Boating Shawls, &c.

MUNRO & ALEXANDER

Local News Record.

MASONIC.—In the Grand Chapter of Canada V. E. Comp H. C. Winch, of Peterborough, has been appointed Grand Director of Ceremonies.

Boys' Tweed Suits are being sold by I Robinson & Co. for $3 and upwards, and men's good all wool suits for $8.00 and upwards. 10-tf

VITAL STATISTICS.—The Town Clerk reports the following births, deaths and and marriages as registered at his office, as Division Registrar, for the month of June:—Births, 11; marriages, 5; deaths, 9.

A BAD PRACTICE.—Some boys in town stick to the habit of defacing and tearing down posters. If an example was made of a few of them, we think a stop would be put to this practice.

PORT HOPE HARBOR POLICY.—A Belleville paper says:—"Mr. James Stevenson, of Peterborough, is receiving his coal supply via Belleville and the Grand Junction, in order to avoid the harbor tolls at Port Hope.

BAND COMPETITION.—The Peterboro' Fire Brigade Band are practising nightly for the International Band tournament at Ingersoll in September. They say they prefer any "blowing" on the part of their friends to be held over till after their return.

FOR THE WARM WEATHER.—Men and Boys' Linen and Lustre Coats and Straw Hats. A nice lot of Ladies Muslin Dress Goods. Crompton Corsets from 18 to 33 inches. Be sure you try our Green, Black, or Japan Tea at 50c per pound. W. J. Wallace Lakefield. 28-4t

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The annual exhibition of the Peterborough Horticultarol Society will take place in Bradburn's Hall, on Tuesday, September first, when we have no doubt that the success which has attended previous exhibitions will be eclipsed, as the season has been unusually favorable for a fine display of out-door growth.

OUR CIVIC HOLIDAY.—In compliance with a numerously signed requisition, Mayor Smith has issued his proclamation calling upon all good citizens to observe Thursday next, the 18th inst., as a Civic Holiday. We understand that the Fire Brigade and the Lacrosse Club will offer a programme for the amusement of the public on that day.

FIRE ON THE MIDLAND.—On Friday last, an overhead bridge across the Midland Railway track, about three miles north of Lindsay, was set on fire by a spark from a passing locomotive, and entirely destroyed, notwithstanding the attempts of a number of persons to extinguish the flames. The bridge was a cheap wooden one and was not very valuable.

COOL BUSINESS.—This artist of the burnt cork gave an exhibition on Friday evening, in Bradburn's Hall, to a limited audience. The company may be described as "slim," but Cool was a whole show, as usual, in himself. The fact is, Cool is just at present rusticating in the north country on his summer holidays, and takes an occasional "rise" out of the surrounding villages, to ease the calls on his pocket.

GONE OVER TO THE MAJORITY.—After all the trouble taken to induce the paper mills to locate here they have finally chosen Cornwall as the location for their cotton mills. The expense gone to by the town, and the trouble and liberality of Mr. Cox, have therefore gone for nothing. We have it on good authority that the decision to go to Cornwall was come to some time previous to their visit here, which was a blind to promote some object of their own.

CONTINUED IMPROVEMENT.—Wm Elliott writes from Thornbury as follows:—"Enclosed please find $1.50, year's subscription price for EXAMINER. Am much pleased with the continued improvement of its style and matter." These are the kind of subscribers for whom it is a pleasure to labor. They not only pay up promptly, which is a duty of common honesty too many overlook, but encourage the journalist to new exertions, to retain and improve upon their good opinion.

THE GAME OF DRAUGHTS.—R. McLaurin, of this town, has sent $10 to the Sporting Editor of the Mail with the following note:—"Preparatory to playing the return match between Downs and myself, I challenge any other player residing in the city of Toronto to play me twelve games of checkers for $40 a side, play to begin in the third or fourth week of the present month, say the 16th or 23rd. I will give or take $10 for expenses outside of the stakes. Anyone who may chance to accept will please forward articles to my address."

POLICE COURT.—Jos. Valois, an old central prison bird, got drunk and behaved in a disorderly manner on the streets on Monday. The exploit cost him $2 fine and $1 costs on Tuesday. Margaret Weston on Tuesday charged John Weston with assault with intent, on July 5th last. Defendant is her husband and had abused her through jealousy. The wife swore that he kicked her so badly that she had to lie in bed for a week, and threatened to throw her down stairs and break her neck. Defendandant pleaded guilty to a charge of common assault and was fined $10 and $5 costs. He was afterwards ordered to find bonds to keep the peace, himself in $200 and two sureties of $200 each. Not being able to find sureties, he was sent gaol in default.

JUST RECEIVED.—New Black Cash mares, Black Bunting Prints, New Tapestry Carpets, and Lace Curtains, New Boots and Shoes, also a splendid lot of New Tweed Suits for men and boys. W. J. WALLACE, Lakefield. 20-tf

ST. ANDREW'S S. S. EXCURSION.—According to announcement, this excursion took place on Friday to Summit, when the managers were agreeably surprised at the number who presented themselves. Ticket sellers, in fact, were almost taken by storm. The train arrived at Summit about noon, without any mishap, thus giving the party five hours before returning. Owing to Mr. Fitzgerald's genial management everything passed off pleasantly. Engineer Young gave a lively ride to town, where they arrived about 6.30. It is a pleasure to know that after paying for all their own scholars the School has still a clean balance sheet. Receipts, $40.

NO EXCUSE FOR SHABBINESS.—The great sale of ready-made clothing now entered upon by Messrs. William Fairweather & Co., and to be continued during the next two weeks, offers unparalelled bargains in ready-made clothing and tweed suits. Pants and vests, and gents' furnishings will be sold at prices never before offered in Peterborough. A splendid lot of gents' FINE DRESS SHIRTS TO BE SOLD AT 75c. TO $1.00, easily worth double the money in ordinary trade. Five hundred yards of all-wool tweeds will be sold by the yard at 50c. to 75c., EVEN LESS THAN MANUFACTURERS' PRICES. No such bargains have ever before been offered here. Clothing will be made up at reduced prices during the sale. Terms strictly cash. 32-1in

FIRE IN ASHBURNHAM.—On Tuesday evening, shortly after six o'clock, fire was discovered issuing from the stables attached to the dwelling of Jas. Lynch, on Douro street, Ashburnham, just east of the railway track. The fire spread rapidly, and in a brief time enveloped the dwelling, a large, frame, rough-cast house. Meanwhile the neighbors gathered and worked with a will, and succeeded in saving most of the furniture, a considerable portion of which was, however, destroyed. The house and outbuildings were burned to the ground, and we regret to learn that Mr. Lynch will be a heavy loser as there was no insurance whatever. The fire is supposed to have been communicated by a spark from the engine of the evening train from Belleville, as Mrs. Lynch states that she saw sparks flying from the engine, but had no idea of any danger of their catching in the straw at the stable, as is surmised to have been the case.

NEW DRY GOODS FIRM.—A partnership has been formed between Messrs. M. Giroux and Michael J. Sullivan, two young dry goods men well known in Peterborough, who intend opening out a new dry goods business under the name of Giroux & Sullivan, in Cluxton's new block, third store from the corner. The store will be ready for business about the first of September, when they will open out an entirely new stock, consisting of fancy and staple lines of dry goods. Ladies' dress goods and silks will be specialties. Both young men have spent a considerable time with some of the leading merchants of this town—Mr. Giroux having been employed for eight years with Messrs. W. W. Johnston & Co., and Mr. Sullivan five years with Messrs T. Dolan & Co. This alone should be a guarantee of their trustworthiness, and an evidence of their business tact. We have no doubt that both have many friends who will be prepared to extend to them a liberal support in business. They inform us that their stock has been personally selected by themselves, in one of the best wholesale houses in Canada, and that they will be prepared to offer splendid values in every department. 32-1t

AS OTHERS SEE US.—The editor of the Petrolia Topic has been up in this part of the country and this is what he says of Peterborough:—"Peterborough, though dating its birth a considerable distance in the past, bears no traces of primitiveness or ancient homeliness, but is a live, wide awake town of 8,000 inhabitants, containing handsome public, private and business structures, and surrounded and enveloped with an air of cleanly neatness pleasantly contrasting with the memory of the town we left behind us. From here we were carried by the Grand Junction Railway, practically a branch of the Midland, to Hastings, a distance of 22 miles. We cannot refrain from dropping a word of praise for the Midland Railway, not only for the comfort one experiences in riding on its steel-railed roadway, but for the uniform courtesy and kindness met with from every officer on the road. You are not painfully impressed by the idea that every employee whom you brush against holds a controlling interest in the road. For some time the Midland was not a very profitable institution, but under the new general manager, Mr. Geo. A. Cox, and so thoroughly a live and energetic a traffic agent as Mr. White, the financial position of the road is growing yearly stronger and more strong."

OUR REPRESENTATIVE.—The clever writer of Plurabusti Points in the Port Hope Times says:—"I see through the public prints, that the electors of West Peterborough met in a joint conference, or a convention out of joint, as party-colored as Joseph's coat—and to carry out the seeming similarity they cast lots for Joseph's cast-off clothing—and Dr. Kincaid was the lucky winner thereof. Long may he live to wear them, say I, for he is a first-class man in every particular. Is it not strange that the farmers will be content to be mere hewers of wood and drawers of water to party, and allow the towns and villages to rule the roost? The old Newcastle District, famed for its farmers and its fertility of soil and agricultural productions, has but one representative of any productive or industrial pursuit in the Local Legislature. East and West Durham are represented by doctors, East and West Northumberland by merchants, North and South Victoria by gentlemen of leisure, West Peterborough by a doctor, and East Peterborough—to its honor, be it said—by a farmer, in the person of brother Blezard. Two-thirds of the electors are agriculturists, and they represent more than two-thirds of the wealth; and still they are content to browse around the political pasture whilst the towns and villages furnish them with Heaven-born legislators. In short, the country is ruled by the cities, towns and villages—to our shame be it spoken."

ASK YOUR DEALER for "Castorine Machine Oil," and see that the barrel is branded "Castorine," as none other is genuine. 1-1y

BE WISE AND HAPPY.—If you will stop all your extravagant and wrong notions in doctoring yourself and families with expensive doctors or humbug curealls, that do harm always, and use only natures simple remedies for all your ailments—you will be wise, well and happy and save great expense. The greatest remedy for this, the great, wise and good will tell you, is Hop Bitters—rely on it. See another column.—Press. 31-2t

OFF DUTY.—We are requested to announce that the steamer Golden-Eye, having been chartered to convey the Belleville excursionists, to-morrow, from Hastings to Idyl Wild and return, will not make her usual trips from Peterborough; consequently there will be no boat to-morrow.

CHEAP EXCURSION TO BELLEVILLE.—The Excursion under the auspices of the Separate School Board, on Thursday next—the Civic Holiday—promises to be the best of the season. The fare to Belleville and return is placed at $1.00, which is decidedly low. The R. R. Co. are making arrangements by which the excursionists will be provided with first-class accommodation, and the Committee are sparing no pains to make arrangements in Belleville to suit all who may wish to avail themselves of visiting our sister city, and spending a pleasant holiday.

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE.—The number for September affords pleasant instructive, entertaining and edifying reading—not for Sunday only, but for every day in the week. The periodical is religious in tone and sentiment, but sectarianism is strictly avoided, and all sects and all classes of readers will peruse its pages with pleasure and profit. The leading article "American Benefactors," by James Laurence Bowdoin, LL.B has thirteen illustrations, "The Wallachians," with ten illustrations; "Mauritius with five illustrations; and "The Christian Church at Washington, D.C.," are particularly noteworthy articles. There are short stories and sketches by popular writers, and some admirable essays. The poems are of far more than ordinary merit, and several of them are beautifully illustrated. The miscellany is abundant, and contains a vast amount of information and entertainment. A single copy is sold for 25 cents; annual subscription, $3, postpaid. Adress, Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

SINGULAR CASE OF BLOOD POISONING—One of the most singular cases of blood poisoning, which has ever been brought under our notice occurred last week in Otonabee. Mr. Edward Braden, brother of Mr. John Braden, Principal of our Public Schools, by some slight accident had sustained an abrasion on the back of the right hand, about the size of a ten cent piece. While at dinner on Monday of last week a common house-fly lit on the sore, and gave him sufficient annoyance just to be remarked. On Monday the hand was itchy and irritated, but no attention was paid to it. On Wednesday it was swollen to such an extent that a poultice and bandage were applied, without the slightest thought of anything serious. On Thursday Mr. Braden started to come in to Peterborough, but on reaching Keene became so ill that he had to be removed to the office of Dr. Harrison, whence he was subsequently conveyed to his home. The doctor found him suffering from pyemia, or blood-poisoning, and in a very critical condition. With constant and unremitting care and skill on the part of Dr. Harrison, and the best of attention, he has now been pronounced past the crisis of the malady, but not entirely out of danger. Under the most favorable conditions it will be weeks before he recovers an approximate to his ordinary health, and had he not been a man in full health would doubtless before this have succumbed. It is the supposition that the fly which lit on the unhealed abrasion, had previously been on decomposed matter of some kind and had conveyed the poison by the contact of its feet.

TOWN COUNCIL BUSINESS.—At the meeting of the town council on Monday evening the time of the Council was principally taken up with the waterworks discussion, a report of which will be found elsewhere. After the reading and confirmation of the minutes a communication from Mr. Corkery making a requisition for $13.50 for Separate School purposes was referred to the Finance Committee. Leave of absence for two weeks was on motion of Mr. Rutherford granted to P. C. McGhee. A communication from Wm. Toole reminded the Council that he had some time ago submitted to them a communication respecting a new industry, on which no action had yet been taken. The time was drawing near when the matter would have to be decided upon. He knew they had a prospect of obtaining a feasible enterprise, which would be self-supporting from the start and which would give a great deal of labor. He would like the Council to refer the matter to a special committee, to whom he could fully explain the scheme. On motion the subject was referred to the Finance Committee. Accounts of the Times Printing Company $6.50 and $13 were ordered to be paid if certified to. The Mail's printing account of $7.50 and T. Montgomery's account of $26.50 were referred to the Committee. The report of the Finance Committee, received and adopted, recommended payment of the following accounts: J. R. Stratton $3; Dennistoun Bros. & Hall $10; H. Best $6.60; T. Laplante $8.35; Peterborough Gas Company $23.10. The Council then took up the subject of Waterworks.

CARSWELL LODGE I.O.G.T.—On Friday evening last the officers of Carswell Lodge were publicly installed into their several offices by Bro. J. H. Cobb, Temple Deputy, assisted by the G.W.M. and G. W.S. The following are the officers for the present term:—Bro. J. R. Cobb, P. W.C.T., A. E. Lyons, W.C.T.; Sister Lumsden, W.V.T.; Bro. G. A. Mitchell, W.S.; Bro. G. Y. Early, W.F.S.; Bro. Wm. Cocks, W. Treas.; C. Huffman, W. D.; Bro. W. Beavis, W. Chap.; Sister Anderson, W.I.G.; Bro. J. King, W.O.G.; Sister Wallace, R.H.S.; Sister M. Moore, L.H.S.; Sister Baxter, W.D.M.; Sister G. A. Mitchell, W.A.S.; Bro. J. H. Cobb, Lodge Deputy. Miss Minnie Cobb was then presented by A. E. Lyons and G. J. Early, on behalf of the lodge members, with a beautiful music-holder and volume of Mendelssohn's songs, accompanied with an illuminated address, in recognition of her valuable services as organist. Prizes were then presented as follows:—Sister E. Morris, by Bro. J. H. Cobb, a Degree Regalia, for bringing in the largest number of names for membership; Bro. Early, an order to the amount of $3, in photographs, for second largest number of names, by Bro. J. King; Sister E. Mitchell, a large gilt volume of Methodist Hymns, by G. A. Mitchell, for the best entertainment, under "good and welfare," during the term; Sister F. Douglas, a set of solid silver spoons, by G. J. Early, for second best. The remainder of the evening was spent in songs by the lodge choir, reading by Miss Holmes, and recitations by W. H. Moore and Mrs. G. A. Mitchell. Great credit is due to the sisters for the beautiful manner in which they furnished and decorated the Hall. Everything passed off to the general satisfaction of all present.

THE IRISH LAND BILL.

The Lords Reject the Commons' Amendments.

The Elected House Send the Bill Back Vetoed.

A Crisis Avoided by the Submission of the Aristocracy.

AUG. 12.—The Bill as amended in the House of Commons came up to-day in the House of Lords. All important amendments made by the Lords have been restored. Salisbury moved the appointment of a committee to draw up reasons for disagreeing with the House of Commons. Granville, in assenting to the motion, expressed his regret as a private individual at the manner in which the Opposition had shown how little they were influenced by this great question, and by the declarations of an immense majority of the constituencies of the United Kingdom on the subject. The motion was agreed to. Salisbury brought in the reasons for disagreeing with the Commons, and the House adjourned.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Mr. Gladstone was loudly cheered this afternoon by a large crowd at the entrance of the Commons. The galleries of the House were crowded, a large number of Peers being present. Various petitions were presented, amid cheers from the Liberals, against the House yielding to the Lords impairing the protection afforded tenants by the Land Bill. All the essential amendments of the Lords affecting the main principles of the Bill were thrown out, some minor amendments being accepted. The Standard says there is no longer any doubt that the Bill will become law without difficulty. The amendments accepted and changes made by the Government were the result of negotiations with the Opposition, and it is understood that Lord Salisbury will ask the House of Lords to accept the Bill as returned from the Commons. The Daily News says:—It is understood that the Lords will accept the revision of their amendment by the Commons, and before the end of next week the Bill will receive the Royal assent.

The Executive Committee of the Birmingham Liberal Association, at a meeting to-night, passed a resolution expressing alarm and indignation at the action of the House of Lords, urging the Government not to give way, and declaring that the time has arrived for the nation to decide that a policy declared by the Government and the House of Commons essential to the peace and welfare of the country shall not be subject to reversal by an irresponsible hereditary chamber.

LONDON, July 16.—In the House of Lords the Marquis of Salisbury stated that the Opposition would not take any action which would send the Land Bill back to the Commons, which has removed its dangerous excrescences. He expressed the hope that the Bill would be a great benefit to tenants, and not much harm to land laws. The Lords then agreed to the amendments of the Commons.

The Daily News says:—Arrangements are maturing to hold a Royal Commission to morrow, when the Land Bill will receive the Royal assent. When these arrangements are carried out the Act will reach Dublin on Saturday, and Ireland will be forthwith under the new law. The Parnellites believe that what is left of this week will barely suffice for the discussion of the Irish votes.

At Death's Door.

Critical Condition of the Wounded President.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Graphic's Washington special says that the universal sympathy felt for Mrs. Garfield in her present affliction will be greatly heightened by the knowledge that she again expects to become a mother about the end of November.

Said Blaine, who, on the day of his departure, saw the President for the first time soon after he was wounded. "I was much affected by the change in his appearance." On the other hand, Secretary Pruden, who saw the President ten days ago, and was appalled by his emaciation, saw him again on Friday, and was agreeably surprised by the change.

The Capital yesterday had a severe editorial on the management of the President's case. It says, "Why cannot the attending surgeons let the country know that its President is a mere wreck of a man through all this prostration? Let the truth be known; our President is sinking fast and his condition is most critical."

BROOKLYN, Aug. 15.—The Eagle's Washington special says:—The medical profession agree that the failure of the President to enjoy good rest last night is a terrible strain upon his system. The stomachic irritability and vomiting are alarming symptoms taken in connection with the high pulse and temperature of this morning, the period when the President should be free from extreme excitement. The bad night cannot be attributed to a want of careful dressing of the wound, as Dr. Bliss performed the operation with his usual care and thoroughness. At half past twelve to-day President was greatly prostrated.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for September is an unusually attractive and entertaining Number—an argosy richly laden with the treasures of Summerland. The Number opens with two exquisite engravings; the frontispiece—a full-page illustration, by by ABBEY of one of HERRICK'S poems—engraved by SMITHWICK and FRENCH; the other an engraving by COLE, of Mrs. JESSIE CURTIS SHEPHERD'S beautiful drawing illustrating a poem by H. H., entitled "The Little Kings and Queens." Then we have an interesting, breezy article, by W. H. RIDEING, entitled "The English at the Sea-side," describing several famous watering-places—Southport, Brighton, Hastings, and Margate—with twelve illustrations by C. S. REINHART. Another summer article of remarkable interest is Mr. E. H. ROPES'S on The Thousand Islands. The subject has the enchantments of Lotus Land; and among the illustrations is an excellent portrait of Dr. J. G. Holland, engraved by COLE. There is the serial variety in addition, and a paper by E. S. ATWATER, entitled "The Wheat Fields of the Northwest." According to this writer's estimate, Lord Beaconsfield was not an untrustworthy prophet when, in 1879, he predicted that supremacy as a grain-growing country would soon be attained by Canada.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

Peterborough was golden opinions from the visiting knights of the quill on the recent excursion of the Canadian Press Association. Mayor Pense, of Kingston, editor of the Whig, and President elect of the Association, writes in his paper as follows:—

"First impressions of a town are always weighty, and Peterborough made them most favourably. After landing at a neat station surrounded by a bustling crowd, the press party were taken in charge by Mayor Smith and his Councillors, one of whom is an old Kingstonian, an assistant at the Manchester warehouse when it was the pride of the market square as a business place. A drive was taken about town in charge of these gentlemen, Mr. Carnegie, of the Review, leading off in a style which ought to inspire the equine population to rise up and denounce him. In the moonlight an excursion was given upon Little Lake by Messrs. Stratton and Carnegie, of the EXAMINER and the Review. The large steamer Golden-Eye was made lively, the invitation being shared by a couple of hundreds of Peterborough's sons and daughters, and the fine Fire brigade Band accompanying. It is upon the border of this picturesque lake that the beautiful cemetery is located.

"Peterborough has won golden opinions from her visitors. Having very fine stores, neat streets, handsome residences, great woolen mills working day and night, flourishing foundries that furnish even the front towns with work, an imposing Town Hall and Post Office buildings, and last but not least, well equipped printing offices, it combines a busy life with elegance and comfort, and Canadian thrift with commendable enterprise. One monument of failure only is conspicuous, the extensive brick works in which Mr. Romaine, founder of the Review, sank the goodly competence he made at his true profession.

"The citizens were, at the time of the visit, indulging in no common exultation, that of being second only to St. Thomas, in its rapid rise in population in the last decade. The people, if we mistake not, have nearly trebled in number through substantial, steady growth, while St. Thomas has been built up at one stroke, almost, by the location of railway workshops. Counting on Ashburnham, across the river, which, though a separate village, is so tributary to the main town as not even to possess a post office of its own, Peterborough claims a population of 8,000. Location has done more for the place than its people could ever do. It has become, without bonus or sacrifice, a pivotal point for two railroads, the Midland and Grand Junction, now united, and it is certain of a third iron link so soon as the first of the projected Toronto and Ottawa lines is built. Its phenomenal growth has led its people impudently to say that Port Hope and Lindsay are too near Peterborough, ever to be places of any style. Kingston is not a little honored in its College graduates, Dr. O'Sullivan having been its member recently, and Dr. Kincaid being its present almost unanimous choice."

RAILWAY NOTES.

Work has been commenced on the new telegraph line in connection with the Grand Junction Railway.

The railway crossing at Bethune and Sherbrooke streets has been put in apple-pie order, thanks to Councillor McNaughton's indefatigable persistence.

The Toronto and Ottawa surveying party have reached Ottawa, and are now working in Moberley. The survey has been completed to Casselman, on the South Nation river.

The Midland authorities are completing the work of putting down sidings for accommodation of the mills of the Dickson estate, and are making preparations to put a track down into the lumber yard of Mr. J. Z. Rogers.

An injunction was moved for in Toronto on the 9th to restrain the Grand Junction Railway from proceeding with their bridge across the Trent on the ground that it is not being built in accordance with the terms of the order-in-Council permitting it.

Mr. Cox deserves the thanks of the people of this town, and of those residing on the line between Midland and Beaverton, for the Saturday market fares announced in another part of this paper. Tickets to Orillia and return will be issued at all stations between the points named for a single fare, each Saturday.—Orillia Packet.

Mr. J. C. Bailie, Chief Engineer of the Toronto and Ottawa R. R., says the road is now located from Peterboro' to the Coteau Road landing, and men are at work grading. Mr. J. R. Campbell, of Port Perry, is buying the right of way for Mr. Gooderham and paying the cash for it. Tenders are now being asked for the construction of forty-seven miles, from Madoc to Sharbott Lake. It will take three years to build the whole line, the length of which is 236 miles from Toronto to Ottawa, fifty miles shorter than by the Grand Trunk. The estimated cost is $6,000,000.—Whig.

The traffic returns of the Midland and Grand Junction Railways for the week ending Aug. 7th, 1881, were as follows:—Midland Railway—Passengers and Mails, $2,476.45; Freight, $6,004.39. total. $8,480.84, as compared with $6,954.64 for the corresponding week of 1880, being an increase of $1,526.20; and the aggregate traffic to date is $203,083.11, being an increase of $26,473.12 over 1880. Grand Junction Railway—Passengers and Mails, $696.13; Freight, $1,592.94, total, $2,289.07, as compared with $781.95 for the corresponding week of 1880, being an increase of $1,507.12; and the aggregate traffic from 1st June to date is $20,318.60, being an increase of $12,188.68 over 1880.

LITTEL'S LIVING AGE.—The numbers of The Living Age dated August 6th and August 13th, contains articles from the Fortnightly; Contemporary; Blackwood; Cornhill; Temple Bar, Pall Mall Gazette; Le Journal des Debats; with instalments of "In Trust a Story of a Lady and her Lover," "The Freres," by Mrs. Alexander, and "Cousin Felix," by the author of "Molly" and the usual amount of poetry. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littel & Co., Boston are the publishers.

The Wool Trade.

The following letter of a Philadelphia dealer to Mr. W. H. Wrighton, and the subjoined trade circular of Justice, Bateman & Co., will be of deep interest to our wool growers, not only as giving reliable information upon the state and prospects of the wool market, but as indicating the course to be pursued by growers to adapt their productions to the requirements of the market, and to produce wool that will command the highest price:

243 SOUTH 5TH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

DEAR SIR,—The price you expect for your wool is too high for our market, or any other in the United States. The demand for Canada wools is so very limited, and is daily contracting, so that a dealer will not touch it at any reasonable price.

English Leicester wools are selling in London and Liverpool at 10½d. to 11d. per lb., free on board,—that is 21 to 22 cents our currency. The freight is but a trifle more, and I can telegraph to my broker and have any amount of those wools laid down in Philadelphia about as quick as I can get wool from Canada, and fully equal in all respects, and superior in many, to any Canada wool ever grown.

The parties I sold your wool to last year belonged to the Sprague Estate, (Owen Bros. were only agents) and the whole of their mills are stopped. They employed 5,000 hands. The Atlantic Mills, part of that estate, were the largest buyers of Canada wools last year, and their prospect of resuming business is very slight. The Bradford trade for Lustre goods is almost if not quite ruined. The change in the fashions to softer yarns, which is so general in England, will not be very long before it reaches here, and then your wools will be only saleable at a very low rate for carpet and blanket purposes, about 15 to 20 cents per lb.

I am not writing what I do to influence you in any way, but if you get a cash offer over 25 cents, take it at once. Some years since I offered Burnett & Elliott, of London, for a lot of 100,000 lbs. 55 cents per lb. They kept that wool and sold it at 25 or 26 cents; the consequences to them very serious. This year there is nothing to indicate any approach to last year's rates, and whoever sells at a fair profit on the purchase will be best off. I enclose you Coates' circular, it is the most reliable one that is issued. Their rates are 90 day terms, and they would pay you cash on sale of your wool, but would charge you 3½ per cent. for the guarantee, which 6 per cent., their commissions, warehousing, grading, etc., besides a certain shrinkage of 1½ to 2 cents in bulk in handling and re-weighing. All commission houses charge the same rate here. You see their quotations for Canada wools, and every commission house tries to make everything look bright to entice consignments, as they well know they are sure to make money whether the consignor does or not.

Truly yours,
August 11, 1881. THOS. C. WADE.

WOOL TRADE CIRCULAR.

Philadelphia August 10th., 1881.

"Dear Sir:—A feature of the present clip of the United States of vital importance to shippers, is the increased proportion of undesirable coarse wool and the decrease of the most desirable and higher priced medium. This occurs in sections where medium has heretofore been most grown, and is the result of crossing the Canada and other long coarse wooled English breeds on the Coarse and low medium native stock.

"The tendency of this Coarse breed is to stamp its character upon the wool of its progeny, and so much of it is now produced there is a surplus of the Coarse grade which is crowding out the more desirable and higher priced medium.

"Wool growers can correct this by re-crossing these Coarse breeds with the merino, and can thereby improve the value of the wool from five to ten cents per pound.

"With the exception of a short time during the war the half breed merino or medium wool has for many years past sold for five to ten cents per pound more than the Coarse, and during the past ten has brought more, than the fine.

"No 1 medium or half breed merino wool has never been in over supply, and to-day commands a higher price, and is most wanted of all qualities. It is also the only grade that is seldom if ever menaced by foreign competition, while the Coarse English and Canada wools are only now excluded by a slender margin.

"While the most desirable as well as the undesirable qualities are bought for about the same price from the grower, it makes but little difference to him what he raises, but it makes a vast difference to the purchaser whether he buys wool worth in the Eastern market five to seven cents per pound above cost landed here or that much less.

"Wool is steadier and confidence is increasing, though manufacturers are offish. Rumors of lower prices in the country encourage them to look for cheaper wool. Their goods are selling freely and as wool is in short supply and below the cost of foreign, with a reasonable prospect of an enormous consumption, we think the present weak condition of the market only temporary. If wool can be bought of the grower at the rumored decline, we think it good to take advantage of the present depression and secure it.

"Yours Very truly,
"Justice Bateman & Co."

MEETING OF THE GRAND ENCAMPMENT OF ONTARIO.

The Grand Encampment, I. O. O. F., of Ontario, commenced its annual session, at Brantford, on Tuesday of last week.

The attendance of representatives was large, and from the officers' reports the Order appears to have had a very prosperous year.

The Secretary's report showed the number of members last year to be 1,761; initiated during the year, 312; admitted by card, 59; reinstated, 9; total, 370. From which deduct: Withdrawn, by card, 51; suspended for non-payment of dues, 94; expelled, 3; deceased, 11; total, 159. Net increase as per returns, 211. Deduct membership of Encampments defunct, 119. Total, 92. Now in membership, 1,883. No. of Patriarchs relieved, 133. Total relief paid, $1,060.92. Some men working near by came up in time to save the child from injury, but the eagle refused to go any distance away until shot at.

The "Loyalty" Dodge Again.

The journalist who endeavored to follow and confute the foolish aspersions upon the Liberal leaders, which flow from the crazy recklessness of the Mail, would have a difficult and laborious task, not, indeed, by reason of any trouble in disposing of the slanders themselves, but from sheer force of their numbers. The "new hand" brings an indefatigable elbow to the bellows of the Tory organ, and if Mr. Bunting, M. P., be satisfied with the quality of the music, he has certainly no reason to complain of lack of quantity. It is idle to remonstrate with this Bombastes Furioso on his useless sacrifice of truth and decency, to say nothing of the valuable columns of his patron, or to prove his fast-flowing falsehoods what they are. In the face of confutation of his slander, which would make a brass monkey blush, he calmly repeats the lie, and calls upon the "honest men of Canada" to stand at his back, while he denounces Blake, the Borgia; Blake, the Assassin; Blake, the Bully; Blake, the Coward, etc., etc., in a manner which is highly refreshing indeed. The secret of such apparently callous and unblushing effrontery, and such open disregard for the interests of the Mail and the opinion of the public, lies in the fact that Mr. Griffin is not half so much Mr. Bunting's editor, as he is Tupper's Toady. His forcible feebles cast at Mr. Blake are but a reflection from the light of his master, and make up in venom and vehemence what they lack in truth and ability. It is pleasing to Sir Charles to see Mr. Blake abused: hence this journalistic lazarone finds himself editor of the Mail, with full license to lie about Mr. Blake to his heart's content, without fear of rebuke or punishment,—for the man whom he seeks to traduce, so far from being roused to resentment, does not even honor him with his contempt, but calmly shakes the reptile off, as St. Paul did the viper, without regarding it, or without receiving harm. The latest "find" of this political scavenger is that Mr. Blake's "most "active partisans in the Lower Provinces "are men who are neither loyal to the "Confederation nor the Empire. On "every hustings he was surrounded by "men who look on Canada as a foreign "country. At every meeting he was "cheered, when he was cheered, by men "who would have been ten times as enthusiastic if he had hinted that it was "their duty to rebel and break up the "the Union. If Mr. Huntington had "given a hint of annexation, he would "have succeeded better than with the "hen story." Possibly the gentleman who has been brought from Halifax to enlighten the Province of Ontario, through the columns of the Mail, is not aware that the people of this Province have seen this "annexation" bugaboo before on many occasions, and that they are not at all likely to be in the least degree affected by it. They know that it was not Mr. Huntington, but Sir Alex. Galt, who signed an Annexation manifesto; that it was not Mr. Blake, but Sir George Cartier, who was in arms against his Queen; that it was not Mr. Mackenzie, but Mr. William McDougall, who preached Annexation, and advised his countrymen to look to Washington; that it was no less a personage than the Right Honorable Sir John Alexander Macdonald, K.C.M.G., etc., who no longer ago than in 1874, publicly advised the British Columbians to secede from the Union. The less the Mail has to say about Annexation and anti-Confederation the better, for it may be in the memory of some that this same effusive loyalist was himself, at one time, one of the most bitter of the anti-Confederates, and, as editor of the Halifax Chronicle, wrote some very hard and naughty things about the Union, and his new political Catechist, Sir Charles Tupper. There are no Annexationists in this country, if we can believe in the sincerity of the repentance of Sir Alex. Galt and Mr. McDougall, and nobody in the Lower Provinces wants at this day to break up the Union; though they do well to remember that they were betrayed into it in an unconstitutional manner by Sir Charles Tupper, who corrupted a Legislature, elected to oppose Confederation, in order to force the scheme upon an unwilling people in spite of their franchise. The Nova Scotians have had to accept Confederation, and have found and admit that in the result it was in their best interests; but they cannot be blamed for remembering that the author of the high-handed measure which has handed over our North-West heritage in perpetuity to a corporate monopoly, is the same man who so grossly violated the rights of the electors of that Province in bringing them into Confederation.

"Motive Power Running to Waste."

Such is the title of an article in the Toronto World, which will, we trust, tend to awaken the interest of capitalists who are engaged, or who seek to engage, in manufacturing enterprise. We quote the article below:—

"The manufacturing industries of New England owe their success in a large measure to the cheap motive power supplied by the rivers and streams of that country. The cost of fuel in the supply of steam power is of itself a heavy tax on manufactures, to say nothing of the additional cost of machinery and attendance. With saw-mills of course the fuel item is a mere trifle—measured by the cost of cutting and handling the refuse. But with cotton and woollen mills and many other industries it is a very considerable item, especially in the old settled districts. And that is one reason why these industries do do not thrive in the old settled parts of Ontario: good water privileges are rare and fuel is dear.

But back north, in our lake country, there are splendid opportunities for prosecuting manufactures. In that country millions of horse-power are running waste every day. In the counties of Simcoe, Victoria and Peterborough, the districts of Muskoka and Parry Sound, and the whole country northward to French river and eastward to the Ottawa, there are water privileges that in number and power we believe to be unapproached in any other section of equal extent in the world.

"The whole country is dotted with lakes and intersected by rivers, and much of it accessible by boats in the season of navigation. Then there are such railways as the Midland, the Northern, the Canada Central, and half a score of other roads extending back from lake Ontario and the river St. Lawrence, whereby cheap and ready communication could be had with the markets of the world. With this water-power properly utilized, Ontario might take its place as the great manufacturing state of the continent.

"One of the present drawbacks is the want of knowledge of the motive-power resources of our lake country. Nine-tenths of it is wilderness, known only to trappers, lumbermen or the Government surveyors. A great public service might be rendered by the appointment of a commission of engineers to make a thorough report on this motive power running waste."

It has been too much the fashion for manufacturers in this Province to cling to localities in proximity to the Grand Trunk Railway, as affording the only available facilities for prompt and convenient despatch of freight and advantageous communication with markets. This argument no doubt at one time possessed much force, but now the circumstances are entirely changed. Instead of a back country sparsely settled, without sufficient communication, we have now a well-settled, wealthy and productive country, rapidly developing to the northward, with extensive and lucrative interior markets. The trunk lines of communication are in a short time to be removed from the lake shore, and will in the future run through the heart of the country from Toronto to Ottawa, while a third line, away to the north, will be provided by the Canada Pacific construction. The great market of the future for the manufacturers of Ontario will be in the Canadian North-West, and those who are wise will take for their base of operations a point which will afford as cheap and short communication as possible with that western trade. Peterborough offers exceptional facilities for this trade. It has magnificent water powers, equal to an almost unlimited capacity for manufacturing. It is advantageously situated, and possesses ample means of communication, east, west, north and south, both by rail and water. It affords one of the best routes to the North-West, whether by the Midland to Midland Bay, or connecting directly with the proposed Ontario and Pacific Junction and the Canada Pacific Railway proper. It must ultimately, in the nature of things, for the laws of economy must direct the course of trade and manufacture, become an important manufacturing centre, and they will be wise who make sure of the advantages offered, while they are to be secured on advantageous terms.

Election in Argenteuil.

Last Wednesday the nomination to fill the vacancy in Argenteuil, created by the unseating of Hon. J. J. C. Abbott, took place—the voting yesterday. Up to the hour of going to press, we had not been apprised of the result, but knowing something of the constituency and the influences resorted to by the Tories there, we fear that the honest vote of the county, which is Liberal to the core, will have been overcome by the agents and employees of the Government, and its contractors along the public works at Grenville and other places, and that Mr. Abbott will again owe his seat to the same causes which have just unseated him. La Patrie says:—"Our friends have "organized a vigorous campaign, and "success is certain if they exercise sufficient vigilance in watching the ready "agents of Mr. Abbott. No corruption, "no Conservative victory in Argenteuil. "That is something known for several "years." We hope our confrere's anticipations may be realized; but we fear not. We do not attach so much importance to the result of this election, as affecting the strength of parties, as to the graver danger which it initiates. Mr. Abbott was the manipulator of the Pacific scandal infamy—who for his employer, Sir Hugh Allan, acted on Sir John's oft expressed maxim, that "every man has his price," bought the price of the Premier and his principal colleagues, and bought them body and bones. That is not a matter of so much moment now. Mr. Abbott wanted instruments, he purchased them, and used them. But Mr. Abbott is the Solicitor of the Syndicate at $25,000 a year, and it is the first entering of the wedge, the danger of which was pointed out by the leaders of the Liberal party, that is likely in the future to threaten the independence of Parliament. If a great corporation like the Pacific Railway Syndicate, handling millions of the people's money through the Government, and vitally interested in retaining a long list of monopolies and exemptions which must before long be the object of serious attack in the interest of the settlers of the North-West and of the people of the older Provinces who will have to trade with them, is to be represented in Parliament by its agents, officers and servants, supporting a Government which it has so much interest in maintaining in power, then we are confronted with the shadow of a great danger—a danger the extent of which we can estimate from the experience of the neighboring Republic, whose legislatures, both national and state, have for years past vainly struggled to free themselves from the influence of rings controlled by the money-power and patronage of powerful railway corporations. It will be the duty of the Liberal leaders to again, next session, press on the House a measure to disqualify such agents from sitting in the House, and if their efforts prove unsuccessful, as it is to be feared they will, then the people will be asked to enforce at the polls in the next general elections, the measures by which this necessary safeguard can be erected between Parliament and the gigantic land and railway corporation, which the reckless and unpatriotic conduct of the present Government has endowed with powers that are threatening to the liberty, freedom, welfare and future of the great North-West.

The Syndicate Plunder.

The Gateway Express, of Emerson, Manitoba, gives the following interesting table of charges on goods from Montreal to Emerson. It says:—"The freight on "a car load of first-class goods from "Montreal to Emerson amounts to $470, "and is thus distributed:

Grand Trunk Railway, distance 996 miles	$ 80 00
Chicago, M. & St. Paul Railway, distance 409 miles	98 00
St. Paul, M. and M. Railway, distance 399 miles	$291 00

This last line is owned by the men who compose the Syndicate."

It will be seen that the charge by the Grand Trunk is 8.13 cents per mile; the Chicago, Minnesota and St. Paul Railway charge 24 cents per mile, and the Syndicate's railway about seventy-five cents a mile. The charge on the Grand Trunk for about a thousand miles would only take the same car one hundred miles on the property of the merciful and benevolent Syndicate! What are we to expect when the Syndicate have completed and have in operation the only railway in the North-West territories, protected as it is by a charter which forbids the creation of any competition? The settlers of the North-West must move their grain to the East, and they must use the Syndicate's road in order to do so. The Syndicate are too shrewd to crush out production; but they will be able to levy a toll on every bushel of grain produced in the North-West, for the next twenty years, for certain, and practically for all time, which in the aggregate will be equivalent to a direct and enormous tax upon the industry of the settlers. Free competition in railroads, and a limit to the power of the Syndicate, which Mr. Blake sought to induce the Government to provide for, would have given the settlers protection against the evils of this giant monopoly; but the Government were too much in the power of the Syndicate, too completely fettered by the cunning of Mr. Abbott, and by the imprudent and compromising utterances of the Premier, and they dare not set up a single safeguard for the protection of the settler, so long as the Syndicate said "nay." And so it must continue till the settlers rise against extortion, or till some future and wiser Parliament affords them relief from the oppression.

Prince Edward Island and the Tariff.

The Mail is much exercised at the fact that that ferocious and bloodthirsty brigand and Borgian assassin, Mr. Blake, during his visit to Prince Edward Island, should have ventured to condole with the people of the Island on the evils inflicted upon them by the present taxation tariff, and regards it as another evidence of the unmitigated atrocity of Mr. Blake's nature, that he did so while Hon. Mr. Pope was lying on a bed of sickness. Mr. Pope was one of those who, by the use of Sir John's lying telegram to Mr. Boyd, of St. John, that "no increase of the tariff "was contemplated, but only a readjustment," and by proclaiming himself as a chief of the Free Traders, succeeded in befooling the electors of that Island, and while we regret his ill-health, and heartily wish him a speedy recovery, we cannot overlook the fact that, sick or well, the tariff continues to grind the faces of the people of that, as well as other portions of the Dominion, and in an especially odious manner. The principal articles exchanged in commerce by the producers of the Island are oats, potatoes and ships. They cannot sell those commodities in Canada, because each of the other Provinces produces more than sufficient for home consumption. Her customers are therefore Britain, the United States, Newfoundland and the West Indies. The tariff can therefore be of no possible benefit to Prince Edward Island—in fact it is a positive injury. Her former customers, deterred from trading on reasonable terms in the Island markets, do not go there to buy. The aggregate trade of the Island for the fiscal year 1880 was $2,862,982, as against $2,714,502 the previous year. The imports fell off from $1,681,369 in 1879, to $1,726,353 in 1880, and the exports from $932,580 in 1879, to $907,583 in 1880; and this in the face of a general advance of trade. The ship-building business has been seriously crippled, by the decline of trade with other countries and the tax on material imported for building, and the Hon. Mr. Pope, a ship-builder, bankrupt in business, is an evidence of what the N. P. is doing for Prince Edward Island. Naturally the Mail chafes at seeing Mr. Blake communing with the Islanders, and comparing notes on the practical working of that instrument of legalized robbery, the tariff.

WHO WILL PAY THE WATER RATES?

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—I read with pleasure in your issue of last week a letter from Mr. Wm. Loch, in which he takes to my mind a very sensible view of the proposed waterworks scheme. I would like to draw the attention of the ratepayers to the different positions occupied by the small and large freeholders under a waterworks system. The large freeholder has his stores and dwellings rented. For instance Mr. Bradburn might be very much in favor of waterworks, knowing they would afford excellent fire protection to his stores and houses, and knowing also that his tenants, whether merchants or householders, would have to pay the water rates, for which their goods and chattels would be accountable, just the same as for taxes, and the tenants, who have nothing to say in a vote on waterworks, but have to pay all the same, would just have to grin and bear it. The small freeholder, however, occupying his own house, has a vote on the subject, which counts just as many as his wealthier neighbour's, and so, if he votes to put water rates on, he will have to thank himself, it is for him to consider whether he will elect to pay or not. For my part, I would gladly pay a small rate for plenty of pure water, but I do not think I would care to support the present scheme.

Yours truly,
SOUTH WARD.

Peterborough, Aug. 13th, 1881.

THE WATER-WORKS QUESTION.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—I have perused with interest your suggestions on the water-works question, and they will certainly commend themselves to the common sense of the ratepayers. But there are one or two matters which you seem to have left untouched, to which, with your permission, I will endeavour to draw the attention of your numerous readers. No one who has given the subject a moment's consideration or enquiry can fail to have been convinced that the sum proposed as the capital of the company, would at the best, not suffice to do more than construct the wheel-house, and lay a pipe down George street. If the wheel-house be constructed of sufficient capacity for the alleged object of the works—the ultimate supply of water for both fire and domestic purposes for the whole town—then I have no hesitation in saying that an estimate from a competent engineer will show that a great part, if not the greater of this sum, will be required for the necessary buildings and machinery at the source of supply. It appears to me to be clear that the real object of the more prominent of the promoters of this scheme will have been fully attained when the fire protection down George street is provided, and that they would not be found so ready to incur expenditure, either by the town or privately, for the extension of the system, which will be necessary if it is to be of any benefit whatever to the householders of the town. Another important matter appears to have altogether escaped attention. It is impossible for the town to have water for domestic use, without a system of sewerage corresponding with the water supply. That is absolutely unavoidable, as I think no one will deny, since, if it were not had, aside from the comparative uselessness of the water supply, so far from improving our sanitary condition we should simply be aggravating it. The old sewer, so far as it has been examined, is found to be rotten, and promises to force itself on the early attention of the town for reconstruction, water-works or no water-works. This, to my mind, opens up the way to aid an industry which cannot be termed a "struggling" one, since it has long been so completely crushed that not even the N. P. has been able to galvanize it into life. The supply of bricks or tiles for the sewerage which would be necessary to accompany water-works, would rekindle the fires in the long slumbering furnaces of the brick factory, and afford us the grateful sight of smoke once more issuing from Mr. Romaine's white brick monument. I am astonished that Mr. Carnegie, who is usually pretty shrewd in looking after his own interests, should not have taken a more active interest in promoting the water-works, in view of the sewerage which they will render necessary, and that he has as yet been seen in connection with the matter, only "as through a glass darkly." This will make the proposed expense to the town very considerably greater, as, however liberally certain parties may subscribe to a water-works scheme, which will confer certain benefit if not absolute profit, they will not be in a position to aid in the building of sewerage, unless they do it out of sheer philanthropy. I for one would cheerfully pay the extra taxes for the purpose of seeing that noble edifice on Sherbrooke street filled with busy workmen, and contributing to the business of the town.

Yours truly,
FREEHOLDER.

Facts, Fragments and Fancies for Farmers.

THE BEST BREED OF COWS FOR A MILK DAIRY.

Each breed has its merits. If a large yield of milk is desired the Dutch or Holland Holstein is to be preferred, but these cattle are very high priced and a milkman could not afford to purchase them. Good, well-selected native cows, with short-horn blood in them, are the best for dairy cattle, because they give abundant and good-looking milk, and when the milk fails they are easily fatted. No milkman can afford to raise calves unless he has cheap land and plenty of pasture. If he has these he had better keep Ayrshires; or at least select the best native cow, get pure Ayrshire bull from good milking strain and raise half-breeds. So far as regards the cost of milk the Ayrshires, according to their special advocates, take the palm over all other breeds, as they are easily fed and milk freely.

LIQUID MANURE FOR FERTILIZING.

The farmers of this country generally show a want of appreciation of the value of the urine of their animals. Only a very few make any provision for saving it. I have seen a poorly laid floor for a horse stable over a stone heap, which prevented saving any urine, except the little absorbed by the droppings, and this was planned by a man of intelligence, who prided himself on his success in farming. So far as I have seen, the farmer who makes provision for saving and utilizing the excrements, generally thinks he is doing well; and the one who shows an appreciation of the value of the urine is an exception.

The superiority of poultry manure over others is, that it always contains the urine. Next to this comes the manure from the hog pen; this is especially valuable because so highly charged with the elements of fertility, and because the working propensity of the hog keeps him rooting over the contents of his pen, so that his urine is absorbed and saved. Then, too, the quality of the hog's urine places it before all others, on account of the salts it contains. In it are phosphates not found in the urine of the horse, ox or sheep. The urea of urine, which imparts so great a value to this liquid, is richer in ammonia than either flesh or blood. By chemical analysis a hundred pounds of urine of cattle contains four pounds of urea. That of a horse only seven-tenths of a pound. The urine of the horse, while so far wanting in urea, contains an excess of nitrogen, which makes up richly for its deficiency in this, by its ammonia producing power. The saline substances are five and three-tenths per cent. That of a sheep has two and eight-tenths of a pound. That of a man contains three pounds. The hog's contains five and sixty-four-hundredths pounds. Besides the urea contained, the various salts of urine add largely to its value; and when all are absorbed by loam or peat, the fertilising value exceeds that of the solid excrements.

The chemical composition of animal urines vary with the age, food and season of the year. The more water drank the poorer the urine. There is more of the urea in summer than in winter. Putrefaction converts the urea to ammonia, and hence is reckoned equal to it. In the fermenting or putrefying process, which lasts at least a month, it is all the while giving off ammonia, and unless mixed with some substance which will form a fixed salt with ammonia, there will be a loss of that in a gaseous form. The escape of ammonia in this gas is quickly noticed in the urine of the horse, and in privy vaults. The most convenient thing to fix it is plaster. Copperas and oil are handy to add if it is in a tank in its liquid condition.

Prof. Dana says: Each pint of human urine will produce a pound of wheat; each pound of ammonia is equal to a bushel of grain. Whatever may be the food, it is evident from the above statement that rivers of riches run away from farms from want of attention to saving that which ordinarily is allowed to be wasted." If each family would save the suds from their washing, and combine with the chamber slops, applying the mixture to the compost heap, or directly to the soil in its liquid condition, the increase in fertility would surprise them.—Cor. New England Farmer.

RECIPES.

SMALL ONION PICKLES.

Small onions, not larger than marbles, must be carefully peeled and thrown into strong brine. Let them remain eight days, changing the brine every other day. Dry in a cloth, place them in bottles, add spice, and fill up with strong distilled vinegar. A teaspoonful of olive oil will prevent the onions from turning yellow. Mustard seed, horse radish, allspice, cloves, black pepper corns and mace are all excellent spices for onions.

LEMON CHEESE CAKE.

Break one pound of loaf sugar into small lumps, put to it one-quarter pound of butter, the yolk of six eggs with the whites of four, the juice of three lemons, and the peel of two grated; put these into a pan, let them simmer over a slow fire until the sugar is dissolved; continue to stir it gently one way while it is on the fire, or it will curdle; keep it in a jar like mince meat; let it simmer till it begins to thicken or looks like honey.—MRS. JOS. SAULTER.

PICKLED WALNUTS.

Select full-grown green walnuts or butternuts when they are soft enough to be easily pierced through with a needle. They are usually in fit condition in July or beginning of August. Prick 100 nuts well through and lay them into a brine made of four pounds of salt to each gallon of vinegar; let them remain nine days, and at the end of the end of the third and sixth days change the brine for fresh. On the ninth day lay them in the sun. After they are well drained place them in the sun till they turn black; they will need to remain several days. Boil one gallon of vinegar, two ounces of black pepper, half an ounce of cloves, one ounce of mace, one ounce of allspice and one ounce of root ginger sliced, ten minutes and pour it over the walnuts, which have been packed in jars three-quarters full. When the vinegar cools cover them up tight. They will be ready to use in a month, but they are better in a year, and will keep ten years. This pickle is an excellent accompaniment of fish.

MIXED PICKLE.

To each gallon of vinegar allow a quarter of a pound of bruised ginger, quarter of a pound of mustard, quarter of a pound of salt, two ounces of mustard seed, one and a half ounces of tumeric, one ounce of ground black pepper, one quarter ounce of Cayenne; cauliflowers, onions, celery, sliced cucumbers, gherkin, French beans, nasturtiums, capsicum. Have a large jar with a tightly fitting lid in which put as much vinegar as is required, reserving a little to mix the various powders to a smooth paste. Put into a basin the mustard, tumeric, pepper and Cayenne; mix them with vinegar and stir until no lumps remain; add all the ingredients to the vinegar and mix well. Keep this liquor in a warm place and stir thoroughly every morning with a wooden spoon for near a month, when it will be ready for the vegetables to be added. As these come into season have them gathered on a dry day, and, after merely wiping them with a cloth to free them from moisture, put them into the pickle. The cauliflowers should be divided into small bunches. Put all the vegetables into the pickle raw, and at the end of the season, when the vegetables are all preserved, store away in jars and tie over with a bladder. As none of the ingredients are boiled, this pickle will not be fit for eating for several months. I will repeat that the contents must be stirred each morning.

HODGE PODGE.

Veal and pork should always be thoroughly cooked.

A soup of tomatoes and beans is very good—a pint of cooked tomatoes to a quart of soup.

A little chopped parsley added to liver while frying improves it for most people.

Pork steak, chops or sausages should be served with apple sauce or fried apples.

Custard pie with a generous dusting of powdered cinnamon, will be in favor with those who like that seasoning.

It is best to make soup the day before it is used. By so doing it can be entirely freed from fat and settlings.

Fill finger-bowls half full of water and drop a sprig of lemon verbena in each—it leaves a pleasant odor on the fingers after pressing it on the bowl.

Large napkins—without starch—are used for dinner; small fringed ones for tea, and those of medium size for breakfast. But the last-named answer very well for all times.

A covering of thick felt—it comes for the purpose—is used under thick table clothes; it improves the appearance of the linen, it protects the table, and less noise is made with the dishes.

ENNISMORE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

THE WEATHER.—July, now closed, has been on the whole a very hot month, being on the average 62°,21; the highest was on the evening of the 9th, ranging 84°, and the lowest on the mornings of the 19th and 20th, going 52° each, but the hottest day was on the 9th, the thermometer standing at 98° in the shade at one o'clock p. m. Rain fall on 13 days, making 5¾ inches of water, which depth was mostly due to a heavy rain, hail and thunder storm which visited us on the 31st. The fall was 3¼ inches, being only local extending about two miles wide and seven in length.

TOO MANY ADVERTISEMENTS.

(From the Stratford Beacon.)

"I don't care for that paper, it has too many advertisements; I want general reading; I don't care for advertisements." Such are the remarks one sometimes hears about newspapers. Do the good people who speak in this way ever reflect on the fact that without advertisements no newspaper could exist for any length of time? The amount obtained from the patrons of a paper as mere subscriptions, would not buy the paper on which it is printed and oil the machinery which prints it. By advertisements, and advertisements mainly, a newspaper is maintained, and without such patronage the most enterprising and judiciously managed journal would speedily languish and die—unless its publisher happened to be blessed with abundant private capital. Hence the absurdity of condemning a newspaper because its columns are well supplied with advertisements. Considering the important service rendered to the community in general by well-conducted newspapers, business and professional men patronize far too little. A liberal advertising patronage is the best possible thing for the reader as well as for the publisher, as it enables the latter to keep the other departments of his paper in a higher state of efficiency. A newspaper whose advertising columns are sparsely filled conveys an impression the reverse of favorable of the community in which it is published.

"But after all, are advertisements of no special interest to the general reader? It is far otherwise. A commercial or professional man who does not carefully scan the advertising columns of his local paper does not know his business. About the first thing a keen, shrewd, live man of business does when he lifts a newspaper is to peruse the new advertisements, whether they relate to the line in which he is engaged or not. There is no better index of the business prosperity of a town or city than the advertising columns of a local newspaper. If these are pretty full of stirring announcements, it may be inferred that things are lively. If there is no life or animation in that department of the paper, no matter how full and sparkling the editorial columns or how piquant may be the home and news items, the reader may conclude that there is not much prosperity in that community. We can from a pretty accurate idea of the state of trade in any town in Ontario any week in the year, by glancing at the advertising columns of our exchanges."

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced a remedy so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates the vital functions, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents.—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

Robbery vs. Ruin.

"In like manner, we honestly believe if Mr. Blake were face to face with a strange audience, and filled with national feeling instead of petty partisan politics, he too would confess that this country is prosperous beyond measure, and that nowhere had he seen that prosperity in fuller measure than among the people whom he is now endeavouring to convince that they are being rapidly ruined. Business men, with cool heads, will feel that what we say is true; and do know that the whole Opposition agitation is based on a deliberate misrepresentation of the circumstances of the country. If any one of the Opposition could be put upon the stand, he would be forced conscientiously to confess that his public political opinions were not his private business opinions, and that he would be very willing to invest his means under a policy which he publicly professes to believe is going to bring distress upon the coutry."—Mail.

It is something to know that Tupper's organist "honestly believes" something. Apparently he has two kinds of belief, one which he thinks is honest, and another which he knows is not honest, but which is assumed for the purpose of deluding the public. As for what the Tory organ has to say about the prosperity of the country, it is no "confession" on the part of Mr. Blake or any other Liberal to say that we are enjoying prosperity, as much as we can reasonably hope, after the period of commercial adversity and financial stringency, pointed out by Sir Samuel Tilley in 1873, from which we are emerging. But the Mail falls naturally off the the track of truth when it asserts that Mr. Blake is endeavouring to convince the people that they are being ruined. Our country is too strong, too vigorous, too lusty in its developing strength to be "ruined," in the strict sense, by the misdeeds or maladministration of any government. But we do assert that our prosperity is being to a large extent shorn of its legitimate fruits to the people by an oppressive tariff—that the progress we are making is not due to, but in spite of, the grinding exactions to which the people are subjected—that the headway we are making under fair winds of expanding commerce and reviving trade, due to good crops and good markets abroad, is checked and retarded by the effects of the government policy. The country is not being ruined but it is being robbed, and robbed in a very wholesale and tyrannous manner. When the government takes in one year three millions of dollars out of the earnings of the people to which it has no right, because it is that much more than the necessary expenditure requires, then the people are unjustly robbed of three million of dollars, and though the country may be so plundered and not be ruined, still we protest in the name of the people, and in the name of honest government, against the robbery, which is none the less a robbery because it is legalized by the tariff. It is the policy of the present government not to level the taxation down to the necessary expenditure, but to level the expenditure up to the increased revenue which an excessive tax upon the public industry has given them, and we say that this course if persevered in, this unjust tariff if it be persisted in, will bring distress upon the people. The country may not be ruined, but it is oppressed. The revenue may flourish, but it is always to be remembered that it is created by taxation from the people, and the Mail should remember that the poor people of its own city paid one-fifth more for their coal last winter by reason of the tariff, the money not being required for the public service, but to make up a surplus for Sir Samuel Tilley, and to benefit a few coal kings in Nova Scotia.

People all over the country, who have had to pay higher prices for their sugar and tea, for their clothes and coal oil, for their boots and their books, their cotton and their coffee, should remember that this increased price was ground out of them wantonly, not that the revenue required it, but that the quartette of Sir Knights of the Government might add to the other luxuries they enjoy at the expense of the people, the luxury of a surplus, to set forth the success of an unlimited taxation and the capacity of the people to bear it. No doubt the country has not been ruined by it—no doubt, if the taxation were double as much, the farmers whose expenses of living are thus increased would not all have become bankrupt. A man may be robbed without necessarily being ruined, and so it is with the people. And against this robbery we protest, as intolerable and unjust, and something to which a free people ought not to be compelled to submit. That they will not submit, will be for them to show at the ballot taxes when their franchise is restored to them in 1883. We believe the vast majority of the electors are ready to endorse by their votes the Liberal doctrine, that there can be no justification, no moral right, for any government exacting a dollar more out of the people's earnings than is necessary for conducting the machinery of the government with economy and efficiency.

The Proposed Paper Mill.

We find the following letter in the Review:—

H. H. Smith, Esq., Mayor:

Dear Sir,—Your favor of the 8th instant to Mr. Trout has been forwarded to me in Mr. Trout's absence. The report of Mr. Towers, in regard to Peterborough, was favorable, and yet not. He was of the opinion that the water power was ample and the building sites good, but on the question of washing water he could only say that it might be found in sufficient quantity after a trial, but the season would be too far advanced to allow of our building this fall, and therefore the question of building at Peterborough had to be adopted (sic.) Mr. Towers' report was more favorable to Cornwall than to any other sites looked at, and on account of the season being so far advanced some place had to be selected at once by the Company, who finally agreed on Cornwall as the place, although they were very much opposed to building the mill so far away from Toronto.

Yours truly,
J. R. Barber.

Georgetown, Aug. 6, 1881.

We apprehend that communications of this kind, addressed to Mayor Smith, as Mayor, are the property of the Town Council, and in courtesy to that body, should not be made public before they have been communicated to the Council in the regular way, and thus become public property. The Mayor, however, appears to labor under the mistake which a few people share with him, that the Review office is headquarters for all matters affecting the interests of the town, and so far as he is able, makes it so. Had the object been to place this matter before the public simply, the columns of the Examiner were open to him up to the evening of the 10th, the letter having been written on the 6th; but the readers of the Examiner not being supposed to have an equal right to such information with the readers of the Review, or it being desired to create the impression that the Review is more interested in the affairs of the town, the letter is held over till the following day that it might be inserted in the Review, printed on Thursday. This is not the first occasion there has been reason to make this complaint, but we have so far overlooked it. Our advice to the Mayor is that in future the correspondence of the town, which comes to him as Chief Magistrate, should be reserved for transmission to the Council, and made public in the ordinary way at the meetings of the Council. It may suit him to think that he can use his position for the benefit of his bosom friend next door, but it does not suit us that he should do so. We draw a distinct line between the Mayor's duties, as Mayor, to the Council and the public, and what he may deem to be his duty, as Mr. Smith, to the Review; and we propose to see that it shall be observed.

Notes and Comments.

Hon. Senator Bull, of Hamilton, died in that city on Friday last. He was the second, and son of the first, publisher of the Gazette, of Hamilton, and was elected to the Legislative Council in 1864. He was appointed to the Senate in 1879. His death leaves the way open to the Government to appoint Hon. Sydney Smith to a position for which he has a strong claim.

The statement of revenue and expenditure on account of the Dominion Consolidated Fund for the month of July shows the revenue to have been $2,294,076.73, of which $1,481,983.87 was from customs; $393,967.91 from excise; $125,830.55 from Post Office; $216,463.79 from Public Works, including Railways; $18,277.04 from Bill Stamps; $57,553.57 from miscellaneous sources. The expenditure was $2,499,484, leaving an excess of expenditure over revenue, of $205,407.55.

The Walkerton Telescope recalls a little bit of sessional history which may be interesting to Tupper's toady on the Mail, as follows:—"It is just as well to remind "the reading public that the Mail rib-"stabber who now so bitterly attacks "Mr. Blake is the same man who, three "or four years ago, found it desirable to "suddenly leave Ottawa, while Parlia-"ment was in session, lest he should be "summoned to appear before the bar of "the House for most shamefully ridicul-"ing, in some newspaper correspondence, "the deformity of one of the Prince Ed-"ward Island members.

Bycicling is a sport which is as yet in its infancy in Canada, but it has in England attained extraordinary popularity and dimensions. According to the Bycicle Annual there are now in the Old Country 680 Bycicle Clubs, of which 212 are in London and its surburbs. There is a powerful Bycicle Union formed to promote and protect the interests of 'cycling. There is a club called the Bycicle Touring Club, numbering 4,500 members, with their special terms and arrangements at the hostelries throughout the country, and embracing a brotherhood for mutual help, and lastly it has an extensive and exclusive press, of very high character. Bycicling in the Old Country is not a sport merely; it is a most useful institution for the promotion of health and convenience of locomotion.

The Mail refering to some remarks of the New York Scotsman, says:—"No "doubt Canada has as much politics to "the square mile as any country, but the "fight is openly and, as a rule, fairly "conducted. And we have not yet pro-"duced a Guitteau." If the Scotsman has the Mail on file, as appears, it will have fair reason to question whether political fighting is "fairly conducted" in Canada; at all events it will know that if such be the rule the Mail columns offer a striking exception. As to not having produced a Guitteau, according to the Mail Mr. Blake is as much worse than that worthy as may be. Guitteau has only attempted one assassination, while the Mail says Mr. Blake has compassed several and attempted many more. One point on which the Scotsman should be set right, is not touched by the Mail. The New York paper says:—"With the "exception of the Toronto Globe and "Mail, the Montreal Gazette and Witness, "the Telegraph, published at St. John, "N. B., and a few others, Canadian "journals are rarely seen in the United "States." By the United States, our contemporary, we take it, means the Scotsman office, and it goes on to say that "the "smaller and less influential newspapers "derive their inspiration from the leading "dailies already referred to." This is so far from being the truth that it only goes to prove the limited acquaintance of the Scotsman with the Canadian press. The influence of a newspaper in this country is not gauged by its size. The Montreal Gazette is a large paper, but it has an exceedingly small circulation. In point of influence, circulation and ability, it does not at all compare favorably with the Ottawa Free Press, in the same district. The London Free Press is an abler paper than the Mail, and we venture to say a more potent influence in election times, on its side of politics, with its constituency of readers. The Hamilton Times and the London Advertiser lose nothing in comparison with the Globe, as to the vigor and ability of their editorial columns. In fact, the city and district press in this Province are anything but "inspired" by the journals mentioned by the Scotsman; on the contrary, they are singularly independent and in no way inclined to brook the interference or submit to the dictation of the Toronto dailies, much less to look to their editorial columns as a source of "inspiration." As newspapers we are proud of the Globe and the Mail—considering the area of the field for which they purvey, the difficulty of reaching their constituents, and the vastly increased expense entailed, their enterprise exceeds that of the New York dailies. At that period our admiration, for the Mail at least, must cease. The Globe has its faults, but it is at least respectably conducted, is inspired by a sense of public duty, and evinces some degree of fairness towards opponents; but it is a relief to know that even the Conservative press refuses to be "inspired" by the reckless, malignant and unprincipled policy of the Mail, which in default of any more effective weapon, has resorted to unscrupulous slander in the hope of causing the chief opponent of its master to retire in disgust from the public life which it seeks to degrade.

CURRENT TOPICS.

Latest information from the wounded President of the United States indicates that he is in a very low and feeble condition, and as it appears at this time we should not be at all surprised if our next issue should chronicle his death. The case is very similar to that of the late Hon. George Brown, though the wound is even of a more serious nature.

Mr. Wm. McDougall is about to go to Manitoba, and it is believed he will remain there as Lieutenant-Governor, succeeding Lt.-Governor Cauchon, whose term of office will expire shortly. As Mr. McDougall was shamefully swindled out of his office by the treachery of Sir John MacDonald and Sir George Cartier in 1868, he will only be getting a tardy justice if he secures the prize now.

An Ontario Jockey Club has been formed at Toronto, with a Board of Directors, of which Col. Czowski is President, and Mr. R. A. Morrow, of this town, a member. We don't know whether this is to be boasted as another evidence of the "hum" or not, but if we must have racing it is an advantage to have a Club which will enforce honest dealing on all recognized courses.

The nefarious practice of "charivarying" has afforded another tragedy, at Ottawa, an old man named Wetherall being brutally murdered by a gang of young roughs, who had surrounded the house where he was passing his wedding night. Wetherall was beaten to death with stones. Four men named Kelly, O'Brien, McLaren and Berry are under arrest for the murder, and it is hoped the scaffold will offer a warning to those who think it no harm to participate in similar outrages. Affairs of the kind generally end in trouble, more or less serious, and what is begun in "fun" too often results in homicide or murder.

The Belleville Intelligencer, like most Tory organs, alludes to Great Britain as a proof of the failure of the Free Trade system, and points out the Mother Country to the opponents of our high-pressure protective system, much as the old-fashioned temperance lecturer to the inevitable "miserable example" who accompanied him. It begins a reply to an article in the Hamilton Times thus:—"In "the face of what is going on in England, "the Times, if not theory-mad, might "realize that this is no time to discourse "on the application of the principles of "free trade, especially to a country cir-"cumstanced as is Canada." Now, evidently the Intelligencer does not know that the recent census in England exhibits an increase in the last ten years of 3,500,000 in the population after sending 1,500,000 to America and the Colonies, and that the recent report of the Board of Trade shows unexampled prosperity in almost every branch of trade, commerce and manufacture, the increase upon the business of the past year being very marked. If the Intelligencer man would just take the trouble to inform himself of "what is actually going on in England," he would hardly call the state of affairs there to his aid in endeavoring to bolster up the fallacious fiscal policy of the Government at Ottawa.

The farmers in this vicinity are hard pressed with their harvests, and have difficulty to find assistance to cut and bring in the crops. A lot of grain is as yet uncut, and all that can obtain threshing machines are busy threshing, to make room for crops still in the field. Threshing machines are in great demand, and quite a few farmers are at a stand till their turn comes round. Every crop, excepting peas, is exceedingly heavy, and will yield a very large per centage to the acre, some farmers really expecting 35 to 40 bushel on fall grown cereals.

Clause 14 gives the company power to make By-Laws, to enforce their rules and regulations, for fixing the time, which shall be quarterly, for payment of rents, "and in case of default in payment to enforce payment by shutting off the water, or by suit at law, or by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such owner or occupant, or of any goods or chattels in his or her possession, wherever the same may be found within the Town of Peterborough, or County of Peterborough, or of any goods and chattels found on the premises the property of, or in the possession of, any other occupant of the premises: such distress and sales shall be conducted in the same manner as sales are now conducted for arrears of town taxes, and the costs chargeable shall be those payable to bailiffs, under the Division Court Act: Provided that the attempt to collect such rates, by any process hereinbefore mentioned, shall not in any way invalidate the lien upon such premises."

PENALTY FOR "NEIGHBORING."

Clause 15 provides for the prosecuting and defending actions at law. Clause 16, the appointment of collectors. Clause 17, for protection of officers. Clause 18, for a forfeit of $50 and a penalty of $5 for each day or night any party may use water without consent of the company. Clause 19, a penalty of $20 for fouling the water. Clause 20, for a penalty of $20 and a month's imprisonment at hard labor for any occupant of a house supplied with water "lending, selling or disposing of the water thereof, giving it away or permitting it to be taken or carried away," or for improperly wasting the same.

SERVICE PIPE.

Clause 21 provides that "in all cases where a vacant space intervenes between the line of the street and the wall of the building into which the water is to be taken, the commissioners are empowered to lay the service pipes across such vacant space, and charge the cost of the same to the owners of the premises, such charge to payable with the first payment of water rates, and to be collected in the same manner from the said owners."

EXEMPT FROM TAXATION.

Clauses 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29 are unimportant. Clause 30 provides that "the lands, buildings, machinery, reservoirs, pipes, and all other real or personal property connected with, or appertaining or belonging to the water-works shall be exempt from taxation."

THE BY-LAW.

The following clauses up to 38 concern issue of debentures, etc. This clause provides that the Act shall not have effect till the Council pass a By-Law; and that the usual notice be given. Clause 40 provides that freeholders and leaseholders of 10 years may vote, and that "AN ELECTOR MAY VOTE IN EACH WARD OF THE TOWN IN WHICH HE MAY HAVE THE NECESSARY QUALIFICATION." A majority of the votes in favor of the By-Law under clause 38, is sufficient to carry.

MILLIONS GIVEN AWAY.—Millions bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have been given away as trial bottles of the large size. THE SADDEST OF SAD SIGHTS.—The grey hairs of age being brought with sorrow to the grave is now, we are glad to think, becoming rarer every year as the use of Cingalese Hair Restorer becomes more general. By its use the scanty locks of age once more resume their former color and the hair becomes thick and luxuriant as ever; with its aid we can now defy the change of years, resting assured that no Grey Hair at any rate will come to sadden us. 50 cents per bottle. 32-4t.

Mr. Robert P. Dormer, eldest son of the late Mr. George Dormer, M. P., met with a painful accident while doing some work in Burbe's shingle mill at Lindsay one day last week. Mr. R. M. West, a third year student of Victoria University, met with an accident in Campbellford, on Friday of last week. The wheels of the truck passed over his leg, causing a very bad fracture below the knee.

Mr. T. T. White, of Whitevale, has purchased a valuable section of land in Manitoba, and is also the owner of a valuable mill site in that new favored part of the country, known as Pilot Mound. On Friday of last week an Marshall West of Seymour was driving a load of milk cans home to his father's the shaft fell off, and hit with it. The noise frightened the horse and it ran off, and it is supposed the wheel of the truck came so forcibly against his leg as to break the The horse turned into Mr. West's yard which was an intimation that something was wrong. On going to look for him Marshal's brother found lying beside the road with the broken bone protruding through the flesh. He is recovering under proper care.

On Monday of last week a boy named Bliss was terribly injured at the new woolen mills at Campbellford. His duty was to carry water to the men, and throw water over the brick. During a few spare moments, he took hold of a wheelbarrow of brick and attempted to wheel it up the "runway" to the scaffolding. This he managed to do, but on reaching the top the wheel of the barrow struck against something lying in front of it, and not having the strength to resist the shock thus given him, he was thrown from the scaffold to the flooring below, a distance of over 20 feet. The boy was picked up by sympathetic men, and conveyed to the residence of Dr. Begart, and thence to his home. An examination proved that both arms and one leg were broken, one arm in two places. He was also cut and bruised about the face and body, from which blood flowed freely:—Herald.

Mr. Sandford Johnston, of Belleville, met with a rather disagreeable experience on Saturday last. He had been presented by a friend with a beaver hat, for his wife, and placing it on the rack in the railway carriage, fell asleep. When he awoke he missed the hat. He was informed by some of the passengers that it had been removed by a person whom he remembered as having sat near him. The party who had taken the hat got off at Port Hope, and went out on the Midland, but a telegram was sent forward in time to lead to his arrest. He was brought back here, Mr. Johnson accompanying for the purpose of prosecuting, but owing to the respectability of the man's connection he allowed him to go. The meanness of the theft is increased by the outward respectability of the thief and the intention he expressed of making the hat a present to his wife. Mr. Johnson acted very generously.—Pt. Hope Times.

A Frenchman named Félix Cutineau, employed as a river-driver with Martin Maloney, foreman for Messrs. H. B. Rathbun & Son, was drowned at Healey's Falls, about six miles north of Campbellford, on Saturday morning last. With others of his gang, Cutineau was busy getting afloat what is called a "jam" of logs in the river, about 200 feet above the Falls. Suddenly the "jam" separated, and all the men were thrown into the water. The subject of this article, less fortunate than some of his companions was on the side where the water is deepest; and as soon as the break-up took place, he began to wade into still deeper water to evade the logs. Before he could get out of its way a heavy log rolled over him, and he was carried into the stream and hurled over the Falls. The body of the poor fellow was found at an island below the Falls, the following day, and was interred in the Catholic Church burying ground, Campbellford on Monday.

An Indian named John Bolen, from Pine Lake, attempted on Tuesday evening last to outrage an old woman named Mrs. Ball, between 80 and 90 years of age, who lives with her son, John Ball, two miles north of Bobcaygeon. Ball's house is situated some little distance from the road, and old Mrs. Ball, who is very feeble and childish, had walked out to the road, when Bolen, the Indian, who was drunk and without a hat, drove up in a buggy. He caught hold of the woman but made off on a team driving up. He afterwards returned and made an assault on the poor old lady, but her cries attracted the attention of two women, and the villain made off, coming through Bobcaygeon and going towards Peterboro'. A warrant was taken out afterwards, and Constables Cheetham and Gartick arrested him at a farmhouse ten miles to the south shortly afterwards and brought him to Bobcaygeon. He was committed to the county gaol by G. H. Howson, J. P., to stand his trial. He admits the deed, and says that whiskey, which was sold him in the back country, was the cause of it. Mrs. Bell was considerably hurt. Bolen, the Indian, is a married man and has a farm at Pine lake.

A FISHING EXCURSON.

"Say, my dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, with a social sort of grin, "how would you like to go fishing?"

"Wouldn't that be perfectly lovely!" squealed Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I never was fishing in my life, and I always wanted to try it. Where can we go."

"Well, there are lots of places around Brooklin. Last summer I saw boys catch a good many fish off the dock at the foot of State street. We might go there."

"Just the place," conceded Mrs. Spoopendyke. "Perhaps we might catch some sardines. I'll bet a spool of thread I get the first shot!" and in her glee she Mrs. Spoopendyke waltzed across the room and back again.

Mr. Spoopendyke smiled pleasantly upon his wife and started out into the yard to get some worms, while Mrs. Spoopendyke rigged herself up for the pending excursion.

"Got any fish sticks?" she asked, as Mr. Spoopendyke returned, rather warm from his exercise.

"I've got some fishing rods, if that's what you mean," replied Mr. Spoopendyke, "but I could only find four worms."

"Can't we break 'em in two?" inquired Mrs. Spoopendyke anxiously.

"Could if we had a buzz saw," grunted Mr. Spoopendyke. "Come along if you're coming," and thoroughly equipped for the expedition Mr. and Mrs. Spoopendyke set out for the State street pier.

"How long before they bite?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, hoisting her hook out of the water examining a part of a worm her husband had impaled thereon.

"They'll probably bite at that soon as they can borrow a step ladder," retorted Mr. Spoopendyke, eyeing the dangling hook "If you calculate to get any fish, you'd better let that thing down in the water."

"Oh!" said Mrs. Spoopendyke, dropping the hook. "Do you think I can catch a gold fish?" she enquired after a pause.

"Hi! hold on! there, I lost him!" ejaculated Mr. Spoopendyke, firing his hook up towards the Heights.

"So did I!" chimed in Mrs. Spoopendyke as she fell over backwards and plumbed her sinker in to Mr. Spoopendyke's ear, "I declare we both lost him!"

"What ye doing?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. "What did ye lose? When I'm pulling in fish just as still, will ye? Think my hook's a coal pocket? Get it, will ye! Drop it in the water. There! Now, sit still and fish. Another time I'm pulling in a Spanish mackerel you let things alone. You made me lose that fish."

"You ought to have caught him," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, soothingly; "you fished splendidly for him."

"I understand the business," rejoined Mr. Spoopendyke, somewhat mollified. "Now see she didn't even get the bait, big as he was."

"The good of that, because we've only got three worms left. How I'd like to catch an oyster. Do you know——"

"Hist? Sh-h-h! Quiet now! I've got him! Let me play him! Now I'll fetch him!" and Mr. Spoopendyke reeled in until he landed an old boot.

"I didn't know that fish had horns on like a chestnut," said Mrs. Spoopendyke quivering with excitement. "Crack him and let me see what he is."

"Crack your grandmother!" snorted Mr. Spoopendyke, shying the boot up the pier. "He wasn't good to eat anyway. I'll get something—"

"What's the matter with my stick? Let go, you nasty thing! Here's another one! Quick!"

"Pull him in can't ye? You've got a bite. Haul up!" cried Mr. Spoopendyke, trying to untangle himself from his line and help his wife. "Lift him out of the water!"

"He won't let me," squeaked Mrs. Spoopendyke, holding out both arm's at full length. "Take him off! Scat! Go' way you monster!"

"Lift your pole straight up in the air!" shouted Mr. Spoopendyke. "Hoist the dod gasted thing right up!"

Mrs. Spoopendyke exerted herself and disclosed an eel dangling.

"It's a rattlesnake!" she yelled. "Don't go near him! Fire! fire! murder! police! police-e-e!"

"Hold yer yawp, will ye?" howled Mr. Spoopendyke. "Get him over the dock so I can catch him! What ye holding him out there for? Waiting for him to dry? Stick the pole straight up in the air, I tell ye!"

Mrs. Spoopendyke threw the pole over her shoulder and looped the eel into Mr. Spoopendyke's countenance.

"Oh! Did ever the measly eel!" he howled as he spit out. "Stop waving that slam-blasted lightning rod like a flag, will ye? Hold it still I say! Think you're a tree?"

"Don't touch him! throw him overboard! He'll sting you to death!" gurgled Mrs. Spoopendyk, and forgetting that the pole still exercised an indulgence over the eel, she gave it a jerk and it slipped through Mr. Spoopendyke's fingers. That gentleman made a spring for it, and swashed into the water.

"Hen! blab! baa! waggle! giu! hic. ga, gaggle!" spluttered Mr. Spoopendyke as some lighterman fished him out.

"Did you catch cold, dear?" inquired Mrs. Spoopendyke, with solicitude as they made their way home.

"If I did, I landed it," growled Mr. Spoopendyke, blowing mud like the exhaust of a tug.

"Anyway, I caught an eel, didn't I?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, carrying out a woman's idea of comforting a man with the only thing he don't want to hear about.

"Oh! you caught it!" ripped Mr. Spoopendyke. "You're a fish woman, you are. All you want now is glass sides and some bubbles running through you to be an aquarium! Another time we both go fishing you stay at home! You hear!"

And with this novel mathematical suggestion Mr. Spoopendyke, hunted himself to his domicile and took a rum sweat.

Christian Tyler, an old negro woman, on Friday confessed the murder of the Fisher children on Saturday on a farm near Washington, D. C. She had been arrested on suspicion, but denied all knowledge of the crime. She says: "I was going along the path. It was not God Almighty, but the devil that put it in my head to kill them. I could not help killing. I did not do it with an axe or washboard, but with a piece of wood as big as my arm and about eighteen inches long."

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 6-1y.

Not the slightest affinity exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, laryngitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung mebrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

People tormented by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and, beneficial. It enriches the blood, aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks, convalescence is hastened, and unfriendly decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends itself so strongly to non-professional men who require building up—nong to an weak subjected to, fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which in many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Lyman." Sold by all druggists.

...ove in Idleness.

...the Author of "LOVEDAY," "MAN'S HOLIDAY," &c.

CHAPTER I.

...ancy, what will you do when I am ...?"

"Very much what I did before you ...."

"I don't believe you care whether I go ...ay?"

"Perhaps I don't."

"And I am a fool to expect anything ..."

"Confession, especially of this humil...ng sort, being good for the soul, I ...not contradict you."

"Who taught you to be so cruel, ...?"

"Who taught you to be so masterful?" ...nd then the girl's voice breaks into a ...little laugh; and, taking some flowers ...from her dress, she throws them at her ...panion. One of them strikes him on ...face—it is a little purple-and-white ...er.

"Do you know what these flowers are ...lled?" he asks. "'Love in idleness.' ...Is that your love for me, I wonder?"

"Very dear not—listen to the listening ...ds!" and walked a little away from him, ...nd steadily gazing at the smoke that ...rises from a clump of buildings down in ...the hollow to the right.

...The figure lying on the heather, and ...playing the little flower by applying ...various scents to it, is Garth Calderon, ...a tall, broad-shouldered, sunburnt man of seven or eight-and-...twenty. He has a pleasant voice, and ...in manner possesses the charm of re...finement and cultured influences.

...Around a great undulating solitude of moor, ...rising up here and there by wastes of ...purple and bog, sweeps on almost unbroken ...to the edge of the far horizon. And he is ...looking, with an artist's eyes, the sinking ...of the sun behind a bank of purple ...cloud shaped like a range of mountains. ...Presently the girl returns and stands ...before him. An exquisite figure she is, ...outlined against a fading sky, tall and lithe ...and beautiful, with the freshness of youth ...and health. She has taken the little ...flower from Garth's hand and again ...fastened it in her dress.

"We have not so many that I can even ...afford one," she says, by way of excuse. ..."Flowers are an unknown luxury in this ...part of the world."

"I came here for three days, and I ...have stayed six weeks," says the man ...slowly. "Who would have thought ...time could slip away so fast?"

"It has seemed to me ages," answers ...the girl, with charming candour. "With...out exception, this has been the longest ...month I have ever known, and the finest ...for Garth; so you may thank your lucky ...stars for fine weather and delicious even...ings, and not grumble everlastingly at ...things you need not do unless you ...choose."

"You mean my going away, dear?"

"Of course; you need not go unless ...you wish."

...The girl looks up inquiringly into the ...man's face.

"But you know you are not speaking ...the truth?" he says. "I am obliged to ...go to London upon very important busi...ness."

"I don't believe it! What is the busi...ness?"—after a pause.

"You wouldn't understand, dear. It ...is connected with lawyers and all that ...sort of thing."

"I believe it is all nonsense," says ...the girl decisively; "but, if you must go, ...I suppose there is an end of it."

"And in the meantime the Wintons ...will be to the Hall, and you will not feel ...my absence."

"I hope not; I felt badly enough yes...terday when you first spoke of leaving ...to-morrow; but I am much more recon...ciled to it now."

"Indeed, you are! Well, upon my word, ...you are cool!"

"I believe I cried just a little last night ...after I went to bed. I wept for two ...or three days last spring when my dog Jim ...died. I never thought I could get over ...that as I did; so you see, while there's ...life there's hope."

"I don't suppose you'll mourn after ...me to that extent," answers the man ...gloomily; "it would be too much to ...expect to be put on a level with Jim."

"I was awfully fond of him. We had ...been separated a day since he was ...a puppy, and he was the most intelligent ...dog I ever knew; it was worth any...body's while to see that dog——"

...The girl interrupts impatiently.

"I have no doubt. But please spare ...me a list of Jim's virtues, they might ...disheartten me, while passing be...yond my ability to imitate."

...The girl's eyes flash, and she retorts ...angrily—

"Oh, he was a dog! One could safely ...rely on one's affection for him; but it is ...quite true that when he died I almost ...broke my heart. Rob had great difficulty ...to make me accept with anything like ...resignation the fact of my dreadful loss."

"And so by please Rob——"

"I dried my weeping eyes," and allow...ed myself to be comforted."

"And will that little play be enacted ...again—say, to-morrow evening?" ...asks Garth savagely.

"I hardly think my grief will need ...renewing," she answers, laughing. "But ...it is getting late, and I must go."

"Good-bye," he says, with greater ...coldness than he has yet displayed, ...neither holding out his hand nor looking ...at her.

"Good-bye"—maliciously imitating ...him.

...She begins to walk rapidly over the ...moor in the direction of the steep road ...that leads by various turns and twists to ...the village below. Half way down the ...hill she looks behind her. Garth ...is following.

...She walks back a few yards, and then ...waits for him at the top of the road. He ...runs to meet her, his face and voice ...full of a great passionate gladness.

"I knew you did not really mean to ...go without a word of farewell!" ...he says joyfully. "And yet I suffered a ...martyrdom when I found you had gone. ...Tell me, Fancy, you do care a little?"

"I had something to say to you; but ...I have forgotten what it is!" she ...answers, hurrying breathlessly up the ...steep road, and perching herself upon a ...great rock in the shadow of a disused ...windmill. Garth has thrown himself ...at her feet.

"I shall remember presently what I ...have to say—something very impor...tant, I dare say. I hate to think of it, Fancy. I ...am content to have you here."

"And I am content too," and a little ...hand creeps up into her fair locks as Garth's ...head sinks in passionate admiration. Her large brown ...eyes, shaded by lashes long ...and thick—are dark and tenderer than ...any gazelle's ever seen by man. ...Her hair, full of perfume, and fresh like ...a breeze from the sea, blows over her ...golden hair and flutters caressingly about the ...milky white throat. Her two little ...hands are clasped in Garth's.

"You will meet me to-morrow, Fancy? ...Just one more meeting before we part?"

"To-morrow may be wet, or Rob may ...want me. If I can, I will; but you ...must not wait for me."

"I suppose that means I must not ex...pect you?" he says sadly. "But I shall ...look upon it as a bad omen, Fancy, if you ...do not come; so you will try for my ...sake?"

...She nods her head, and a little sigh ...escapes her.

"And now I must really go," she ...says. "Rob will be at home; and who ...knows? Jenny may send him out to ...find me."

...She gets up from her mossy seat and re-ties her hat over her head. Her heart ...is a little sad at the thought of parting, ...and a strange unusual pain and trouble ...war with her girlish fears of discovery by ...her guardian; and, when her eyes at last ...seek her lover's they are treacherously ...full of tears.

...Garth clasps her to his arms as she ...stands there, half frightened and wholly ...nerveless.

"My darling," he cries passionately, ..."you do love me a little, you will be ...true to me—you will not forget me when ...I am gone?"

"But you will come back, Garth; and ...in the meantime——"

"In the meantime I leave you so ...much."

"He is not very terrible after all," she ...says, smiling. "You need not be jealous ...of him; he will take good care of me, ...that is all."

"Very soon this will seem only like a ...dream to you, Fancy. You are so young, ...and know as yet so little. Ah, my pet, ...if I could only believe you loved me as I ...want you to!"

...His voice, low and trembling with the ...earnestness and force of his words, ...sounds almost like a reproach to Fancy.

"It is not I that am likely to change," ...she retorts quickly. "I have a great deal ...more reason to think that you will forget ...me."

"As if such a thing could be!" he says ...confidently. "Yet suppose I were ...never to return"—putting her a little ...from him and surveying the lovely face ...and figure with a proud lover-like sense of ...possession—"what would you do?"

...Fancy rouses herself out of a little reverie.

"I—oh, I dare say I should manage to ...survive it—with Rob to help me of ...course."

"Rob again!" is the jealous rejoinder. ..."I shall never be able to feel properly ...parental towards him."

"Oh, it is quite easy, Garth, when you ...remembered how good and kind he has ...always been to me! He was my father's ...friend, you know; and, when my father ...died, I was left quite alone in the world, ...and Rob has been from that time another ...father to me."

...She speaks with a sudden grave sweet...ness of her obligation to Rob, without ...shame or without pride. Her words have ...a depth and pathos in them which go ...straight to the heart of the listener—he ...understands what she does not yet dream ...of.

"And you say that I ought not to be ...jealous of him?"

"You would not if he were really my ...father. Why then should you because ...he has assumed that relationship to me?"

"First, because the two things have ...not the shadow of a resemblance, and ...again because you love him, Fancy."

...Her face reddens painfully; but she ...manages to keep down her rising wrath.

"I should be the most ungrateful ...wretch on the face of the earth if I did ...not!" she retorts warmly.

"The day will come when he will stand ...between you and my love," answers ...Garth fiercely, "and so I do right to hate ...and dread him."

"Rob will never stand in the way of ...my happiness, and I am not afraid of the ...future."

...He draws her nearer to him, and his ...hands close tightly over hers.

"Promise me, Fancy, that, whatever ...happens in the future you will not let ...him take you from me, you will not ...listen to him—you will trust me then as ...you do now—wholly and absolutely."

"I have not the least idea what you ...mean," she answers, raising her frank ...eyes fearlessly to his. "I love you very ...much, Garth, and I will do everything I ...can to make Rob like you too—that is, ...when you know each other; but you ...must not cry"—laughing—"to take Rob's ...place to me. I could never fear you as I ...do him."

"My darling!"

"And now I must really go, Garth. ...Oh, I hope we shall never have to say ...good-bye again! It is hateful, and makes ...one feel so foolish. Yes, I will meet you ...just for one moment on the path by the ...waterfall. And so once more good-bye."

"Give me one of your flowers, Fancy—I have nothing to carry away in remem...brance of you."

...She plucks the little bunch of flowers ...from her waistband—a sprig or two of ...lavender and the few cherished purple ...pansies; the pansies she singles out and ...gives to him.

"I would rather have had the laven...der," he says dreamily. "I do not like ...the suggestion of love in idleness."

"That means in the summer, I sup...pose," she answers, laughing; "for one is ...always idle then. I am glad they have ...such a pretty meaning, and I am quite ...content to be your 'love in idleness.' ...Besides, is it not true, directly business ...calls you, away you go, and 'love in idle...ness' no longer attracts you?"

"My love always," he says, pushing ...back the soft clustering hair that almost ...hides the milk-white forehead—"my love ...in idleness and earnestness and every...thing else!"

...Then, for one brief moment, the beauti...ful head falls back upon his shoulder, and ...his lips meet hers in one long kiss; a few ...words are murmured—a long last cling...ing of hands, and Fancy is hurrying down ...the hill again. The twilight is fast giv...ing place to night, and the love of summer ...is ended.

CHAPTER II.

...Ten years before Fancy Carlyon came, ...a desolate little orphan, to the lonely ...farm on the great Yorkshire moor.

...The owner of the farm, Robert Con...stant, had been her father's friend in ...very early youth, for Rob was hardly ...one-and-twenty when he accepted the ...trust his dying friend imposed upon him, ...namely, the care of his unprotected ...motherless child, and brought the little ...one home to Langley to be the light and ...sunshine of his lonely life. How loyally ...and faithfully he had fulfilled his promise ...to the dead man's heart best himself ever ...knew, and of such a thing he never even ...thought. Unconsciously she had been ...the foremost object of all his work-dark ...toil, the one bright and loving thing that ...made possible a life of unremitting ...labour; for, although Rob came of a ...good family and farmed the farm he ...worked, still he was not rich; the land ...was gravy high, farming expensive, and ...returns the direct; that first dark of having ...always end of hands about had been his ...only safety during years of bad summers ...and scant harvests that had told heavily ...on the country around.

...But he liked work, and was used to it; ...and in the evening there was always ...Fancy to talk to or read to him, or often...er still, to sit at his feet, quite silent, ...gazing, as was her wont, into the dull-red heart of the fire and dreaming ...dreams in which he had no part or lot.

...But what should he know of that? ...For ten long years this bright young ...life had flowed on side by side with us. ...How should he think of changes that ...might come, of maiden fancies, of dis...tant lovers, of desires and longings utter...ly beyond his reach to satisfy? All these ...had no existence for him—they belonged ...to a region beyond his world or his ...speculations; and not once during all ...those firelight reveries had he asked the ...child, whose lovely eyes grew so large as ...the night went on, what visions came to ...her in the fiery mirror she questioned so ...persistently.

...The fire burns brightly on the hearth ...upon this particular evening, for the ...nights are chilly, despite the strength of ...the noon-day sun; and Jenny, the con...fidential old servant of the Constants, ...sits knitting alone in the light of the ...leaping flames.

...Since her mistress's death, fifteen ...years before, Jenny has had the care of ...everything at Langley, Fancy included; ...but, being wedded to old customs and ...past usages, she and the girl do not get ...along well together. At seventy, people ...have not time, even if they had the de...sire, to unlearn all their life's experience, ...and the young are equally hard to be ...convinced that the experience of others ...can be of any value to them. Fancy ...thinks Jenny old and stupid, and Jenny ...is full alive to the thoughtlessness and ...frivolity of youth. She has watched this ...afternoon grow into the early twilight ...and the twilight deepen into night with ...more anxiety than usual, for, in addition ...to believing with another Jeanne that ..."Twilight is not good for maidens," she ...does not wish Rob to come home and ...find the girl still out.

...In a few moments however she dis...tinctly hears Rob's footsteps coming up ...the long garden-path, through the porch ...and hall. Two large dogs bound out to ...welcome him, but are gently repulsed. ...Jenny lights the lamps and draws down ...the blind, and then carries her knitting ...into the next room, which, being the ...kitchen, is her own especial domain.

..."Where is Fancy—not home yet? ...Jenny, you don't take proper care of the ...girl."

...Jenny busies herself with the pots of ...flowers on the low broad window-sill; ...she does not answer her master; she is ...hurt as well as indignant at his implied ...reproach.

..."It is eight o'clock and almost dark ...too; she has no right to be out at this ...time of night."

...But Jenny can bear this no longer. ...She turns to the young man suddenly and ...lowers her voice so as to give it all the ...emphasis she wishes.

..."Then it might be as well for you to ...tell her so, Master Rob; Miss Fancy's ...too old to listen to me."

..."Old—what do you mean?" demands ...Rob, and wondering at the same time ...whether Jenny may not be taking leave ...of her senses. "Fancy is only a child."

..."She is eighteen, Master Rob—and a ...girl of eighteen is not a child."

...Robert Constant comes forward to the ...fire and sits down in the chair Jenny ...puts for him. He builds up the peat ...carefully around the centre blaze, but he ...does not say anything more; only Jenny's ...knitting-needles break the silence with ...their rapid click, click.

...He is a noble-looking man, this guard...ian of Fancy's; and Garth Calderon's ...jealousy is not difficult to understand. ...He is tall and stoutly built, six feet in ...height, has keen blue eyes, a grave hand...some face tanned by exposure to sun and ...wind, and hair and moustache of a golden ...hue. He wears to-night a costume of ...gaiters and knickerbockers, with a vel...veteen coat, and a silk handkerchief ...loosely knotted at the throat.

..."Why, Jenny, he says in surprise, ..."Fancy is almost a woman! How many ...years is it since I brought her back with ...me that time?"

..."Ten years and four months, Master ...Rob."

..."Impossible!"

..."It is true, sir; time passes very quick...ly;" and Jenny sighs, as though she ...owes Time a grudge on that score.

...Ten years since Fancy came to Lang...ley? Eighteen years old? And to him ...she has not altered in the least; so Rob...ert Constant's thoughts run. To him she ...is still the same merry, loving, obedient ...child, just as sweet and gentle as she has ...always been. What then are the changes ...Jenny hints at? What difference have ...the years made beyond the fact that the ...child has grown into a woman? But ...that is in itself more than he can grasp ...all at once. Fancy a woman! How ...strange it seems!

..."Where is she!" he demands suddenly.

..."How can I tell?" answers the old ...woman crossly; "that is for you to find ...out."

..."What do you mean? Speak out—the ...truth, mind; whatever it is."

..."I know no more; Miss Fancy keeps ...her own secrets."

...He gets up, and, throwing back his ...chair, walks across the kitchen into the ...hall, and through the porch door into ...the still dark night. Everything is so ...peaceful, so hushed, that he is almost ...startled at the sound of his own foot...steps, his own quickened heart-beats.

...He reaches the little white gate that ...opens on to the moor, but can hear or see ...nothing; he unlatches it and walks a ...few yards away from the moor, in the ...direction of the village.

...Suddenly he hears the little gate click, ...and quick light feet run up the unevenly ...flagged garden-path; in a moment he ...has overtaken the girl and called her by ...name.

..."Rob, how you frightened me! Were ...you near the gate when I came through?"

..."Who else should it be?" he asks ...kindly; but, in spite of his self-control, ...his voice trembles a little. "I'm glad ...you got back safely," he says, after a ...pause; "Jenny was a bit anxious about ...you. You see people have been lost on ...the moors."

...She clasps his arm with her two little ...hands; she is excited and overwrought; ...but she answers with a little nervous ...laugh.

..."No danger of that, Rob darling; I ...could find my way across the moors on ...the darkest night; I know every inch of ...them."

..."Then you were on the moors after ...all!"

...The man's face flushes darkly, then ...grows very pale, his hands are heavy on ...her shoulders; she trembles slightly, ...and murmurs something about the dark...ness frightening her.

..."Were you alone on the moors, Fancy!"

..."Whom should I be with?" she ...answers gaily.

...Hastily thrown down her hat and ...cloak on to a chair in the hall, Fancy ...goes into her own little parlour instead ...of into the kitchen where she usually ...spends her evenings.

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes o adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

AGAIN!

Once again time has brought us to the farmer's busy season, and the merchant's correspondingly dull one. With the lull in trade comes the semi-annual cry for HELP from the unfortunate merchant whose injudicious buying has again placed him in the unenviable position of having too much left over. The cry comes in many ways, but whether it comes as "cutting down prices," "Monster clearing sales," or a discount of five or ten per cent. it is still the same melancholy wail, the oft repeated acknowledgment of business incapacity.

We are again in a position to inform our friends that we will happily be under no necessity of making any extra effort to dispose of our summer stock, as we shall CARRY NONE OVER.

We are now constantly receiving by express such lines of goods as are in daily demand at the present season, including :—

Robe Prints,
Gold and Black Prints,
Embroideries,
Curtain Nette,
Athole Shirtings,
Boating Shawls, &c.

The standing is considerably above the average.

BUILDING CONTRACT.—Mr. D. Carlyle, the energetic contractor, who completed Mr. Cluxton's corner block with such unexampled despatch, has received the contract for building the new block adjoining on Hunter street, on the site of D'Arcy's Hotel. The building will be similar to the corner block. He has also a contract from Mr. Hazlitt for extensive improvements on the Huffman House block, including the raising of the walls, and construction of a large wing and a new mansard roof.

LACROSSE.—The following Lacrosse team from the Peterborough Club play to-day at Kingston for the Gildersleeve Cup:—W. Sanderson, Field Captain; J. Donoghue, Goal; W. Rudkins, Point; J. Caughlin, Cover Point; P. Rudkins, J. Joyal and M. McDonald, Defence Field; J. Sheehy, Centre Field; J. Simpson, M. Halpin and R. H. Fortye, Home Field; H. Phelan and C. Rutherford, Home; M. Tierney, Spare Man. We wish the boys success in the contest, and we are sure they will acquit themselves well at all events.

CRICKET MATCH. The "second eleven" of the Peterborough Cricket Club appear to be having remarkably good luck, and we will back these to beat the "first eleven" of their own Club any day. Last Friday the Bobcaygeon first eleven came down to town to play our second, and there was the usual slaughter of the innocents, Bobcaygeon scoring 47 in two innings and Peterborough 78 in the first and 3 (!) in the second. In the two innings Hallet scored 13, Hartley 40, Miles Hamilton 20, Hamlin 10, Max Hamilton 17, Hilton 9, Robertson 40, Carnegie 4, Stratton 29, Rook 0, and Snyder 1. The Bobcaygeon boys divided among them the honor of ten ducks' eggs, five in each innings. The only double figure reached on their side was 12 by Brandon.

The Ashburnham School will re-open after the holidays, on Monday next.

TORONTO OIL COMPANY are sole manufacturers of Casterine Machine Oil. Infringements will be prosecuted. 1-1y

DESTRUCTION OF THE WAUBASHENE MILLS.—On Sunday last the fine mills of the Georgian Bay Timber Company were completely destroyed by fire. No particulars are as yet forthcoming.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.—The Rev. T. Walker, A. B., will take the services at this church, on Sunday next, preaching both at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. The public are invited; seats free.

BURGLARY AT BETHANY.—Some unknown party or parties on Sunday night forced the door of the Midland Station at Bethany and ransacked the ticket office, getting away with a letter containing ten dollars.

MASONIC.—Among the elected officers of the National Great Privy of the Masonic Templars of Canada we notice the name of R. E. Sir Knight Rev Vincent Clementi, of Peterborough, Grand Chaplain.

EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY.—Mr. G. A. Morrison, in another column, offers for sale that handsome two-story brick residence, corner Parker and Weller sts., opposite the residence of Mr. Geo. A. Cox. 33-1

CHEAP EXCURSION.—The Cobourg people have arranged for a cheap excursion to Rochester on the 30th inst, return tickets from Peterborough, good for six days, being put at the low rate of $2. Further particulars will be given next week. 33-1

ATTENTION is directed to the new stock of Boots and shoes just opened out by R. Stenson & Son for the Fall Trade. These have been bought at close figures in the best markets and are confidently recommended to buyers, both as to quality and value. 33—

DOES IT PAY?—It always pays to read about what others do, and say, and think, in the same line of work or business. If one does not find direct information specially applicable to his own work, yet the thoughts and methods of others incite new thoughts and plans in the readers own mind, that lead to profitable results. The reading, thinking man makes his head help his hands. Brains tell everywhere, and in nothing more than in farming, gardening and housekeeping. And the fewer brains one has, or thinks he has, the more anxious should he be to get all the facts and suggestions he can from other people's thinking and experience.

THOUSAND ISLANDS EXCURSION.—One of the cheapest and most attractive excursions of this season will undoubtedly be that to the Thousand Islands, taking in Alexandra Bay, St. Lawrence Park and Brockville, which will take place next week. A train will leave Peterborough at 10 o'clock, on Friday 26th, arriving at Port Hope at noon. The steamer Norseman leaves Port Hope at 3 o'clock, and will lie over at Kingston on the way down a sufficient time to enable the excursionists to get a view of the Thousand Islands by daylight. On the return the boat will reach Port Hope on Tuesday noon, the Peterborough excursionists getting home by the evening train. Tickets from Peterborough for the round trip only $2.50, good for the trip on the boat, and on the cars for ten days. A band from Orono will accompany the excursionists, and no pains spared to ensure the utmost pleasure and comfort. The trip itself is one of the most delightful that can be imagined, and those who fail to make it will lose a treat not often presented for so insignificant an amount of money.

Under the Mackenzie Government the public works at the Cornwall Canal were carried on by Messrs. Gordon, Woodward & Co., who were Conservatives in politics. After the change of Government a firm composed of Gordon, one O'Brien, of Montreal, and a lawyer named Bergin, who, by the way, is brother to the Dominion member for Cornwall, tendered for the construction of lock gates on the Welland and Lachine canals. The firm containing the brother of Dr. Bergin naturally enough obtained the contract. Last session of Parliament the Government secured a vote of $40,000 for the construction of lock gates on the Cornwall Canal. The lumber for these gates has been lying on the banks of the canal for the past two years. The Government never advertised in the local papers for tenders for the work, and no trace can be obtained of their having so advertised anywhere; yet the other day Mr. Gordon, who is the partner of Dr. Bergin's brother in constructing the lock-gates for the Welland and Lachine canals, was awarded, without competition, the contract for similar work on the Cornwall Canal. Has there been favouritism?

THE EXCURSION TO BELLEVILLE.—As the EXAMINER will be in the hands of its readers this week on Wednesday evening, the following from the Belleville Intelligencer will be of interest to those who intend patronizing the Separate School excursion:—"Mr. T. Kelly, the Chairman of the Separate School Board, Dr. Hourigan and Mr. T. Cahill, members of the Board, visited this city to make preparations for the hundreds who it is expected will accompany the excursion. These gentlemen arranged with several hotels for meals for the excursionists, and also secured the market building as a place for taking lunch in for those who may bring baskets with them. Here tables will be set, and hot water supplied. Our obliging City Clerk promised to do his share—and that is a good deal—towards entertaining the excursionists, and he will have the city buildings all open, as also the tower, from which the best views of the city are to be had. Mr. D. Holden, Chairman of the Belleville Separate School Board, Mr. E. Mahon, and other gentlemen, were called on, and they promised to do everything in their power to make the visit of our Peterborough friends a pleasant one."

THE WATERWORKS COMPANY.—Councillor Rutherford, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, and also of the joint committee called a general meeting of the waterworks question recently trusting to the Daily Evening, as a sufficient announcement. Less than a dozen persons were present in consequence. We observe now the following announcement in the same journal:—

"At the request of Councillor Rutherford, chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, we announce that a stock book will be opened at this office at once, to enable those who desire to subscribe stock in the proposed Waterworks Company to do so. The book will only be kept open until the 25th of this month. The $60,000 has been divided into 400 shares at $150 each, to give every person a chance to become a stockholder."

As the Company is being promoted, or proposed to be promoted, by the town, which is to be a stockholder supplying the happy [illegible], and as the Review office, we may remind the Chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee that the office of the Town Clerk is the proper place for the transaction of such business, unless it may be, as some people opine, that the Review is more deeply interested in the venture than appears on the surface.

GO FROM HOME TO HEAR NEWS.—The Belleville Intelligencer says: "Mr. Geo. A. Cox, president of the Midland and Grand Junction Railway, is reported to have invested in a lot 22 ft. by 96 ft. at the corner of Main and Notre Dame Streets, Winnipeg, for which he paid the sum of $9,400."

CANDIDATE FOR THE MERCER INSTITUTION.—Anne Cook and Minnie Cook were charged before the Mayor, on Tuesday, with using improper language on the streets. The woman was found guilty and fined $5 and costs, or 21 days in gaol; she took the latter alternative. The girl was remanded till the return of the Magistrate. These characters have become a nuisance in the town, and it is hoped Mr. Hatton will find authority to send the younger female for a term to the Mercer Reformatory.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL SURVEY.—Mr. Rubidge is pushing on the examination of various routes for the Trent Valley Canal, engineers being now engaged in surveying a district route from Stoney Lake to Crow Bay, which would cut off Peterborough altogether. It is not however likely to be adopted, unless the engineer in charge of the surveys intends to make a report which the Minister will not be able to recommend to Parliament. Mr. Rubidge, however, appears to be going into his work in earnest, his intention being to examine all possible routes, leaving the responsibility with the Minister.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A fatal accident occurred at the Trent Narrows on the Cobourg and Marmora railway last week. There is a steep up grade from the river, at which the engineer takes a run with all steam on. Not having started quickly enough he had to back up, and in doing so backed several cars over into the river. A man employee on the road, named Gray of Blairton, unfortunately went over with the hindmost car and being struck in his descent by the falling ore, was knocked senseless and drowned. The body was immediately grappled for and recovered, and presented a mutilated appearance. The wreck of the cars is still submerged in the water, and is linked with the trunks remaining on the track.

OUR BAND.—The Fire Brigade Band, which is also the Band of the 57th Battalion, are going, in the latter capacity, to take part in the contest of Professional Bands at the International Tournament, at Ingersoll, next month. They propose giving a Promenade Concert in the Drill Shed, on the 29th inst., under the patronage of the officers of the Battalion, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to defraying their expenses to Ingersoll. The tickets are placed at 25 cents for lady and gentleman, and those who attend may be assured of a first-class entertainment. The band is a credit to the town in every respect, and we hope the citizens will turn out en masse and show in a practical manner that they feel an interest in an institution which we feel sure will uphold the credit of the town as they did on a former occasion.

PETERBOROUGH CANOES AWAY FROM HOME.—We extract the following from the Globe's special, of Thursday, giving an account of the great canoe meeting at Lake George:—"The four races to day, Thursday 11th were all paddling races, the last being an upset race. There was a great deal of interest in the first event the four entries including three of the Canadian visitors in their swift canoes, and one American. The course was half a mile down the lake from the Crosby-side lock, around a stake-boat, and return. The three Canadians entered were N. D. Beck, E. B Edwards, and W. P. Shaw, and the American was Captain Kendall, the veteran sailor and canoe man. The four men all used the single-bladed paddle, and for a few hundred yards they kept well together. Then Edwards forged ahead, with Shaw second, Beck third, and Kendall, the American, last. In this position they rounded the stake-boat, and there was no change throughout the race. Mr. Edwards was therefore the winner, Kendall being a bad last, several hundred yards in the rear." * * * "All the canoemen here look with admiration at the beautiful open canoes brought from Peterboro', Ontario. They are considered the most perfect models of canoe architecture ever put afloat for open canoes. They are built exactly after the pattern of the Indian birch-bark canoes, and are made of birchwood, each containing about 300 separate pieces."

PERSONALS.

Mr. Sheriff Kennpt is reported as much improved in health.

Col. Ketcheson, of Lindsay, a veteran of 1812, and a nonagenarian, was in town with the Belleville excursion last week.

Mr. W. H. Moore and family returned last week from the seaside, where they had been spending some six weeks.

Mr. R. Grundy with Mr. John Carneg, left on Thursday for the Old Country; the former for England, the latter for Scotland.

Dr. George Burnham and family left on Saturday for a trip down the St. Lawrence, to spend a few weeks in the Eastern Townships.

Mr. George A. Cox, President of the Midland Railway, Dr. Kincaid, Rev. Mr. Shaw and W. A. Morrow, returned on Tuesday night from their trip to Winnipeg.

It is stated that Mr. Thomas Keenan, an extensive property-owner, of Lindsay, is about to remove to Kansas to reside. Apparently he does not believe in the "hum."

The Rev. F. Ratcliff, of the Baptist Chapel, Smith, has lately received the valuable present of a new buggy from the members of the Church and congregation under his care. This is a kindly and fitting acknowledgment of Mr. Ratcliff's zealous and faithful devotion to the welfare of his parishioners.

Mr. Alex. Haggart, of the law firm of Ross, Killam & Haggart, Winnipeg, who has been in town on a visit to his old friends in this vicinity, left on Monday night on his return to the prairie city. A number of friends were at the station to give him a "send off." We are glad to know that he is meeting with every success in the practice of his profession in Winnipeg.

The Rapid City Standard complains that buyers of land around Odanah have been notified that all sales made by agents of the Government since June 1st have been cancelled, and that in some instances settlers have experienced great hardship thereby. The order to this effect, it appears, did not reach Odanah till nearly two months after it was to take effect, and many of the settlers having put in crops and built houses, are at considerable loss.

Mr. Mackenzie in Scotland.

Speech to the Burgesses of Inverness.

MANLY UTTERANCES WITH THE RING OF STERLING METAL ABOUT THEM.

On the evening of Friday, July 29th, the freedom of the burgh of Inverness was presented to the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, ex-Premier of Canada, who is presently making a tour through the Highlands. Provost Fraser occupied the chair, and in presenting the burgess ticket to Mr. Mackenzie, referred to him as a Highlander of whom they should be proud, and spoke in laudatory terms of his services in Canada.

Mr. Mackenzie, after some preliminary remarks, went on to say there was no happier community on the face of the earth than that which fell to the Dominion of Canada. They had room for 30,000,000 or 40,000,000 more people, and not be overcrowded, and they had room for those of the people of this country who might be displeased with the march of events in the mother country. In Canada they saw the development of the science of government. They had a people entirely democratic, and yet under the sway of the Queen. There were two systems of government on the continent of America. In the United States they were under a President with fully more power than the Queen, and they had also a British province essentially democratic in all its government—municipal or political—but owning allegiance to a Sovereign whom they are and whose beneficent sway was felt and approved of as much in Canada as could possibly be in Scotland—(applause)—and they hoped to be able to show those who believe that democracy could only exist under a republican form of government that it was quite consistent with a monarchical form. Her Majesty the Queen was ever discriminate in the exercise of her prerogative—quite as much as the President of another country. It has been one of his great objects in political life in Canada to harmonize the various elements of government in connection with their new constitution. The honorable gentleman then went on to give an interesting sketch of the political institution of the Dominion. Happily at this moment on the continent of America the Canadian government had the best possible relations with the United States. People lived in the utmost harmony; a strength of toleration prevailed which bade fair to bring the United States into a common centre with Great Britain and her colonies in the interests of civilization over the whole world. It will be gratifying to be able to maintain that state of affairs. They were practically one people as to the influence to be exercised abroad, and while they might sometimes have to submit to a little injustice by their friends of the United States, who were very exacting, and to a little misconception by their statesmen in this country, yet they always managed to get over their difficulties. He once asked a United States Senator if he meant, or at least Senator Sumner meant, that Britain should really pay 200 millions of pounds sterling in name of Alabama damages. "Ah;" said he, "you don't understand our people at all. We always ask everything we can think of, and TAKE EVERY THING WE CAN GET."

(Laughter.) It was his (Mr. Mackenzie's) duty as Prime Minister, when they had to settle the fisheries claims under the Washington Treaty of 1876, to have them supervised. Lord Carnarvon a very excellent man, named an English gentleman to act as their commissioner, but he (the speaker) declined to accept him. He told his lordship that in all matters of diplomacy Englishmen had been outwitted by the United States and he named a Canadian gentleman. After some delay the gentleman was accepted, and the result was that they got five millions of dollars in the name of damages; whereas had an Englishman managed the business they would have got nothing—at least if it had been managed as in times past. There can be no doubt that it was far better to have Canadian affairs managed by those who understand them than by Englishmen who know nothing whatever of them. (Applause.) There would probably be no more demands of the kind, but what ever Canadian Government existed would see to it that AFFAIRS RELATING TO CANADA WERE MANAGED BY CANADIANS.

He would not dream of turning such an occasion as the present into an opportunity for glorifying Canada, or giving an emigration lecture, but he would like to refer to the oportunities they in Canada have of providing for such people as thought they could get on better than they would in England, Scotland, or Ireland. Continuing, he said—The Canadian Government and the Pacific Railway Company are offering facilities to those who go to that country, whether to remain or merely to ascertain the capabilities of the country for themselves: and while I would not ask anyone to go there if he is doing well here, it might be well to know that there is a place where those who till the soil have at least as good opportunities as it is possible for them to have in any part of the world. There are no struggles there about land laws. We have

FREE TRADE IN LAND,

as we would like to have in other things. (Applause.) We can buy and sell it as cheaply and as easily as we can buy and sell tea and sugar. One word in regard to the political position of Canada. When I left office I was impelled to it somewhat hurriedly (laughter)—by a public expression that there was no mistaking. When I went into office I carried my principles with me—(applause) and I carried them with me when I left office. (Renewed applause.) My opponent by his skill and eloquence managed to persuade the people that I was wrong in having all restrictions removed from trade, and he succeed in inducing people in Canada to believe that restriction in trade was a good thing, and that if a man got struck on one cheek the best plan was to blister the other cheek as an equipoise. (Laughter.) We bowed, however, to the popular will, as every well-regulated community should do. (Hear, hear.) I am anxious to have harmonised with that of the Empire, and to have them adopt the system of trade relations which have obtained so vast an ascendancy in England, Scotland and Ireland, and stimulated trade to such an extent as one could scarcely believe could be accomplished. In some manufacturing districts we have some grumbling and a desire for reciprocity, which really means to strike those whom you believe to be striking you. But the Canadian people are extremely desirous as a people to maintain the most intimate and cordial relations with the mother country. Whether there ever could be any change in the system of government which could bring the Colonies into a still more intimate relation with the Mother Country I am not prepared to say, but I think not. It might do to speak of the federation of the Empire in a holiday speech, or when all other subjects had failed, but for practical uses I think the Colonies will continue best to govern themselves with a governor sent from England and occupying the position of Viceroy, while the Legislatures of the

THE POLICY OF THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT

COLONIES MANAGE THEIR OWN AFFAIRS.

(Applause.) This, I think, is the true science of good colonial government, and which will be continued as long as the present relations between the Mother Country and her Colonies exist, and I hope that will be permanent. (Renewed applause.) We have in a patriotic sense to consider is Canada not merely our own interests, but the interests of the Empire at large, and what is due to the other portions of the world; and if Britain should ever be in such difficulty as to require as armed force to maintain her position, Canada as well as Australian colonies will not only be able but of hard work. (Applause.) In 1866 and 1870, when Canada was threatened by an invasion of Fenians simply because it was a British colony, in twenty-four hours 20,000 men of of arms was raised—a very difficult thing, I should imagine, even in this country, and such was the strength manifested that the attempt to invade the country and introduce disorder and anarchy—such was the moral effect that that attempt never was and never will be repeated again. (Applause.) Mr. Mackenzie concluded by thanking the Council for conferring on him the freedom of the capital of the Highlands, an honor of which he would ever be proud.

The proceedings closed with three cheers for the youngest burgess, and other three for Mrs. Mackenzie, who was present.

The Irish Land Bill.

It Becomes Law—Preparing for Pacification—Parnell still Irreconcilable.

In the Commons on Friday night, during the debate on the vote for the salary of Chief Secretary for Ireland, Parnell said he thought Forster was more detested by the large body of Irish people than his predecessors on account of the mode in which he administered not only the Coercion Act, but the general laws of the country.

On the vote for law charges and costs of criminal prosecutions, Parnell severely criticised the recent Crown prosecutions in Ireland.

Healey and others sharply attacked the action of the Irish stipendiary magistrates.

The Irish estimates have been disposed of with the exception of five items. Among these is the vote for the constabulary.

Parnell, in calling attention to the re-arrest of Michael Davitt, and moving for his release from imprisonment, said it was currently believed that Davitt was arrested because he called Foster "Mr. Outrage Foster" in a speech. Parnell said it was the meanest and most contemptible act ever committed by any government.

Harcourt, Home Secretary, justified the arrest of Davitt. He said Davitt had returned to Ireland as an avowed Fenian, and used language which no government in the world would tolerate. The Home Secretary incidentally stated that he had often vainly tried to obtain a disavowal of Fenianism from Irish members of the House who supported the Land League. He intimated that they could not disavow the views of those who are supplying funds from America.

Parnell's motion for the release of Davitt, was defeated by 362 to 19.

Dillon violently attacked the Government for not releasing the prisoners, and eulogized Devoy and Davitt.

The military authorities at Limerick have been ordered to prepare several detachments to proceed to different parts of Limerick county at a moments notice. No disturbance is anticipated.

It is believed that Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, who in 1848 headed the young Ireland party and subsequently emigrated to Australia, will endeavor to form a party in Ireland favorable to national aspirations but averse to communistic ideas.

The Queen is reported to have secured a compromise on the Land Bill by intimating to Salisbury her refusal to appeal to the country on the question involving the House of Lords.

President Garfield's Peril.

Hovering between Life and Death Discouraging news from White House.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The Telegram's special says there seems to be a conviction in the minds of nearly all this city that the beginning of the end has come, and that the long struggle of the President for life will soon be closed. His mind wanders, his stomach rebels, his blood is poisoned by the inflamed gland, and sleep was denied him last night. Crowds were around the hotels and neighborhood of the White House all night.

Secretary Blaine cabled Minister Lowell to-night as follows:—"The President has been able to swallow and retain about twenty ounces of liquid food today, showing a better state of his stomach, but his general condition is serious, if not critical. He is weak, exhausted, and emaciated, not weighing over a hundred and twenty five or thirty pounds. His weight when wounded was from two hundred and five to two hundred and ten. His failure to regain strength is one feature which gives special uneasiness and apprehension."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23., 11 a.m.—The condition of the President has not materially changed since yesterday afternoon, and is yet the subject of grave anxiety. Dr. Townshend, health officer of the District of Columbia, said here last night that in case of blood poisoning in a gunshot wound, men died, as a rule, in 20 to 60 days. If they lived beyond 60 days they recovered. He expressed the opinion that the President will have another relapse on Sunday or Monday, and will not have strength to survive it. He also stated that the President has lived longer than any of his physicians believed he would.

The Prince of Wales was suddenly prostrated on Saturday by a cold of such gravity as to cause general and public alarm. His condition at the present time is such that the attending physicians feel compelled to keep the public informed by regular bulletins.

A St. Petersburg correspondent says that the police recently traced a gigantic conspiracy for tampering with the army, in which men high in position, including four colonels of the line, were engaged. The plan was to introduce Nihilist literature and enforce the most rigid discipline, on the pretence that it was specially ordered by the Czar. Peasantry, from among whom the common soldiers are drafted, are said to be demoralized by Nihilism.

A despatch from Constantinople says telegrams received here from the Consuls at Janina state that the British member of the Delimitation Commission was attacked by brigands near the frontier of Epino, and after a sharp encounter, in which the commander of the Turkish escort was killed, the brigands were beaten off.

A despatch from Copenhagen to the Standard says that several Russian men-of-war have been ordered to return to Cronstadt immediately, where a commission will enquire into the charges raised by Golds of mismanagement aboard men of-war.

A Vienna correspondant says: The quantity of grain available for export from Austro-Hungary which may be relied upon is valued at over one hundred million florins. This is almost as much as in 1868, when the export was the largest on record.

It is said that Mitchell Henry will be created a peer, Mr. Law will be made Irish Lord Chancellor, Charles Russel Solicitor General, Sir James Henry to go on the Bench, and John O'Connor Power to a post in the Colonial Office.

On Monday morning about seven o'clock, Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson, relict of the late Moses Thompson, of Clarke, who of late has resided on Bramley street Port Hope, was found dead at the side of her bed. Her daughter has been in to see her a short time previously. The deceased had been ailing for some two years past, but the immediate cause of her death was heart disease.

Wise plunged his knife into Clark's abdomen, inflicting a wound from which he died this noon. Clark was advancing on Wise with an uplifted chair, ready to strike him, when he was stabbed.

GREAT BEND, Kan., Aug. 17.—Mrs Liberty Ratcliff, living three miles south of this town, committed suicide to-day by taking strychnine. She lived two hours. PETERBOROUGH, AUG. 25, 1881.

Protection and Free Trade.

Our contemporary, the Review, has recently formulated a "platform" for its party, in Ontario politics, which comprises disfranchising an undefined number of the constituencies of the Province, the abolition of the Upper Canada College, and reverting back to an obsolete and unsatisfactory method of making legal appointments. The announcement of this "platform," which must have been the result of severe mental labor, has not "fired the heather" throughout the Province, nor yet the waters of the Otonabee, and it was very quietly sat upon in a very emphatic manner by the local wisdom of its party. Probably the people hereabouts knew from experience just how much faith to put in the sincerity of Review "platforms." Perhaps they knew from its past record that the Review can spread a sail to catch any kind of a popular breeze, and is ready at all times to swallow its principles and professions for personal or partizan advantage, with all the dexterity of a professional political mountebank. Its conscience is so very elastic, that feats of this kind are accomplished with an easy grace, almost incomprehensible to those who believe in principle and consistency. For instance, what reader of the Review of recent dates would dream of finding in its columns, not very long since, the following able, logical and irrefutable condemnation of the whole fiscal policy of the Ottawa Government. Yet we take this article from the Review, as it will not attempt to deny:—

"PROTECTION AND FREE TRADE."

"AS A WHOLE WE BELIEVE THE PRESENT CANADIAN TARIFF (15 per cent.) DOES AFFORD INCIDENTALLY ALL THE PROTECTION WHICH ANY CLASS OF MANUFACTURES FOR WHICH THE COUNTRY IS IN ANY MEASURE SUITED REQUIRE FOR THEIR DEVELOPMENT. "But to this tariff the manufacturers object, and FOR THE PURPOSE OF SECURING INCREASED ADVANTAGES FOR THEMSELVES, they are forming associations, subscribing money, sending delegates to Ottawa, starting newspapers to advocate their views, to educate public opinion to that point which will enable them sooner or later to COMPEL PARLIAMENT TO ACCEDE TO THEIR DEMANDS. OF COURSE IN THE OUTSET THEY MODERATE IN THEIR DEMANDS; THEY NOW ONLY ASK AN INCREASE OF FIVE PER CENT. IN CERTAIN DUTIES; BUT THEN, ALL HISTORY OF SIMILAR MOVEMENTS PROVE THAT ONCE SUCH A CAREER IS ENTERED UPON INCREASE UPON INCREASE FOLLOW EACH OTHER IN RAPID SUCCESSION. If this first increase of duty produces the desired effect, the result is that a certain amount of revenue is cut off, and and to replace it other duties have to be imposed. When this is done THEN THE EXPENSE OF LIVING IS INCREASED, wages must be advanced, and then to place the manufacturer in the same position which he occupied before the last increase, a further increase must be made,—AN INCREASE WHICH, WHILE IT ADDS NOT A DOLLAR TO THE REVENUE of the country, ENHANCES THE COST OF THE ARTICLE TO THE CONSUMER. Taking the first article named in the resolutions passed at the Toronto meeting of the manufacturers, namely, "cotton and woollen fabrics," we find that by the present tariff these articles are protected to the extent of 15 per cent., inasmuch as the importer of cotton and woollen fabrics has to pay that duty, while the manufacturer is at liberty to import the material out of which they are made duty free.

"In order to exhibit the working of this let us suppose the case of two woollen mills, the one on the American side of the line, the other on our own—they both obtain their raw material on equal terms, or if there is any difference it is in favor of the Canadian, as he is at liberty to buy his material in the cheapest market in the world, without let or hindrance, while his American neighbor must buy his wool from the American farmer or pay duty on it—then as to wages of operatives, whatever difference there is between the two must be in favor of the Canadian again, inasmuch as THE COMPARATIVE CHEAPNESS OF THE NECESSARIES OF LIFE on this side, as compared with the other, is AN ADVANTAGE WHICH WORKING PEOPLE ARE NOT SLOW TO APPRECIATE. So that independent of the duties altogether the Canadian manufacturer is at least on an equal, if not on a superior footing, to that of his American competitor—when adding to this he has, so far as our own market is concerned, and it is not claimed that this question of tariff affects any but our own market, under the present tariff an advantage of 15 per cent.,—WHERE IS THE SENSE IN THE CRY that the American manufacturer has the advantage of our own? or, is it really true that the Yankee, notwithstanding the disadvantage of high taxation, a limited market from which to draw his material, increased wages, and a duty of fifteen per cent., can undersell the Canadian, and wherefore the cause?

"And then, granting that such is the case, WHAT ARE THOSE WHO PAY THESE INCREASED DUTIES TO RECEIVE IN RETURN? Where is the quid pro quo? IT APPEARS TO US THAT IF ANY ONE HAS THE RIGHT TO COMPLAIN OF THE PRESENT TARIFF, IT IS THE CONSUMER—PARTICULARLY THE FARMER. Let a Canadian farmer take his wool to one of these two factories to sell, and what is the [illegible] Why the Canuck Society per pound [illegible] just to as good as the Yankee's 21 [illegible] While in buying the cloth the Canuck [illegible] with impunity demand a dollar and a cents per yard for the cloth which the [illegible]se offers for a dollar. AND YET THIS [illegible] WANTS MORE PROTECTION! In the [illegible] way we might go through the whole [illegible] even though it is rapidly increasing [illegible] day!

"BUT TO US, THE GREATEST ABSURDITY IN THE WHOLE SCHEME OF THE PROTECTIONISTS IS THAT OF THE FARMER AND THE COAL OF NOVA SCOTIA. We fancy a great many of those gentlemen "SEE THROUGH IT" QUITE WELL, BUT THEN TO CARRY OUT THEIR OWN GAME they must not only scratch each other's backs, but THEY MUST TRY, OR MAKE THE FARMERS BELIEVE THEY ARE TRYING, WHICH AMOUNTS VERY OFTEN TO THE SAME THING, TO PROTECT HIM. DOES ANY SANE MAN BELIEVE THAT THE IMPOSITION OF 25 OR 50 CENTS DUTY PER BARREL WILL PUT A SINGLE PENNY INTO ANY FARMER'S POCKET? If so WE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW HOW IT IS TO BE BROUGHT ABOUT. WHAT IS TO BE DONE WITH THE SURPLUS GROWN EVERY YEAR IN THE DOMINION? IS THE PRICE OF WHEAT IS TO BE ADVANCED BY THE DUTY WHO IS GOING TO BUY THE SURPLUS AT THIS ENHANCED PRICE, AND SEND IT OUT OF THE DOMINION AT A LOSS? BY THE IMPOSITION OF SUCH A DUTY MILLERS MAY MAKE SOMETHING, BUT THE FARMERS OF ONTARIO NOT A CENT, while the Blue-noses will have to pay that much more for their flour, the greatest part of which will go in paying freight, and then in order to make the increased price in the staff of life palatable in Nova Scotia, a duty is to be imposed on coal, so that we may be compelled to buy their coal in return for their buying our bread, and just with about the same result—WE WILL HAVE TO PAY AN ADDITIONAL PRICE, THE DUTY, WHATEVER IT MAY BE."

On the 22nd March following, this publication which was in April, 1870, Sir John MACDONALD'S Government having in the meantime imposed duties on flour, coal and grain, the Review entered its protest against the "absurd" and "insane" principle of Protection in the following language:

"DUTY COMPELS US TO PLACE ON RECORD OUR CONDEMNATION OF THE DUTIES ON COAL, FLOUR AND GRAIN, (with the exception of Indian Corn) AND SALT."

Doubtless when writing the above the Review editor never contemplated having to swallow the principles here so broadly and emphatically laid down, and so ably argued out. At the time this was written the tariff was not looked to as a political field, and the arguments presented were therefore sincere and earnest; and the reader will mark how true a prophet the author has proved himself to be. In every respect, the predictions have been fulfilled to the letter, as the farmers and consumers, whose dangers were here so graphically described, have learned from costly and bitter experience. But what an accomplished hypocrite must the paper be, which, having placed the above on record, goes deliberately to work to impose upon the people the very evils of which it warned them, and which now brazenly asks the farmers and consumers to kiss the rod so unsparingly laid across their backs!

How About "Loyalty?"

The Mail's new editor has had the presumption to sneer at Hon. MR. HUNTINGTON, and to intimate that that gentleman is an Annexationist. We advise him to study up the past history of Canadian statesmen before speaking so glibly of faults which it conjures up in its imagination, and seeks to fasten upon men who have done nothing to merit his abuse. MR. HUNTINGTON came from good old United Empire Loyalist stock, and we defy the Mail to lay its fingers upon a single utterance of his, either public or private, that can in any way be twisted or tortured into a warranty for charging him with disloyalty, and unless it can do so, it must stand as convicted of deliberate and wilful falsehood and slander. The "disloyalty," so far as it has ever found expression in Canada, belongs entirely to the Tory party. It is a matter of notoriety that the Canadian Commissioner at London, Sir A. T. GALT, the chosen friend and possible successor of SIR JOHN MACDONALD, long ago was among the signers of an Annexation manifesto. That he did not repent his opinion is proved by the fact that when asked by SIR JOHN to join his Ministry in 1870, he wrote an open letter declining the honor, and in that letter he wrote of Canadian Independence, which the Mail holds as synonymous with Annexation, as follows:—

"As you have introduced the subject I must in all frankness say that believing it is the policy arrived at by the Imperial Government and feeling confident that it would in many respects benefit this Country, I could not have consented to enter the Cabinet under a pledge to oppose it in any and every form. ON THE CONTRARY I THINK OUR POLICY SHOULD BE FRAMED WITH REFERENCE TO THAT WHICH APPEARS TO ME TO BE INEVITABLE—THE SEPARATION OF THE DOMINION FROM GREAT BRITAIN."

LUCIUS SETH HUNTINGTON has sat in Parliament, for Shefford, for upwards of twenty years, and has been among the most prominent of our public men during that period, and we defy the Mail to find in his speeches and correspondence during all that time a single sentence that is not worthy of the most loyal servant of the Crown in Canada, to say nothing of such damning evidence of disloyalty as that we have quoted above, and to which SIR JOHN'S High Commissioner signed the name of ALEXANDER T. GALT.

The "Globe" and "Mail."

The public have watched with no little interest the keen competition between the two Toronto dailies, for the chief place as news purveyor of the Province. For a time the Mail developed no little vigor, and made a strong bid for popular favor; but it has not been able to hold it. Its only claim to distinction now is its duplicate of New York Herald London "specials," but we do not think a column a day of twaddle about the society and theatrical gossip of London and Paris, or an extra spluge about the foreign influence of the New York Herald, or the christening of a Spanish Infanta, is exactly what the Canadian reader calls news. The Globe has its special correspondent in the Old Country, and has its own cables direct, when events warrant the expense, and these are always of interest and importance. The general news of the World and the Dominion comes to both from the same source, but in the department of special information, the Globe has adopted a system that places it far in advance of its would-be rival. This enterprise it has developed to a wonderful extent recently, and it is applied with such good judgement that the information compiled, at no inconsiderable expense, is of a kind to be of the greatest practical usefulness. People are being familiarized with the varried resources of the country, with its diversified capacity for development, with the fields of enterprise and industry that are offered on every hand, and are obtaining by the enterprise of the Globe, knowledge which they can turn to practical account. Without the trouble and expense of personal examination they can know the extent, situation and capacity of our fields and our forests, our mines and our prairies, and the opportunities that lie open to capital and industry, and in this way the Globe is fulfilling one of the highest functions of public usefulness of a newspaper. In these respects the Globe is improving, and is acquiring fresh claims upon its constituency of readers. On the other hand the Mail is making more rapid retrogression than we anticipated, when its management was changed recently. Its news enterprise is confined to such vapid society chit-chat as the New York Herald's London agent chooses to send, and as the Press Agency, which supplies all the papers and leaves nothing of real import untouched, does not care to burden the wires with. For the rest, its pages are aptly summed up by the Telegram:—"When it is not abusing Mr. Blake it is abusing Mr. Gladstone, and when not abusing Mr. Gladstone it is abusing Mr. Blake." We read in the Review of Saturday:—"If "there is one sign more than another by "which one can judge truly of the success "of a great daily paper, it is by the "advertisements "Situations Wanted,' "and "Situations Vacant." They show "at once the circulation of the paper "among the working classes, and the "esteem in which it is held. The Mail "has, within the past year, come greatly "into favor of this class of advertise-"ments."

We believe this to be a fair test of circulation and popularity, and looking at the advertising columns of the Globe and Mail of that day, we find the following advertisements:—

	Mail.	Globe.
Domestics Wanted	0	9
Mechanics Wanted	19	45
Situations Wanted	5	29
Situations Vacant	20	40
	44	123

The inference suggested by the Review is certainly not flattering to the Mail.

The Argenteuil Election.

The election in Argenteuil resulted, as we anticipated, in the return of the Syndicate Solicitor, Mr. ABBOTT. In order to secure his election an addition of two new parishes was made to the county, in which Mr. ABBOTT gained a majority of 100 out of his total majority of 129. Comparing the result with that of the last election, Mr. ABBOTT'S majority is materially decreased, while an unfortunate incident, which may have been the result of accident, but more likely that of deliberate design, deprived Dr. CHRISTIE of a majority of 63, eighty-seven votes having been rejected in one polling division on account of the neglect of the Deputy Returning Officer to initial the ballots. Of these rejected votes, 75 were cast for Dr. CHRISTIE and 12 for Mr. ABBOTT, so that had the constituency stood as it did in the previous election, the Liberal candidate would have had a clear majority. If there is any political significance in the actual result of the election, it shows a growing strength of the Liberal party in the face of extraordinary influences in the hands of the Tory party. The result is more to be regretted because it shows the complete subjection of the Government, and through the Government of the interests of the country so far as their control lies, to the dominancy of the Syndicate. It is a menace to the Independence of Parliament that salaried officials of this giant monopoly can take their place on the floor of the House of Commons, to look after its interests and not after the interests of the people. In this position Mr. ABBOTT is particularly a dangerous man. Formerly a Liberal, and a member of the MACDONALD-(Sandfield)-SICOTTE Government, he found that there was a better field for his talent for unprincipled intrigue in the ranks of men of looser principles and of easy public virtue, and he betrayed his colleagues and joined the party where his chances of "making" would be improved. He holds the untold secrets of the Pacific Scandal in his possession. He knows the nature of the missing agreement between SIR HUGH ALLAN and SIR JOHN MACDONALD, and he wields a whip of scorpions over the head of the Premier, which gives him a dangerous power. He is the agent of the Syndicate, to see that monopoly gets its last pound of flesh from the country, and that SIR JOHN and his Minister of Railways perform both the compact of the charter, and the unwritten stipulations that no doubt exist between them. Even so good a Tory organ as the Evening News, of Toronto, the Mail's evening edition, is compelled to say of him:—"Mr. Abbott "is not a gentleman in whose personal "aggrandisement we take any particular "interest. He seems to have a keen eye "for the main chance, and to make a "very good thing out of politics. That "he has any principles which he cherishes "more than his private interests we see "no reason to suspect. Were he possessed "of a fine sense of honor, he might consider his position as Solicitor for the Canada Pacific Syndicate incompatible with "a seat in the House." We can only hope that before the next general elections Parliament will feel constrained to pass a law, closing its doors to the entry of such men as Mr. ABBOTT, or any servant, officer or agent of the Syndicate.

John F. Fryer, the young man who took poison in his father's barn, near Roseneath, on Tuesday last, is dead. From the time of swallowing the fatal draught until death relieved him, his sufferings were intense. His father is a respectable farmer. No cause for the act has been assigned.

During the recent thunderstorm four horses, the property of Mr. Wm. Sullivan, lot 21, con. 9, Emily, were killed by lightning. The animals were worth between $500 and $600. He had repeatedly been offered $300 for one team. The loss is a heavy one to Mr. Sullivan as none of the animals were insured.

A tenement near the cabery, occupied by Mr. Presley, and family, was burnt during Sunday night. The family were awakened from their repose by the suffocating fumes of the burning building, and had barely time to escape with their lives from the fierce embraces of the blazing flames. The building and furniture were a total loss, and Mr. Presley was the loser of some valuable jewellery. No insurance. Cause of fire not known.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

At the Bowmanville furniture factory on Monday of last week, a lad of 12 years named Robert Ellemora, fell down the hoist shaft and was picked up in a dying condition. Eager and anxious friends soon surrounded the spot where the injured lad lay, while others hurried off for medical assistance. The boy sank very rapidly, dying dying in half an hour after his fall.

On Monday night of last week three barns belonging to Mr. P. Fitzsimmons, of Ops, were destroyed by fire. The barns contained seventy-five acres of barley, thirty-five or forty tons of hay, a quantity of last year's wheat, a new cutting box and other articles. It is supposed that the barley heated and set fire to the buildings. The loss is estimated at over $3,000, and it is said that Fitzsimmons had no insurance.

On Wednesday night of last week Neads' old foundry at Bowmanville was seen to be on fire from end to end. There were between two and three hundred tons of baled hay in the building the property of Mr. A. G. Cook, of Oswego, and Mr. I. H. Radford, of Kingston. The foundry buildings with contents and a frame dwelling at the south side also owned by Mr. Neads and occupied by Stephen Wright were completely consumed. The hay was fully insured in the Imperial and the buildings for $2,000 in the Lancashire. Mr. Wright saved most of his furniture.

The Colborne Express says:—A serious fire occurred on the premises of Mr. F. Strong, Cramahe, about five o'clock on Saturday evening last. A threshing machine was at work and all hands were busy, when flames were noticed issuing through the roof of a sheep-pen situated some twenty-five feet from the barn. Every possible effort was promptly made to check its communication with the main buildings, but in vain. The property lost, including the buildings, embraces some 1,000 bushels of barley, 200 bushels of oats, 50 tons of hay, &c.; together with the threshing machine, farming implements, etc. Loss is about $1,500—insurance $900, in the Agricultural of Watertown, N.Y.

The following are the names of the successful candidates, from Norwood, in the recent Intermediate Examination:—Walter Ferguson, grade A; Minnie Tracey, grade B; Joseph McCartey, grade B; Lillian Scott, grade C; Annie Pattyson, grade C; Willie Drope, grade C. The Register says:—"This is the most brilliant examination ever passed by the pupils of the Norwood High School. Only 20 per cent. of those who presented themselves for examination in this Province has been successful in obtaining certificates, and, when we consider this fact, it is gratifying to know that Norwood has been so successful."

THE WARER-WORKS QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly oblige by inserting in your valuable paper the following letter, which has been refused insertion by the Review:—

Seeing that water-works is the great topic of the day, and the spokesmen are nearly all on one side of the question, I thought it might not be out of place for me, as a ratepayer who cannot agree with all that has been said on the subject, to give my views. One would suppose from the speeches of Messrs. Cluxton, Dennistoun and Stevenson that we must have water-works and that we are going to get them for next to nothing. They tell us that it will be a good paying concern and that we will likely get great profit from them, and that a fire in our town, with water-works, will be a rare thing. Now, the idea of getting water-works for nothing is a doubtful one—in all my figuring I never could work out something from nothing. As to profit, I never heard of a water-works company yet that could not make their profit just about as they pleased, but they would take care that the town did not get the same advantage. As to fires, I would ask those gentlemen did not Chicago, St. John, Quebec and other cities which have nearly all been burned down, possess water-works? The greatest fire I ever witnessed was in Detroit, in 1866, when the railway station, passenger and freight cars, docks, steamers, etc., were burned, and Detroit had a splendid system of water-works. We are told that $40,000 will be all that is required to build the works, but they do not say what it will cost the ratepayers yearly to maintain them. This, in my opinion, is the principal thing to be looked at. As to the debt of $40,000, it is merely a debt, and we can see the end of that; but the works would have to be kept up just in the same way as our streets and sidewalks, with a staff of salaried officers, and a large annual outlay would be required from pipes rusting, freezing, bursting, etc. A house with pipes in it must keep fires day and night or the pipes will freeze and burst, and no end of expense and nuisance entailed, with floors over-run with water, and plumber's bills to pay at every burst. As to water-works making the town more healthy, Montreal occupies a naturally healthy position, and look at the sickness and mortality there. I kept a store and lived near Dalhousie square on St. Mary street, an elevated part of the street, and the sickness and death there were appalling—one to three persons dying in every dwelling, including my own little daughter, no doubt owing to the impurity of the water supplied through from the reservoir. My doctor's bills in Montreal were of common occurrence; but I have lived in Peterborough for five years, and my whole doctor's bills have only amounted to $2. In my opinion Peterborough can get along without water-works for some time to come yet, very well. They might suit the money lenders very well; but there is not enough of this class in Peterborough to warrant such foolish expenditure. I know from experience they would not suit the widows and orphans, and us struggling ratepayers, who are trying to pay off our mortgages by the sweat of our brow. Our taxes are quite high enough without having about two-thirds more added to them. Allow me to ask how the owners of Mr. Romaine's brick-yard would like to have about two-thirds more added to their present taxes on account of water-works? They might think it hard as the works are standing idle; but would they not have the same right to pay water-rates as other unoccupied buildings? I feel a great interest in our town, and would like to see a straight railway running through Peterborough from Toronto to Ottawa. Then we might expect a number of branch railways coming here from the north-west, and manufactories springing up along our river, with the Trent Valley Canal, making the Peterborough of the future one of the proudest cities of the Dominion.

I remain, Yours &c.,
A RATEPAYER.

A CONFEDERATED EMPIRE.

Britain and Her Colonies.

Speech by Mr. Gladstone's President of the Board of Trade.

At the Trinity House banquet, presided over by the Prince of Wales, Sir T. Brassey proposed "Ships, Colonies and Commerce."

Mr. Chamberlain, a member of the Gladstone Cabinet, in reply said: Your Royal Highness, Your Majesty, Your Royal Highnesses, Lords and Gentlemen,—I am painfully conscious of the impossibility of responding adequately to the toast proposed by Sir T. Brassey at this late period of the evening, and I will confine what I have to say to one or two observations. I venture to assume that I owe the honor of being called upon to respond to the toast to the natural attachment of this ancient corporation to old traditions and associations, and that the toast is a survival of the time when the Board of Trade was a Committee of Trade and of Foreign Plantations. That direct connection with the colonies has ceased to exist, and I am bound to say that I think the severance of those relations is not to be regretted in the interests of the colonies, because when we occupied that position our functions were functions of interference, and the imposing regulations which have always been fatal to trade, which

as an inevitable condition of its complete development. Your Royal Highness, I am sometimes inclined to think that in changing our policy we may possibly have gone a little too far in the other direction. We no longer interfere, we no longer presume to advise, and so it sometimes seems as though we had ceased to interest ourselves in those vast possessions over which Her Majesty exercised a mild and beneficient rule. I have been only recently that there exists somewhere in the neighborhood of Birmingham a school of politicians—I am happy to say entirely imaginary—who desire the absolute severance of the relations of the Mother Country and her dependencies. I think I may say that there does not exist, at Birmingham or elsewhere, any party or any section of a party in this country which does not rejoice in every proof of the increasing progress and prosperity of our colonies, and which does not ardently desire

THE CONSOLIDATION OF THE EMPIRE.

That feeling is not promoted by selfish interest. It is not promoted by any desire for the exclusive prosperity of this country. The advantages, I believe, are as great for the colonies as for England. We are an old country, but I am thankful to believe that we are not decrepit or effete. (Cheers.) Nothing is more extraordinary, in spite of predictions which have continually been made of the decadence of this country, than to witness its continual progress and prosperity. Year after year testifies to the continuous advance in everything that constitutes the greatness of a nation, and the time is further and further removed when our colonies will have to speculate upon the decline of the Mother Country. I was struck very much the other day with a statement of the census, showing that even in a decade of years the

had increased by nearly three and a half millions—more than the total population of our prosperous Australasian colonies, and that increase was coincident with the fact during the same period we have been able to send half a million to the colonies to found communities all over the world, and at the same time we have sent out something like a million of inhabitants to add to the prosperity of the United States. We may regard this rivalry with the colonies with unalloyed satisfaction. It is a competition in which all win prizes. I feel myself that will continue to share our prosperity and to aid in creating it. They are joint possessors of the greatness of England, and everything great and glorious which Englishmen have ever done. They profit from our discoveries, from our art, and from our science, and from the experience of our wisest statesmen, and all these are birthrights of which no Englishman can be deprived, whether he remains at home or carries his fortune to a distant land. So long as these things operate they will strengthen the ties which unite England with her colonial posessions; and as for the ties of material interests, those will be provided by the ships and the commerce which have been so appropriately associated with the toast. Commerce is designed to unite mankind, and it is in this direction that we must look for a closer and of all the members of the Great Britain over which Her Majesty rules. As our communications continually improve, as our ships become larger and swifter and more numerous, and as our commercial relations continually develop, it may yet be that a mighty confederation of all the members of the English family will be realized, and a potent force will be introduced for the peace and civilization of the world. (Cheers.)

CRUELTY AT SEA.

The latest atrocity, an account of which is telegraphed from Quebec, was committed on the sea. A man who had, it appears, shipped on board a vessel as an able seaman, but who was lacking in some of the qualifications, was strung up by the thumbs until his toes only touched the deck. When he would yell with pain an iron belaying-pin was put across his mouth and tied behind his head, and tightened by means of another pin run through the cord and twisted until his eyes would almost fall out on his cheeks. Then he was bared and beaten by the second mate, the instigator of all the cruelty. The brute repeatedly kicked and beat the poor fellow insensible. After much more excruciation at the hands of this human fiend, the unfortunate seaman's prayers for deliverance were at length heard, and the Almighty sent death to his rescue. The second mate has cleared out, being afraid that he will be brought to justice for murder.

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency, and adaptation of results. It strikes at the fountain of [illegible] diseases, allaying [illegible] and subduing inflammation, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. [illegible] the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, and Hoarseness, Catarrh, the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL can not fail, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand for every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many imitations or spurious, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative properties, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs require active and effective treatment, and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is of acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it. The test of half a century has proven its certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

Messrs R. W. Smith & Co., Montreal:

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents,—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGT. 25, 1881.

Trent Valley Canal.

People along the line of the Trent Valley navigation route are beginning, not unnaturally, to get somewhat impatient of the slow progress made in the Government's treatment of the matter, and distrustful of its intentions. The Trenton Courier says:—

"The engineers on the Trent Valley are making progress slowly. Finding great difficulties between Peterborough and Chemong Lake, they are examining the line between Salmon Trout Lake and the Trent river by Marmora river. Evidently there are grave doubts of the ability of the engineers to have the survey so forward as to be able to lay the matters before the next parliament. If this be true, the head engineer will receive great blame from the people for not putting on sufficient force to put the completion of the surveys of the Trent Huron navigation scheme beyond a peradventure this fall. There may be time yet to remedy the matter, and we hope Mr. Rubidge may be able to justly gauge the temper of the people as to have the surveys completed before the meeting of the parliament, so that the Minister may have a chance to form their plans for the immediate construction of this very important vital artery of Dominion commerce."

About a year ago Sir JOHN MACDONALD, in speaking to a deputation at Ottawa from this district said:—"Prima facie it "was shown to be a valuable scheme, and "if, after further investigation, it was "shown that the work could be prosecuted for the present estimates, and if Parliament thought the resources of the "country would enable the Government to "undertake the work, it would be done." The route was critically examined by Mr. STARK C. E. who made an estimate of $3,000,000 for the entire work, including a liberal margin for contingencies. Mr. STARK stands so high in his profession that, had the Government been so disposed, they could with safety have proceeded upon his estimate, which we understand that gentleman, after the most critical reconsideration and examination of the enterprise, is willing to stake his reputation upon. There remained only to ask Parliament to vote a sum for the construction of the work last session, but that was not done. We do not believe it will be done next session. The Courier should not blame Mr. Rubidge—that gentleman has to act according to his instructions, and if matters can be so delayed that the Government will have an excuse next session for again giving the question of construction another "hoist," it will exactly suit the designs of the Minister of Railways.

Current Topics.

THE death of Sheriff ROBINSON, of Welland, opens another vacancy to be filled by Mr. MOWAT'S Government. The Tory organs suggest that it offers a good way of "shelving" Mr. PHIPPS. If this gentleman has earned any public reward, it is due from the gentlemen whom he so successfully aided to power at Ottawa, and who have treated him with such conspicuous and shabby ingratitude.

THE Toronto Telegram says of the Opposition leader:—"No matter what the "provocation may be, and goodness knows "he has had enough of it, he has not al"lowed himself to be provoked into "making personal attacks upon his politi"cal opponents." A man of Mr. BLAKE'S calibre, pursuing a great public duty, has neither time nor disposition to be distracted from the discharge of patriotic labor by the snarling of such a pack of curs as the Telegram alludes to.

ONE of the conspicuous mottos at the TUPPER meeting at St. John was, "Our "own Blue Nose Boys can fight their "battles themselves. No need of help "outside!" And now they have been driven to call on Hon. Mr. CARON and Mr. THOMAS WHITE, to help "our own "Blue Nose Boys" out of the difficulty Mr. BLAKE'S visit seems to have put them into, in spite of their protestations to the contrary.

IT IS worth while to remember that in spite of the Tory majority given in several constituencies by narrow majorities in 1878, the total vote of the Province was: Tory, 126,773; Liberal, 122,220. This shows the importance of the discharge of individual duty in election times. All that is wanted in this Province is a full Liberal vote to ensure success at the general elections.

THE following paragraph has gone the rounds, credited to the Belleville Intelligencer:—"The Conservative party is "not stupid enough to believe even a "tenth part of what the Mail says about "Mr. BLAKE and other prominent mem"bers of the Reform party. The Mail "is injuring its reputation, even among "its own friends." The Mail denies that its Belleville confrere ever said it; but it is true, nevertheless, and it would be more to the Intelligencer's credit, if it had put on record its condemnation of the Mail's disgraceful and villainous tactics.

The Montreal Gazette concludes an article on the recently effected telegraph consolidation, as follows:—"How long "this kind of speculation in property in "which every man in the country is in"terested will continue it is difficult to "foretell, but the time must come when "the public patience will become ex"hausted, and the Government be com"pelled to interpose to defeat the machin"ations of wealthy and not over-scrupu"lous speculators." Nothing could more aptly describe the duty of the Government towards the gigantic land and railway monopoly recently erected in the North-West, nor more pointedly condemn the position of the Gazette itself towards the Syndicate. No doubt in the near future "public patience will become ex"hausted," and a Government—a different one from that which the Gazette supports—be "compelled to interfere" to protect the rights and interests of the people.

The Toronto World says, and the Ottawa Free Press apparently approves the statement, that—

"Sir Hector Langevin by no means deserves the ridicule which some of the newspapers are flinging at him. Those acquainted with the personnel of the Ottawa cabinet know, as the World sometime ago asserted, that Sir Hector is, without exception, the best administrator among the ministers. No department of the government is to-day in a more efficient state than his, and in the House he is rarely tripped up, as most of his fellow-ministers are. Recently he has been doing what he should be credited for rather than depreciated, viz., visiting various parts of the country, in order to acquaint himself with the needs of the public service."

There is no doubt at all that Mr. LANGEVIN is a sufficiently industrious Minister, and that he is always carefully ready in the House with the information prepared by his clerks, when any notice is put on the papers, connected with the affairs of his department. He is also a man of considerable ability, and a fair public speaker. Among the proofs of his indefatigable zeal is the fact that among his own immediate connections, in the inside service at Ottawa, from his brother, the Under Secretary of State, down, there is consumed some $20,000 a year of public money outside his own salary and perquisites. The outside service in Quebec attests that the collateral branches are equally carefully looked after. The fact that he did'nt spend that $32,000 is also a proof of his economy. We dispute most emphatically that his frequent tours in this Province are "in order to acquaint "himself with the needs of the public "service," or that the public service has anything to gain by them. It is, in fact, an ingenious method of pursuing political work at the public expense. There are proper officers paid for acquainting the Minister with these needs, and the Minister's personal attention in the way alluded to is a simple waste of money.

WEST PETERBOROUGH ELECTION

DR. KINCAID, M.P.P.

By the Acclamation of Both Parties.

Yesterday, the 24th, was the day appointed by the Returning Officer, Sheriff Hall, for the nomination to fill the vacancy in the Ontario Legislature created by the death of the late Mr. W. H. Scott. At the appointed hour there were present at the stand in the Court House Park, besides Sheriff Hall, the Returning-Officer, Messrs. Kincaid, Mills, Sanderson, Dolan, Denne, Taylor, Sawers, Moore, McWilliams, Stapleton, Walton, McNeil, ex-Sheriff Hall, and others, the whole assembled majesty of the electorate not aggregating above thirty or forty people.

The Sheriff read his writ for holding the election, and declared himself in readiness to receive nominations.

Mr. M. Sanderson, Warden for the County, proposed the name of Dr. R. Kincaid as a fit and proper person to represent the riding for the unexpired balance of Mr. Scott's term. He referred to the desire expressed by the first Conservative Convention, to unite upon Mr. Cox as a gentleman acceptable to the county and likely to advance its interest. The Liberal party had accepted the suggestion and had nominated Mr. Cox. A Committee was appointed to carry out this object in conjunction with the Conservative party. That party had proposed a number of names upon whom they were willing to agree, and as circumstances had arisen which rendered it impossible for Mr. Cox to be a candidate, the Liberal Committee had agreed, under the circumstances, it would be satisfactory to both parties if they were to unite upon a man as independent from politics altogether, and Dr. Kincaid had been selected in that way. Both parties were to unite upon him as a member untrammelled by any pledges and not sent in the interests of either party. This arrangement bound neither party at the next general election, when each would be at liberty to choose its own candidate, and to make such arrangements as it might deem necessary to the occasion. He therefore nominated Dr. Kincaid as a candidate.

Mr. Thomas Dolan said he was pleased to second the nomination of Dr. Kincaid. He thought both parties had acted wisely in consenting to forego a contest at this time. They all knew the Doctor, most of them better than he, and how he had risen as a citizen and in his profession among them, and they would agree that he was duly qualified to fill with credit the position to which both Conservatives and Reformers had nominated him. The Doctor was not what was called a Tory, but a Liberal Conservative, and he believed he was chosen, if not by all of both parties, by the Liberal men of both parties. He had great pleasure in seconding the nomination.

The Returning Officer asked if there were any other nominations, and none being forthcoming,

Dr. Kincaid was called upon. He said the occasion was one on which any man, having the power of language, should be able to have something to say for himself. But for himself he hardly felt equal to the occasion. He hardly felt capable of expressing himself under the peculiar circumstances which surrounded him. He remembered going as a poor boy to a log school house but a little way off, and little did he think then, that the time would ever come when he should receive the unanimous nomination of both parties for a seat in the Legislature. He did not say that such a nomination was more honorable than a nomination by one party or the other; but he did say that it did not speak ill for him that he should have been found acceptable on such an occasion to the large majority of the electors of both parties, for election as their member, and it was an example and an encouragement to our young men, that if they pursued an honorable and straightforward course in life, their fellow men would be ready to put them in the positions to which they might be suited. He, himself, had been ambitious; but it was an ambition to promote himself in his profession, and not a political ambition, and if he had interfered in politics, at all, it was to help himself in his profession. As their member he would find himself in an unusual position. His conduct would be carefully watched by both parties, each judging his course from their standpoint, but he felt that by endeavoring to do what was strictly honorable, and what was just and proper according to his own judgement, that at the end of his short term he would probably come out with a record that would be satisfactory to all who had honored him with their confidence. The occasion which made this election necessary was one which he deeply deplored. He felt that by the loss of their late member they had been deprived of one of the ablest men in the county—of one who had he lived might at some time have filled the highest position in the land, and he could not but recall and feel, on following his remains to the grave, the quotation used by Sir John Macdonald on the death of the late Hon. Mr. Holton, "what shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue." It was a lamentable thing that a man like Mr. Scott should be cut down in the prime of life, and he only regretted that his mantle had not fallen upon the shoulders of some one more capable of wearing it than he. But he would endeavor to discharge his duties to the best of his ability, and he did hope that at the end of two years he could come back and say that he had filled the position for that time honorably and faithfully, and that he resigned it into their hands with no discredit. He was prepared to represent them in the Legislature to the best of his skill and ability, and he hoped he should succeed in earning their approval. In this contest he occupied a peculiar position. Two hours before the nomination took place he had not the remotest idea that he ever would be put into that position. Why should he who had long been known as a Liberal Conservative be the first and only choice of two party conventions? Why, because, he supposed, he had always frowned down politics in our municipal affairs and in our local legislature—because he had held that in this country there were too many politics to the square acre, and that political differences should be left to be fought out in connection with the Dominion Parliament, where great national questions arose, affecting the general interests of the country. For a number of years he had held the opinion that we were too much governed—that we had too many members of Parliament. So far as he himself was concerned he felt that he would be most mean and contemptible if he were to attempt to make use of the position in which both parties had united in placing him, for the benefit of either party. It was true he had not the skill and ability of some—that some had attempted to belittle his position and had said that he had sought the position by certain modes which were not commendable. There was no truth in that. He had not sought the position at all, but as he had been selected by both parties he would go to Parliament unpledged, to carry out to the best of his judgment the views of the people of West Peterborough, and to work in their interests. He would watch closely the measures introduced into the House, and those which he considered in his judgement in the interest of the county and the Province, he would support, and those he found otherwise, he would condemn, no matter from whom or from which side they came. It should be his highest ambition to discharge his duties faithfully for two sessions as an independent member, and then he should resign the trust into their hands, and they would be at liberty to dispose of it again as they saw fit.

Mr. Henry Denne nominated Mr. W. Mills as a fit and proper person to represent the riding, seconded by Councillor Taylor.

The Sheriff announced that Dr. Kincade had appointed Mr. Campbell Sawers as his financial agent.

Mr. Mills announced that he did not appear before them as a candidate, but as his name had been publicly used before the public, it was incumbent on him to define his position. He thought it would be ungentlemanly to oppose Dr. Kincaid on the present occasion, but intimated that he hoped to be in a different position in the general elections.

We regret very much that we are unable this issue to give a report of Mr. Mills' exceedingly long and able address, which he concluded by retiring.

The Returning Officer then declared Dr. Kincaid duly elected, the result being received with cheers.

Dr. Kincaid, in an appropriate speech, thanked the electors, and the meeting was brought to a close, with three cheers for the member-elect, three for the Returning Officer, and three for the Queen.

Peterborough Markets.

[Supplied by W. H. Wrighton, Grain and Produce Dealer, and General Grocer, George Street.]

PETERBOROUGH, Aug. 24, 1881.

In grain there is very little doing. The new crop has not commenced to move yet. A few loads of new fall wheat and some spring has changed hands. Fall is bringing about $1.15 to $1.16, and spring will bring that or more. New barley is bringing 50 to 60 cents—an extra sample will bring something more. The barley is going to be a large crop in this section, and the sample a good one. Oats are wanted just now, and would bring 35c.—very few offering. Rye selling at about 60. Nothing doing in peas. Saturday's market was not large. Everything sold quicker than usual—good demand. Butter was in request at 20c. to 22c. Eggs brought 12c. freely. Chickens were in fair demand at about 35c. a pair, with 60c. asked. Ducks brought about 35c., but are not generally in good condition. Lamb was in fair demand at 9c. to 10c. This is the only sort of meat offering. Vegetables are plentiful—rather slow sale. Potatoes continue to hold up in price—selling at 75c. to 80c. per bag. Tomatoes about 30c. per peck. Cabbage 5 to 8 cents each—good supply. Apples in fair demand at 75c. to $1.00 per bag; retail, 20c. per peck.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

Grant to the Fire Brigade—The New Factory Bonus—Mr. Mills Appears on the Scene—Waterworks—Street and Bridge Expenditure.

The Council met on Monday evening last, present,—His Worship Mayor Smith in the Chair, and Councillors McLaughlin, Taylor, McNaughton, Paterson, Chamberlain, Yelland, Rutherford, McKim, Hartley and Richardson.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Communications were read from J. R. Stratton, in reference to the rejection of this town as a site for a paper factory; a telegram from James Gamble, of New York, offering to build water-works; from the Toronto Fire Relief Committee, explaining the extent of suffering by the recent fire and soliciting assistance; an invitation to the Toronto Exhibition. Accounts.—T. Morgan, $10; E. Tierney, $4; D. G. Smithers, $4; which were referred to their proper committees.

Mr. Paterson presented the following report of the Finance Committee:—The report recommended payment of the following accounts:—T. Montgomery, [illegible]; Times, $6.50; D. G. Heathorn, [illegible]; that the Fire Brigade be granted $100 to assist in defraying the expenses of the furnishing the Fire Hall, and that exemption from taxation be granted to Mr. Mills's new factory for ten years, the capital to be $10,000, and the works to be kept in operation for ten years.

Mr. McNaughton moved the rejection of Heathorn's account, seconded by Mr. Yelland, and after some discussion the amendment was lost on the following division:—

YEAS.—Messrs. Taylor, McNaughton, Chamberlain, Yelland and Menzies.—5.

NAYS.—Messrs. Paterson, Rutherford, Cahill, Hartley and Richardson, and the Mayor.—6.

Mr. Rutherford moved that the account of the Times be paid.

Mr. Chamberlain objected to the additional grant to the Firemen. The Firemen had come at the beginning of the year and offered to perform the service for a certain sum, and he thought it a mockery to go to work now and pay them another $100. He thought the Firemen conducted well, but he did not like this way of doing business.

Mr. McNaughton said the $100 had not been asked for fire-works, but when they couldn't get it that way they came it that way about it. He objected to throwing away the money of the ratepayers.

Mr. Richardson thought they should grant this money to the Brigade, and recommended them if they didn't get it, to throw the staff away they had put in here.

Mr. Paterson said if they were to ask the men comprising the Brigade to undertake the work they did as a bargain, as Mr. Chamberlain said, they wouldn't touch it for $100 apiece. The Brigade were a credit to the town, and the furniture of this room, on which they had expended not only the money received from the town, but their own money as well, became the property of the town.

The Mayor said the Firemen had gone to a great deal of expense, some $300 or $400, and all the property they put in became the property of the town, by the By-Law. He thought the Council should encourage the Firemen.

Mr. Hartley held a similar view. The hall was a credit to the town, and it was owned to the Council for there use.

Mr. Rutherford said Mr. McNaughton was opposed to this motion on the ground of economy. Perhaps he forgot that not long since he had voted $1,000 away to the tavern-keepers.

Mr. McNaughton said when he voted against the grant last year, Mr Rutherford had met him at the station and shook hands, saying he was the only man among them. Mr. Rutherford "went back" here the same as he did at the Local Board.

Mr. Yelland had no objection to giving money to furnish the hall, but he had to pay for the "shin-dig" on the 1st of July.

The Mayor understood that there were no debts to pay on the 1st July celebration, the grant was simply to pay for the furniture in the hall.

Chief Rutherford said the Brigade had cleared $90 by the 1st July celebration, which, with other money, had gone into the hall. If the Council were not willing to give that amount to put into furniture which became their own property, why the Brigade would go to work and pay the money themselves.

The report was then adopted, amended as suggested by Mr. Rutherford.

Mr. Paterson said the Treasurer informed him that there was no funds, and moved the first reading of a By-Law to enable the Mayor and Treasurer to borrow money for the current expenditure, and the Council went into Committee, Mr. Smith in the chair.

The By-Law was passed through its different stages, the sum fixed being $10,000.

A By-Law was introduced, founded on the report of the Finance Committee, to exempt the proposed saw factory from taxation for ten years.

Mr. Chamberlain objected in Committee. He did not think it right that this factory should be exempted from taxation as long as any other industry employing an equal number of hands had to pay taxes.

Mr. Richardson also objected.

Mr. Rutherford said this was a new industry, and the taxes now only amounted to $10 on the property. He thought it would be a good investment.

Mr. Richardson thought the work should be started first and then ask for a bonus.

Messrs. Hartley and Menzies objected to the use of the word bonus, and that the term for forfeiting the privilege by the works not being in operation should be shortened from nine months to three months.

Mr. Cahill favored granting the exemption.

Mr. Chamberlain thought the principle was bad. You can't take from many to give to one without an injustice.

Mr. Yelland was always opposed to bonuses.

The Mayor thought the principle of bonuses had been repeatedly affirmed by the ratepayers.

Mr. Paterson was opposed to bonuses, but if they could get the circulation of $50,000 capital by throwing off $10 taxes, they should do so.

Mr. Yelland asked if, as it was only a matter of $10, Mr. Toole would not be in a better position to be perfectly independent of the town.

The Mayor said it was one of the conditions on which the stock was subscribed, that the town should grant exemption from taxation.

Mr. Toole was heard, and explained that the greater part of the stock of $10,000 had been subscribed. The factory would require at once on being started from five to seven skilled saw-makers, who would get from $15 to $20 per week wages. There would also be a foreman who would get $20 a week, and afterwards 2½ per cent. of the profits. They would also require file-makers. These men would also require to live in and would occupy and pay taxes on some of the vacant houses. He had enquired of Mr. Cummings, son of Mr. Cummings here, of the amount of trade in this district in saws and files by Morland & Watson, and was told it was $20,000 to $40,000 a year. If they could secure half that, say $20,000, it would be that much brought into the town. If it was no benefit to get that business and to bring people into the town to pay taxes, let them put their foot on it.

Mr. Rutherford asked Mr. Toole if he had been offered any inducements any where else.

Mr. Toole said Mayor Randall, of Port Hope, had offered both exemption from taxes and a bonus, and there were other places offering inducements. He did not want to leave Peterborough unless he was driven out.

Mr. Wm. Mills, who was present, was called upon to address the Council, which he did at great length and conspicuous ability. He said his object was not to talk of the bonus, but to point out to the Council the unfair position the town had been left in regard to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, notwithstanding the deputation to Toronto. He claimed that the Railway had still power to carry a By-Law by a simple majority of votes cast, while other By-Laws voting money required the majority of the number of votes on the list. He proposed to ventilate this matter at the nomination if he should be nominated, but he wanted the Council to urge upon Dr. Kincaid to have this matter set right. He pitched into Mayor Smith in a lively manner, and elicited considerable applause.

Mayor Smith read from the Statute to prove that Mr. Mills was wrong in his contentions.

Mr. Cahill thought Mr. Mills ought to go home and go to bed.

The By-Law was then proceeded with, amendments being introduced, requiring the capital to be paid up, giving the Council power to examine the books, and in case of its impairment to require the Company to make is good.

In Council Mr. Chamberlain moved in amendment to the motion for third reading, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that the By-Law be not read a third time.

YEAS.—Messrs. Chamberlain, Yelland and Richardson.—3.

NAYS.—Messrs. Cahill, Taylor, McNaughton, Paterson, Rutherford, Menzies and Hartley.—7.

The Mayor declared the third reading carried.

Mr. Chamberlain raised a point of order on the 43rd rule.

The Mayor held that the objection should have been taken before the vote.

Mr. Chamberlain pointed out that the rule required absolutely that a vote of money without notice required that eight Councillors should vote for it. Only seven had voted.

The Mayor said that in declaring the motion carried he had voted with the majority.

Mr. Chamberlain held that the Mayor's vote should have been distinctly declared at the time.

The Mayor said that was so understood by his declaring the motion carried. In future he would insist on this rule being carried out, and advised its amendment.

Mr. McNaughton drew attention to work needed at some crossings.

Mr. Rutherford moved that the Mayor be instructed to call a general public meeting on the subject of water-works, to take place as early as possible.

Mr. McNaughton said Mr. Rutherford had water-works on the brain.

Mr. Taylor said he had seen that stock books had been opened at the Review office. He asked how much stock had been subscribed?

Mr. Rutherford said some persons objected to the books being left at the Review office, and they were removed to the Town Clerk's office.

Mr. Taylor said that was not the question—how much stock had been subscribed?

Mr. Rutherford said none at all.

Mr. McNaughton objected to the motion on the 43rd rule. It was an expenditure of money. Bills would have to be printed to call a meeting.

Mr. Cahill—If you want to kill water-works call a public meeting—that will kill it as dead as a door-nail.

After some philandering discussion, Mr. McNaughton's objection was withdrawn and the motion carried.

Mr. Rutherford drew attention to the horrible stinks from the public sewers, and thought something should be done.

Mr. Cahill moved that the Street Inspector be instructed to board up the end of the bridge at Spaulding's Bay, so as to keep the water at the same level during the summer months. He explained that when the water was let down it left the refuse put into the creek exposed to the rays of a tropical sun, and the stench was apalling, and dangerous to the public health.

The motion carried.

Mr. Hartley wanted to know when the $100 voted for Auburn improvements would be expended.

The Mayor said the people there had not yet said where they wanted it spent.

Mr. McNaughton claimed that over $6,000 had been spent on streets and bridges, and not $400 had been spent in Nos. 1 and 4 Wards.

After some further discussion, Mr. Menzies moved a resolution limiting the expenditure this year to $6,000, and that the corporate seal be attached to give the motion the effect of a By-Law.

Mr. Cahill said the fact that so little money was spent last year was the reason so much was required this year.

The Mayor said if they had spent a little more—$500 or $600—the last few years, they would not have had so much to spend now.

Mr. Hartley thought necessary repairs had to be made, no matter where the money came from.

Mr. Yelland thought it would be cheaper for the town to put stone bridges over the creek, than to be making these constant outlays for repairs.

Mr. Menzie's motion was lost.

The Council adjourned for one week.

CATARRH, ASTHMA AND COUGH. From C. W. Thomas, of Battleboro', Vt.: "For ten or twelve years past I have been troubled much of the time with catarrh, which has kept up a continual irritation of the throat and lungs, attended with a severe cough. During this time I have tried many of the popular remedies of the day without the least benefit. The past winter I commenced the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, the beneficial effects of which have been very great, as after having used three bottles I find myself entirely cured of my disease. The Balsam has also been used in a severe case of asthma and cough which came within my observation, which yielded at once to the remedy. I recommend its use to the afflicted generally." 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

THE CIVIC HOLIDAY

passed off very quietly in town on Thursday last. There was a good deal of driving about town, the usual quota of private pic-nics and the river and the cemetery were resorted to by many. There were two excursions from town both of which were well patronized. The first was the to Idyl Wild, which left by the Golden-Eye at 7.30, with between 200 and 300 on board. This was accompanied by the Fire Brigade Band, and a quadrille band in connection with the dancing scow attached. The pleasure of the sail was alloyed by the vexatious delays occuring from the river being full of logs, but a most pleasant time was spent at Idyl Wild. The return voyage was much more difficult and the boat only reached home at 12 o'clock at night. With all the drawbacks however a very pleasant time was passed.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOL PIC-NIC

party on their excursion to Belleville got away from the Midland Station about the same time, the train having upwards of 500 people on board, and reached the Bay City at noon. The R. C. School Board of that town had made preparations for the convenience and comfort of their guests, and the excursionists speak highly of the courtesies which made their visit a most pleasant one. The members of the visiting Board were entertained at lunch at the Dafoe House in right good style by the Belleville Board, the chair being occupied by Ald. Holden and the vice-chair by Ald. Costello. The mayor was present as well as the chairman of the Board of Education, Mr. Mills the City Clerk and other dignitaries. Councillor Cahill responded to the "Queen" which though a rather startling innovation in established usage, was performed in truly loyal style, as becomes a public official ready to draw his salary in Her Majesty's defence. Councillor Kelly acknowledged the toaste "Our guests" in his happiest form, thanking them for the cordial reception and hoping to have an opportunity of reciprocating at Peterborough. The train left Belleville at five o'clock, and the visitors reached home before nine, all well pleased with the day's enjoyment, and according a vote of thanks to Messrs. Kelly and Cahill to whose exertions the success of the excursion and the enjoyment of the pleasure-seekers were in a large measure due.

THE LACROSSE CLUB GATHERING LAURELS.

As mentioned last week the team of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club paid a visit to Kingston on Wednesday evening to play a match game for the Gildersleeve Cup, in that city. The Kingston men were evidently under the misapprehension that they were a "backwoods" team; but they were soon undeceived when the play came on. Peterborough won in three straight games. The Kingston people entertained them at lunch, Mayor Pense presiding, and otherwise treated them in a most hospitable manner. On their return to town, on Friday, they were welcomed home as victors by a number of leading citizens, headed by the Mayor, who escorted them to the Huffman House, where they were congratulated in due form, speeches being made by the Mayor and other gentlemen.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

On Wednesday last a man named Alex. Foster, who had been on a spree brought a charge against Wm. Morgan of stealing $104. Mr. Moore appeared for Wm. Morgan. The prosecutor's story was that he had slept in the livery stable and lost the money. The Mayor expressed his disbelief of the story but remanded the case till the return of the magistrate.

Foster, who had used vile language when attempted to be cross-examined by Mr. Moore, was immediately, on complaint of Mr. McGhee, fined $5 and costs for blasphemous language.

On Friday, Anne Cook was charged with disorderly conduct and sentenced to six months in the Mercer Reformatory.

Minnie King or Cook, her daughter, a girl of 14, was accused of prostitution, and on the evidence offered was sent for three years to the Reformatory. The pair have been a nuisance in the town, and the community is well rid of them.

On Monday the case of Wm. Morgan was called before the Magistrate, and the complainant not appearing the case was dismissed. It is said the prosecutor feared being indicted for perjury.

Thos. Billington was fined $2 for alleged use of insulting language to Alice Connors in refusing her passage on the firemen's excursion, her presence having been objected by some of the female passengers.

Emma Miller and Anne Johnston, agents du pave, were given a chance to "git" and they "got."

EXPERIMENTS AT THE ONTARIO AGRICULTURAL FARM.

We are indebted to Mr. Brown, Superintendent of the above Farm and Professor of Agriculture, for an advance report of experiments made at the Farm in regard to the fattening and improvement of animals, which comprises a series of eight reports, the first of which we give this week.

PREPARED AND UNPREPARED HAY AND ROOTS IN THE FATTENING OF CATTLE.

Not a few of our leading breeders and fatteners of live stock, especially those having leanings to Scotch practice, are strong advocates of the use of whole hay and whole turnips; they say it is much more natural, that health is better, and the animals consequently give a better account of such a form of food than when cut and pulped; they argue that a ruminating animal must get its principal sustenance in the rough condition, as without it the chewing of the cud is so far affected as to seriously injure healthy breeding and development. On the other hand some good practical men maintain that many of the unavoidable conditions of management now-a-days are so unnatural, and so full of the high-pressure of the age that we can make the animals to suit our wants as much as any other phase of rural economy; they contend that by partly preparing the food the animal is the better able to meet the extra conditions imposed upon it, particularly in regard to early maturing, or prematuring, for beef. And while the latter cannot gainsay the fact of extra cost-in preparation, they are clear in showing that the rougher unpalatable and even unsound kinds of food, can be safely and economically worked up.

Having in view the making of some light on this subject we undertook an experiment with yearling and two-year old steers, from the 13th December, 1880, to the 12th April last. The yearlings, 18 months old, were of our own breeding: two well-bred Short-horn grades, one a Hereford, (first) cross—Hereford bull upon a Shorthorn grade; and the fourth an Ayrshire, (first) cross—Ayrshire bull upon a Canadian cow. The four two-year olds, then two and one-half year old, were bought from Wm. Whitelaw, of Guelph, being good specimens of the well-bred grade Shorthorn in good condition, neither prime nor low in flesh.

These were very carefully balanced as regards equal qualities for the object in view, and in order to give all an equal chance, each division was allowed two weeks upon its particular form of food previous to actual weighing for the start. They were tied by sliding chain in double stalls in a comfortable, well ventilated, and somewhat dark stable.

It will be obvious to the interested reader that the division of the animals was:

2 two-year olds on unprepared food.
2 " " prepared food.
2 yearlings on unprepared food.
2 " " prepared food.

The two-year olds in both examples were offered 40 lbs. of swede turnips, 10 lbs. of hay, 12 lbs. of corn meal, and 3 lbs. of bran, per head every day; the yearlings of each example, 60 lbs. turnips, 8 lbs. hay, 6 lbs corn meal, and 2 lbs. of bran. Everything was weighed at each meal, and the times of feeding were daily at

7 a. m	turnips and hay.
8.30 a. m	meal and bran.
11.30 a. m	turnips and hay.
1.30 p. m	meal and bran.
4 p. m	turnips and hay.
8 p. m	meal and bran.

They were allowed fifteen minutes for exercise, and water at 11 a. m. every day. The prepared food was made by mixing pulped turnips and cut hay, of inch lengths, in the proportions named; all the animals were weighed each week.

Thus then prepared and unprepared turnips and hay continued for fifteen weeks. Nothing occurred to mar the the experiment, except perhaps a sort of general indisposition of one of the two-year olds on unprepared food, or rather by not being such a good "thriver" as the others, not evidently any disease or sickness properly speaking, as it always gained in weight except twice, though not proportionately to others every week.

I beg to make particular note of the character of the weather during winter 1880-81 as a great deal of the success or non-success of animal fattening depends on regularity in this as in any other thing. We have in all our experience gathered the important fact that alterations of much frost and many thawings seriously affect the rate of progress, that mild winters are not so good as steady moderate frosty ones, and as the past winter was unusually regular in respect of frost, with very few thawings, the result must have been very favourable to this experiment. During day time the thermometer was rarely over 37° by reason of much going and coming of people, and not more than 45° during night when doors were closed.

Our next duty is to record the total quantities of food consumed, per head, during 105 days.

Cattle	Tur-nips.	Hay.	Corn-Meal.	Bran	Total Quanty
	Lbs.	Lbs.	Lbs.	Lbs.	Materirl
Two-year old..	8820	980	1029	196	11.025
Yearling.....	5880	784	735	147	7.546

In this we have evidence of a 1,500 lbs. steer—the average of the two-year-olds during the experiment—being able to consume its own weight of different materials every fourteen days, and the yearlings (average 1,050), very little less. Of course this depends upon large feeding value in small bulk, or small feeding value in large bulk turnips and hay on the one hand, and meal on the other hand. The two classes of animals were therefore, according to weight, and age it may be, fed alike as regards quantity, if not by class to suit growth of bone and muscle in the case of the younger ones, or to lay on flesh and fat in that of the older ones.

What then was the respective increase per head of these animals under such treatment?

	Weight on Entry.	Weight at Finish.	Increase per Head per day.
	Lbs.	Lbs.	Lbs.
Unprepared Food
Two-year-olds	1366	1553	1.77
Yearlings	1028	1212	1.75
Prepared Food:
Two-year olds	1477	1705	2.17
Yearlings	878	1060	2.02

Total increase. Unprepared Food, two-year olds 187 lbs; yearlings 184; Total increase Prepared Food. two-year olds, 228 lbs; yearlings, 212 lbs.

Taking the two-year old cattle, which were finished when 36½ months old, those that entered at an average weight of 1,366 lbs. on unprepared food, came out with an average of 1,553, thus gaining 187 lbs. each during 105 days, or a mean daily rate of 1.77 lbs.; the same age of animals on prepared food began with 1,477 lbs., and made up to an average of 1,705 lbs. each in the same period, gaining 228 lbs., or a mean rate of 2.17 lbs. per day. It will be noted that, of this class, those on prepared food had, on entry, a greater young light cattle increase in weight at a in place of being an advantage, as many may suppose, was perhaps a disadvantage because of the well-known fact that a average by 111 lbs. per head, but this greater ratio than older, heavier ones; this fact is not necessarily illustrated in particular experiments such as this, yet it will be observed that the yearling cattle on unprepared food made, practically, as great a daily increase as the two-year-olds by the like management, and a much greater in proportion to original weight. In fact when we look at all the results in this light it will be found as explained in another chapter, that the yearlings increased on an average over 20 per cent., and the two-year-olds only 14 per cent., upon their original weights. But to return to the subject more immediately on hand, we have a decided advantage by the use of prepared hay and roots to the extent of no less than .40 lbs. per head per day, or nearly one-half pound, in the case of cattle finishing at three years old.

Then again, in the case of the yearling cattle, those upon unprepared food entered with an average weight of 1,028 lbs., and came out at 1,212 lbs. each, making 184 lbs., or a daily rate of 1.75, while those of the same age upon prepared food, going in at 878, made an average of 1,060 lbs., which is equal to 2.02 lbs. per head per day. Here also we obtain a distinct advantage of .27 lb. per head per day—say fully ¼ of a pound—by the use of prepared hay and roots over that unprepared.

Placing together the two ages of cattle upon the same food we have a mean of 1.76 lbs. per head per day for the unprepared, and 2.10 lbs. as that of the prepared, or a whole difference of .34 lb.—being equal to ⅓ of a pound per head per day in favour of the prepared food all over.

All this is very interesting and valuable and in order to satisfy any doubts that may arise in regard to the probable sickness of one of the steers already referred to under the unprepared food regime, I beg to show that had this animal done as well as his "mate," which stood as high as 2.20 lbs. per day, the unprepared food results would have made a record higher than the mean of the other; but then, on the other hand, when we do the same thing in the case of the prepared food, the result is still a little in favour of the latter position, so that altogether we must meantime stand to our averages and hold according to the figures obtained.

The Province of Ontario has been preparing during the past winter about 100,000 head of three-year old cattle for the British market, and assuming, for the sake of applying this lesson, that they have all been of the same stamp and treated to rough or unprepared food, similar to our experiment during six month of stall-feeding, the loss will have been 7,200,000 lbs. of beef, or 5,000 head of cattle,—value at least $420,000.

Though not part of the experiment proper, it will nevertheless be interesting to make a memorandum of the debit and credit of these three-year old steers:

UNPREPARED FOOD:

Bought 1,366 lbs. (average steer) @ 5c.	$ 68 30
Sold 1,553 lbs. (average steer) @ 7c.	108 71
	$ 40 41

PREPARED FOOD:

Bought 1,477 lbs. (average steer) @ 5c.	$ 73 83
Sold 1,705 (average steer) @ 7c	119 35
	$ 45 52
Difference in favor of prepared food..	$ 5 11

The question would now be—for it is a question of numbers—how many cattle would it take to profitably employ extra labor in preparing the food, at the same time remembering the point of working up poor material, and such others as previously indicated?

NOT A BEVERAGE.—"They are not a beverage, but a medicine, with curative properties of the highest degree, containing no poor whiskey or poisonous drugs. They do not tear down an already debilitated system, but build it up. One bottle contains more hops, i. e. more real hop strength, than a barrel of ordinary beer. Every druggist in Rochester sells them, and the physicians prescribe them."—Evening Express on Hop Bitters. 34-2t

ASPHODEL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Mr. Thomas Howson, who has lately been attending school in S. S. No. 9, Asphodel, has left home for Belleville Business College, to receive a commercial education. We wish him every success with his studies.

The farmers of this vicinity are rather busy at present harvesting, attending threshing, &c. A great many are nearly through harvesting, and you never saw a happier lot than the farmers this year, as all are reaping abundant harvests.

Slight symptoms of the "threshing fever" has appeared already, Dr. Buck having several cases, and it is the general opinion around here that the malady will be as prevalent this fall as last.

If you see a stray "Graphic" round town please forward it to the Norwood Mechanics' Institute library, as one has strayed from the same.

School re-opens in S. S. No. 9 on Monday, August 22nd.

The good accomplished with steel pens is incalculable, but the cost of a box of Esterbrook's is only nominal. The stationers have them. The trade supplied by Brown Bros., Toronto.

Ease by day and repose by night are enjoyed by those who are wise enough to apply Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil to their aching muscles and joints. A quantity easily held in the palm of the hand is often enough to relieve the most exquisite pain.

THE SADDEST OF SAD SIGHTS.—The grey hairs of age being brought with sorrow to the grave is now, we are glad to think, becoming rarer every year as the use of Cingalese Hair Restorer becomes more general. By its use the scanty locks of age once more resume their former color and the hair becomes thick and luxuriant as ever; with its aid we can now defy the change of years, resting assured that no Grey Hair at any rate will come to sadden us. 50 cents per bottle 32-4t.

James Cullen, Pool's Island, N. F., writes:—"I have been watching the progress of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil since its introduction to this place, and with much pleasure state that my anticipations of its success have been fully realised, it having cured me of bronchitis and soreness of nose; while not a few of my 'rheumatic neighbours' (one old lady in particular) pronounce it to be the best article of its kind that has ever been brought before the public. Your medicine does not require any longer a sponsor, but if you wish me to act as such, I shall be only too happy to have my name connected with your prosperous child."

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. THE ALEMBIC OF THE BODY.—The stomach is the alembic of the human system. In it those wondrous chemical changes take place which result in the transmutation of food into blood. When it is vigorous the necessary processes of digestion and assimilation go on uninterrupted, and the system is suitably nourished. When it is feeble or disordered, they are obstructed, and being in consequence ill supplied with blood of a vitalizing quality, the physical organism becomes weak and feeble, the nerves suffer, the liver and bowels are semi-paralyzed, and appetite and sleep fail. These disastrous consequences may, however, be prevented, or remedied with the supreme stomachic and aperient, NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE, a medicine of rare purity and efficacy, which reforms a disordered and repairs a weakened state of the digestive organs, overcomes biliousness, relieves the bowels when obstructed without straining or weakening them, and promotes the exit from the system of impurities which infect the blood, which cause serious organic maladies. No objectionable mineral contaminates it, and its value is not marred by a subsequent re-action prejudical to the general health. Far perferable is it to the ordinary nauseous drugs used to produce a similar effect, but which are frequently ineffective as well as unpleasant; nor is it a cheap and valueless medicine, puffed into existence. It is used for dyspepsia, biliousness, affections of the blood, kidney complaints, facsale weakness, lumbago, &c., and in all blood diseases little unequalled. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

This room had been furnished by Rob, and given to fancy to be her "very own," when she first came back from school; and her delight at this thoughtful kindness had more than repaid Rob for all his trouble. In the adornment of this retreat he had spared nothing that he could think of in adding to its comfort and prettiness. If, after all, the effect was commonplace and the taste mediocre, that certainly was not Rob's fault.

To-night is the first time he has entered this room without a special invitation from its mistress: now he follows her silently, lowering his head to avoid the beam over the doorway. In a moment he sees that everything in it remains unchanged, and a feeling of intense relief succeeds to the miserable mood of an hour ago.

The lamp is already lighted, and a dull fire smoulders on the hearth; a work-basket, an open book, some papers, and a half-faded bunch of wild flowers are on the table. Nothing but heather and broken and pretty-coloured mosses fill the old-fashioned china bowls and vases that are scattered all over the place; but these are in gorgeous masses everywhere, and an armful of heather, not yet arranged for decorative purposes, fills one side of the little couch.

"It will never be so pretty again," she says simply, drawing Rob's attention to the rich red and purple harmonies everywhere visible; "in another week all the colour will be gone."

"Sit down, Fancy; I want to talk to you a little."

"About Laura?"

"No, my child; about yourself."

She draws her low stool from a corner, and motioning Rob to be seated in the arm-chair, sits down quietly at his feet; the shaded lamp and dying fire leave everything in a soft subdued light.

"I hope you are not going to scold very much, Rob, for I have something to tell you too."

She takes his hand and strokes it softly, waiting for him to begin.

"Yes; she is a woman at last," thinks Rob passionately. How strange that, until to-day, he should never have seen the change that the years had thus unconsciously worked upon her!

Sitting there in the bewilderment of a man who, long lost in pleasant dreams, awakens suddenly to find the summer with its thousand beauties all about him, Rob marvels that his sleep could have been so long and so full of contentment.

The new joy, the love and hope that surge in one great wave over him at the touch of those caressing fingers, are almost too intense for perfect realization; every thought, every emotion of his life has changed, never to return to the old land-marks. His Fancy and yet not his Fancy! The child is lost in the woman; but the woman—ah, how much dearer is she already than the child whom the years have stolen away, bound to him through the child by every tie of gratitude and friendship! Yet, until the bond is renewed by the gift of the woman's heart and life to be his own for ever, she is less to him a thousand times than the child whom he will see no more.

If this can never be, if he should fail to win her love! Such things have been. His brain whirls and his heart sinks at the thought. Lose her? Never! Surely Heaven would not so cruelly punish his honest manly love! It could not be that this sweet bud should unfold and blossom in his sight only that, when the flower was at last perfect, another should pluck and wear it. His whole life was centred in her; and to whom but herself did she look for love and happiness?

She nestles lovingly at his knee, her brown eyes looking into space, her thoughts far away. Almost mechanically, and yet with an infinite tenderness, he strokes her hair.

"Rob, what is it? Do not be afraid to tell me."

Her words break the spell that holds him. She has turned her face to him, and the questioning brown eyes are thrilling into Rob's very soul. "Sweet voice, sweet lips, soft hand and softer breast" are all working their subtle magic upon brain and nerves, as they are wont to do. The fascination of her touch, the charm of her voice, the sight of her womanly loveliness absolutely deprive him of a power to answer her. It is but for a moment however, and then the flood-gates of that long repression burst open, and Fancy is face to face with the love and passion of a strong man's life.

In all her dreams this chance had never once presented itself. Rob in love, and with her? She to be a farmer's wife, the mistress of Langley, living and dying in this dull little Yorkshire village! Oh, it was impossible! On the other hand, there was her natural affection for the man who had been so much to her to plead for some diminution of her first impulse of absolute refusal; and, by the time Rob had ceased taking to her and the strength and passion of his absorbing and hopeless love had dawned upon her mind, pity and remorse conspired to keep her silent.

"I can wait your own time, Fancy," he urges kindly. "Why, see how I have waited already! You need not fear for me, dear. I think I can understand a little of what you feel; of course everything seems strange to you at first."

"I never thought of such a thing, Rob; and I cannot love you more than I do now!" she says piteously.

"You do love me a little, dear?"

"As a friend—yes, indeed I do!"

"Then I am content, little one; the other love will come as naturally as the first has done; and at all events"—a great fear suddenly descending upon him and manifesting its presence in the fierce eager words and trembling hands and voice—"there is no other man seeking to take your love from me?"

She makes her escape after this as soon as possible. Once safe in her own room, she extinguishes the light, and, throwing herself on to her bed, prepares herself for a long "think." She feels that a crisis is approaching in her life, but how or in what direction it is to affect her she does not know. Her affection for her guardian is, even in those early days, very evenly balanced by her love for Garth Calderon. From the very earliest years of her life she has been accustomed to look upon Rob as her first and only friend. Her father's dying words, enjoining love and obedience to him as to himself, were not likely to be forgotten; and than Fancy had learned to love and respect and admire him for his own sake, until his every wish had become to her a sort of absolute and unalterable law. But to marry him, to love him as she loved Garth, to settle down for the remainder of her life at Langley Moor, were flights of the imagination in which she had never once indulged.

Rob, despite the fact that he was very nearly the same age as his rival, had always seemed to Fancy much older, and far beyond her in all ways; in looking up to him as an authority, as her guardian, this had perhaps become a necessity; His grave ways and few words appealed to her respect, her confidence, but did not touch her heart; his life, so full of prudence and homeliness, had no attractions for her, and, since her meeting with Garth Calderon, she had come to regard everything connected with him as vulgar and commonplace.

She had met Garth one afternoon on the moors above Langley; she was walking home from the next village, and he had lost his way, or so he said; and Fancy had gone some distance with him to put him in the right path for Winton Fields. After this they had met frequently, and the friendship that sprang up on that August day had rapidly developed into a much warmer and more lasting feeling.

Week after week Garth still found some excuse for staying at Winton; and Fancy, having nothing better to do, was easily persuaded that she was really and deeply in love.

The beauty and simplicity that had so charmed Garth in his first interview with Fancy, awakened in him the fond hope that here at least was a girl unspotted by contamination with a harsh and unfeeling world, who knew nothing of its virtues or its vices, and who, could he but be fortunate enough to win her love, might be educated and moulded according to his own fashion.

It was a tempting situation, to say the least of it; and Garth, who was really very much smitten by this rustic beauty, succumbed to it after a faint show of resistance. But even he was fain to confess, after a short experiment, that the task he had set himself was no easy one. Fancy's simplicity was not of an encouraging kind; it was more deluxive than real; and, although she had never been beyond the small country town of Langley, in the arts of coquetry, of disdain, and repartee she was as skilled as any of her more widly-educated sex. At the end of six weeks Garth had to confess that his process of education had lamentably failed, but that his love for this wilful maiden had become the one great passion of his life.

It had been against all the girl's truer, better nature that she had permitted herself to be secretly engaged to her lover during their few last meetings; Garth had declared there were weighty reasons for this, reasons which it was impossible for him to divulge at present, but which, upon their next meeting, would, he was convinced, have ceased to exist. In three months he would return and release her from this promise of secrecy by openly claiming her as his wife from her guardian

Fancy saw nothing in this beyond the element of romance which always attends a secret love, and this rather pleased her than otherwise.

"Besides," as she argued to herself, "suppose it all comes to nothing at the end of three months, no one will be the wiser, and no harm will be done." Once or twice, when a curious sense of treacherousness displayed towards Rob troubled her, she grew angry and impatient with Garth, and did not hesitate to declare her intention of one day confessing everything to Rob; but Garth knew that her promise to him was safe, and only hated the more the man who could arouse such conflicts in her mind.

To-night Fancy is torn and distracted by all these varying emotions; and the only relief she can find is in thinking of her friend Lady Winton, who is to return to her home on the morrow. Lady Winton had always been kind and helpful to her in the days gone by, and she was quite ready now—so her letter declared—to take up the old friendship and be, if possible, a greater friend to her than ever.

The girl remembers all this with a certain sense of rest and comfort—indeed it seems to be the only solution of the difficulty; and, having come to this decision and being thoroughly exhausted with the fatigue and excitement she has undergone, she wraps her soft flannel dressing-gown about her and throws herself upon her bed, and, despite the chilliness of the early dawn and the pain of the early dawn and the pain of her throbbing, aching temples, is soon asleep.

* * * *

Down-stairs in the dim solitary dining-room Rob sits alone, smoking by the dying fire.

"Dear little girl!" he says to himself. "I wonder what she will say when I tell her the good news to-morrow? Somehow I feel half afraid to speak of it; it does not seem natural that such a stroke of luck should come to me." He takes a letter out of his pocket, and, opening it, spreads it out before him. "It is more like a dream than a reality," he continues slowly; "a page out of the Thousand and One Nights, or something of that sort; a fortune one day and a wife the next. Well, I've often wondered, when I've read of poor men suddenly becoming rich, what they felt just at first, before they got used to being great and envied; but I don't think much of it now; it is all so small beside that other thing that all men can have some time or other in their lives—a woman's love, all your own. What happiness in the world can equal that?"

Rob does not try to answer this question; for, in his mind, it is unanswerable. This love of his, so true, so earnest, so absolutely unselfish, has come upon him almost without his knowledge and altered every thought and desire of his heart. Dreams and plans of the most impossible kind present themselves to his feverish imagination. An Eastern palace rises on the site of the old Manor House and a tropical climate springs into existence for the sake of the woman he loves. The cares and troubles of life take wing and flee to the uttermost parts of the earth; wealth, ease, love, happiness—these were all the future held for her, and these were all her own.

"My little one," he says tenderly, "shall never know a moment's sorrow" if I can help it."

Who, reading his thoughts as he sits there with visions of love and wealth and happiness rising before him, could by any stretch of the imagination connect him with the prosaic young man who passed under his name and owned the farm of Langley Manor? Could it be that this dreamer, this enthusiast, was in reality one of the steadiest and most hard-working farmers in the country—a man who lived from one year's end to another without a thought beyond his crops or his stock, who remained impervious to the fascinations of all the damsels for miles around and held aloof from all convivial gatherings except those that were indirectly connected with business, who was noted for having an uncommonly long head on his rather young shoulders, and had up to this time exhibited, to his fellow-men only one weakness—love for dainty specialities in the management of the rotation of crops, &c.,&c.?

"How little do we know that which we are,
How less what we may be!"

In the first surprise and fulness of his love, Rob was in danger of becoming an enthusiast and a dreamer; the whole world seemed changed to him since the morning; then the light had not broken, the thick darkness still brooded over the mighty flood that had been gathering so long and silently in his heart; now the sun had risen, the light shone forth, and the great ocean of his love was no longer a hidden and unknown thing.

He walks out into the garden after a while and looks up at Fancy's window. All is dark and quite still, and the stars shine soft and bright above him. A sense of passionate joy and thankfulness comes over him in thinking that she is sleeping under his roof and is dependent upon his care. What can come between him and the desire of his heart—what unknown evil thing rob him of the treasure almost within his grasp? Standing under Fancy's window, with bowed head and a strange indefinable pain mingling with his dreams of happiness, he looks up suddenly and brushes his hand lightly across his eyes.

"Poor old Walter:" he murmurs softly. "I wish he knew all about it. May be he does, and it is only we who remain in darkness and doubt. I think he would have given her to me, trusting in my love to make her as happy as man can do; and at all events, whether I live or die, her future is safe thank Heaven."

CHAPTER III.

Fancy is up earlier than usual the next morning; it is market-day at Langley, and she knows that Rob will be safe there for a few hours. She is very anxious to see Garth before he goes away, it is necessary he should know of Rob's proposal to her, and she wants his consent to her acquainting Lady Winton with the fact of her engagement. A night's rest has restored much of her lost peace of mind; and she hurries to meet Garth in the appointed place near the waterfall with a light, if not happy, heart.

She soon reaches the sheltered little wood, and rejoices to think she is there first. It is a fresh autumn morning, with an intensely blue sky and a suspicion of frost in the still cool air. When the sun has had time to warm and brighten everything, there will be a quivering glow on the distant horizon and over the wide expanse of undulating moor. At present a slight mist, delicate as a fairy's veil, makes a pretence of concealing the purple and golden loveliness of heath and bracken.

Several minutes pass—five, ten, a quarter of an hour; but Garth does not make his appearance. Fancy climbs a rustic stile that leads into another wood-land, and composes herself to wait as patiently as she may. Some poppies are growing in a little shelf of stone over her head, and the woven network of leaves above her glitter with a thousand twinkling diamonds of hoar frost. She stands upright for some minutes on the last rung of the stile, steadying herself by the half-broken angle of the wall in which the poppies have taken refuge; but, although she can see the whole of the road down which Garth should come clearly outlined through the mist, there is not the trace of a living soul upon it. Presently however a cow-boy crosses the field at the top of the road, and with him is Rob's colley, Nero. Fancy recognises the boy as the most mischievous and troublesome lad on the farm; nevertheless he has always been a favourite with her, owing to his good-nature and the fact that everybody else found so much fault with him.

Dick has bright red hair and a straw hat on the top of it; in his picturesque smock frock he has stuck a marigold; his hands are in his pockets, and he is whistling gaily as he trudges along; he and the dog are going to meet their master.

"He has forgotten," she thinks angrily, "And yet how anxious he was for this last meeting!"

She waits another quarter of an hour, and then retraces her steps, and slowly walks on in the direction of Winton Fields, across the great stretch of purple moor that lies between her home and the village at which Garth has been staying.

She is still very anxious to see Garth, and not a little anxious as to his non-appearance. It is quite possible, she thinks, that in the hurry and confusion of their last night's parting he may have misunderstood her promise to be at the wood this morning. It is not very far to Winton; and, as she has the morning to herself, she may as well walk over there as do anything else, and see what has actually become of the truant. Although she cannot understand this sudden failure of Garth to keep an appointment so persistently insisted upon even to the last, she quite exonerates him in her own mind from any share of blame. Something unlooked-for must have happened; and, as the mountain does not come to Mahomet, Mahomet will go to the mountain.

But it is not ordained in Fate's great book that this shall be. The trim little station at Winton, gay with ingenious devices of shells and flowers, is not to be honoured by her presence after all. She is not to pace its neatly-tarred paths, with Garth abjectly penitent by her side, until the cruel monstrosity that is to whirl him from her tears, with mad shriek and haste, past her blinded tearful eyes. There is to be for her no last glimpse of a handsome sunburnt face disconsolately watching her from the window of the solitary first-class smoking-carriage—whatever Garth's misery is, being a man, he will have made no mistake on that point—no lingering farewell, no last sorrowful appeal, or mute resignation as the inevitable closes around her and the train moves slowly from its brief resting-place, nor will she experience that curious sense of emptiness and desolation that follows when all is still again, and the ordinary aspect of things untouched by the noise and excitement that have sped over them like a whirwind seems to mock at our unrest and, by the unnatural quiet, reproach and despair.

While walking rapidly, lost in thought Fancy treads upon a little rolling stone and gives her ankle an ugly twist, but, in spite of this, she manages to limp on for another quarter of a mile before she comes to a complete stop. Then the pain and swelling of her ankle forbid all further progress, and, crawling with difficulty from the dusty road to a safer and softer resting-place on the heather, she indulges in a considerable amount of genuine self-pity. She stays there for some time, wondering by what means she will be enabled to reach home again. No one passes up or down the road. The larks are singing all around her, and the sun, strong and masterful, beats down fiercely upon the wide unsheltered moor.

In half an hour's time, the train that is carrying Garth to town whirls through the valley below her. The clouds of smoke that it leaves behind takes all kinds of fantastic shapes as it curls up into the towering cumuli overhead.

TALL BINDING.—P. Dawkins, J. Our correspondent says "Beat it who can?"

NEW BANK BUILDING.—The Millbrook Messenger says:—"Messrs. Wood & Kells have the foundation completed for their new Bank Building. The building is to be 20 x 30, two stories high, immediately on the east of their present block; and will be of neat architectural design, with every necessary appurtenance for the banking business."

LIVELY RUNAWAY.—T. Cavanagh's horse took fright on Hunter street on Saturday and dashed away at a terrific pace, two boys occupants of the buggy being thrown out but not receiving any injury. The horse turned south down George street, running into a cart over which it turned a clean somersault. The shafts of the buggy were smashed to flinders but the horse singularly enough escaped without injury.

THE GAME OF CRIBBAGE.—The Norwood Register under its new management, set out with a very lofty programme. That its performances have by no means equalled its promises, is a matter of little moment to us, but we must enter a mild protest against its adoption of our work being credited to the Peterborough Times. We at least expect the Register to have some regard for journalistic good behaviour.

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT.—On Monday morning last, Mr. James Thompson, in the employ of Messrs. Hall Innes & Co., received from his brother Robert at Haliburton whether he had removed on the preceding Friday, a telegram conveying the sad intelligence that his brother William had been drowned. It appears that the deceased a young man of about 29 years, had been for the last few weeks on a hunting and fishing expedition. The fatal accident occurred in Moose Lake, above Haliburton. Mr. Thompson it seems was bathing in the lake having his punt with him. The wind blew the punt out into the lake, and in an effort to rescue it he was drowned, though a strong swimmer he had been unwell for some days, and apparently over-calculated his strength. News was brought to Mr. Robert Thompson, and the body was rescued at nine o'clock on Monday morning. The remains of the ill-fated young man were brought to town by the Midland on Tuesday, and interred in the Little Lake Cemetery.

SCHOOL RE-OPENING.—The Collegiate Institute and Public Schools will reopen on Thursday next, Sept. 1st.

RECOVERING.—The blood-poisoning case of Mr. R. Braden, mentioned in our columns a short time since, has culminated in a large abcess in the back which has been successfully opened, and the sufferer is now in a fair way of recovery.

"Must say it's the nicest thing I ever used for the teeth and breath," says everyone having tried "Teaberry," the new toilet gem. Get a 5 cent sample. 32-13ins.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—A young man named Allen, living with his father, near the Indian River, was severely kicked on the head by a horse, while taking a team from the threshing machine, on Tuesday at noon. Dr. O'Sullivan was called in and the patient is doing as well as can be expected, the scalp being torn over about four inches of the head to the bone.

THE BRIDGE.—Work is being performed, and not a moment to soon, on the bridges over the creek, as they had got into a really dangerous condition, and offered facilities for accidents which might at any time subject the town to heavy damages. We believe there would be good sound economy in following the suggestion of Mr. Yelland, at the last meeting of the Council, and putting down substantial stone arches, which would make a permanent roadway,

VERY "CURIOUS CASE."—The Review says:—"A gentleman in this town lately experienced considerable swelling in one of his ears, accompanied by a cute pain. A medical examination showed that that organ had been entered and fly-blown." This comes, doubtless, from the reckless exposure of the Special Correspondent in his peregrinations 'round the mining district, where both the flies and the pains are "cute." A couple of salt bags drawn over the ears, and tied tightly around the base of those organs, would provide the sufferer the best protection from similar dangers in the future.

THE NEW SAW FACTORY.—We think the Council did perfectly right in granting remission of taxes for ten years for the proposed saw factory, to be inaugarated by Mr. Toole, for the reason that the sacrifice by the town is infinitesimally small, while the advantages are very great. Another and a strong reason is that the enterprise beings into active use for the benefit of the community $10,000 of the large cash capital held here by private individuals in bank stocks and mortgages, and changes investments where the money is dead to all but the owners to one in which the general public shares the benefit.

SHIPMENT OF SHEEP.—The Brunswick correspondent of the Omemee Herald says:—"Mr. Howden, butcher, Peterborough, has been through this township purchasing fat cattle and passed through this village on Wednesday last with a large drove, which he pronounced to be the finest he ever bought. Mr. Howden gives the Manvers farmers great praise for their fine stock." Mr. Howden, on Saturday last, shipped by the Grand Junction Railway, consigned to Mr. Jas. Pierce, of Montreal, six hundred as fine sheep as ever left this part, the average weight being 154 pounds—nearly five tons of prime mutton.

CHEAP EXCURSION.—We again call attention to the great cheap excursion organized by the Methodists of Cobourg, to take place from Port Hope and all points on the Midland line, on Tuesday next, 30th instant, to the City of Rochester. The fare from Peterborough and return is only $2.00, the tickets being good for six days, on either the steamers Hastings or Norseman, on any of their regular trips. Reduced fares to excursionists have also been arranged for at the first hotels in Rochester, details of which will be furnished during the passage. This is one of the best opportunities offered this season for a cheap trip abroad, and those who are wise will take advantage of it.

A SCURVY TRICK.—The Mail's Peterborough correspondent furnishes it with the following "sporting" item. It is needless to say that the "challenge" is a disgraceful hoax, and the Mail should call its informant to sharp account:—

"CHALLENGE.

"We, the undersigned, hereby challenge Elias Burnham and Frideric Winch to a double-scull race, to be rowed in Peterboro' on or before September 13th, for the sum of $100 a side, and the championship of Spaulding's bay. As a guarantee of good faith, we have this day deposited with Mr. L. F. Carpenter the sum of $25 as a forfeit.

"This challenge is open to any two scullers in the counties of Victoria and Northumberland.

"T. D. DORAN,
"WM. FAIRWEATHER."

FIRE TRAPS.—There can be no question that the mansard roofs on many blocks in town are fire-traps simply, of the most dangerous description, and that in event of a fire and high wind, the principal buildings on George street would share the fate of the Toronto Iron Block, waterworks, or no waterworks. We are of the opinion that had the Council enforced its By-Laws, these dangerous structures never would have been allowed to be erected without greater precaution, and it is a question if even now it would not be advisable to compel the substitution of metallic tiles, such as Mr. Cluxton is putting on his corner block, in the place of shingles. These tiles offer no vantage ground for fire to work on, and reduce the risk to the minimum.

NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE.—The Review, in very weak imitation of the Globe, has a Special Commissioner wandering through the wilds of Madoc, and recording his experience in bad English, and worse grammar. He thus describes one of the mines: "The mine is simply a large mouthed pit, shaped like a deep clam shell, with a piece broken out of the hinge side (for here the wall rock intrudes.)" The brilliant and gifted Commissioner got safe out of the township before copies of his paper reached the outraged miners. Miners are not a very æsthetic lot, and they are not capable of appreciating the true inwardness of "the hinge side of a clam shell," in connection with their works. One of the proprietors of the Gatling mine is so intensely gratified at his description of their works, that he threatens to fire the Commissioner down a shaft, and feed him on choke-damp for a fortnight, if he shows up in that vicinity again.

PERSONAL.

Mr. R. D. Ewing, of Toronto, visited his friends here last week.

Mr. A. Hugel, ex-President of the Midland, was in town on Monday.

We regret to learn that Mr. John Bailey, Reeve of Emily, is unwell.

Rev. T. Brown, of the Bible Christian Church, Ashburnham, conducted the services in the Lindsay B. C. Church, morning and evening, on Sunday.

W. H. Merritt, of Toronto, passed through town on Monday on the way to Madoc, to make some examinations in that district, as mining engineer.

The Lake George canoe excursionists, comprising Capt. Edwards, Col. H. C. Rogers, and Mr. N. D. Beck, arrived home on Saturday.

The Port Hope News gives a list of the Mayors of that town since 1834, by which we see that Mr. D. McLeod, of this town, was Chief Magistrate of Port Hope in 1858.

Rev. Mr. Torrance, who has returned from his holidays, looking much improved in health, preached on Sunday, morning and evening, at St. Paul's, to large congregations.

We omitted to mention in our last issue that Mr. John Craig, of the Fergus News Record, is visiting friends in town, and called on us. Mr. C. is an old Peterborough boy.

Mr. Allan Huffman, late of the Huffman House, has changed his mind about going to Winnipeg, and has leased the Dafoe House, at Belleville, where we hope he will meet with every success.

Saturday's Canada Gazette contains the promotion of Quarter-Master Charles Stapleton, of the 3rd Provisional Regiment of Cavalry, to the Honorary Rank of Captain, from June 4th, 1880.

Mr. J. G. Hands, connected a few years ago with the Peterborough Collegiate Institute has accepted the editorial chair of the Collingwood Bulletin. We wish our old friend every success.

We had the pleasure of a call on Friday last from Mr. C. Henderson, of Napanee, and formerly of Peterborough. He was on his way home after rusticating on our back lakes for the past few weeks.

Mr. Geo. B. Sproule, of this town, leaves town on Monday for Chicago, to attend the Photograph College Examinations at Chicago, where he is one of the examiners on a new process of dry plate, and will read a paper on the advantages of "Nitric Acid in the Silver Bath."

Only two candidates in the Province, writing at the Intermediate Examinations for First-Class certificates, succeeded in passing. We congratulate Mr. J. D. Graham, of Lakefield, one of the fortunate twain, and our Institute, of which he was a pupil, upon a success so conspicuous and creditable.

Mr. Robert Thompson, book-keeper for Irwin & Boyd, has gone to Haliburton to reside, in charge of the firm's store at that place. Mr. Thompson was much esteemed in Peterborough, and his numerous friends here join in wishing him success in his new home, where we understand his prospects are much improved.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

At a meeting of Peterborough Lodge of Odd Fellows on Thursday evening last, Mr. R. W. Thompson, bookkeeper for the firm of Irwin & Boyd, who is about to be removed to the office of the firm in Haliburton, was the recipient of a very handsome presentation, in the shape of an elegant and costly silver butter cooler and cake basket, on behalf of the members of the Lodge, accompanied by the following address:—

To Robert W. Thompson, Esq.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—The members of Peterborough Lodge No. 111, I. O. O. F. have learned with deep regret of your contemplated removal from the town, and feel that they cannot permit the severance of the pleasant ties which have so long united us, to pass without expressing to you their sense of the loss which the Lodge and the community sustain by your removal to another field of labor.

They beg your acceptance of the accompanying Silver Butter Cooler and Cake Basket, as a slight testimonial of the esteem in which you are held by them, as a citizen and an Odd Fellow, and feel sure that you will prize them not on account of any value of their own, but as reminding you of the warm place in whice you fill in the hearts of those who give their good wishes expression in this presentation.

We sincerely wish you every good fortune in your new home, and trust that your future may ever be attended with happiness and prosperity. Your zeal in the advancement of the interests of the order assure us, that if you are not going among Brethren of the Mystic Links, the time will not be far distant, when you will call upon the Brethren of your old Lodge, to assist you in inaugurating a Lodge of our Order in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the Contributors.

Mr. Thompson, who was completely taken by surprise, thanked the members for their handsome present and kindly sentiments. He did not know that he had done anything to entitle him to such an expression, but he would endeavor when he reached Haliburton to fulfil their anticipations in regard to the formation of a new Lodge there, and if succesful, he hoped to see it instituted by his own old Lodge, and to meet many of them on the occasion.

THE LATE W. H. SCOTT.

At a meeting of Peterborough Lodge of Odd Fellows, the following resolution in reference to the death of the late W. H. Scott, who was formerly a member of this Lodge, was unanimously carried:

'Whereas it has pleased Divine Providence, in its inscrutable ways to remove from amongst us our late Brother, W. H. Scott, this Lodge desires to place on record an expression of its deep sense of the great loss which has been sustained in his too early death, by the community, and to extend to the widow and bereaved friends of deceased their heartfelt sympathy in the affliction which has fallen to their lot. It is a consolation to them, and they trust to some extent also to those more nearly connected with their late Brother, that in all his ways the deceased was a bright example of the manly and Christian virtues which the order of which he was a distinguished ornament, inculcates, in precept and practice.'

"And that the Secretary be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution under the Seal of the Lodge to the widow of the late Brother Scott."

MORE WATER-WORKS.

An Expression in Favor of Them.

The Council Instructed to Procure Professional Data to Act Upon.

The public meeting called by the Mayor, upon request, for the discussion of the water-works question, took place on Tuesday evening, when there was a fair attendance of ratepayers.

The Mayor stated the purport of the meeting, and called upon Mr. Rutherford to explain.

Mr. Rutherford rehearsed the steps which had so far been taken, and said the Committee and the Council would be glad to have an expression of opinion as to whether or not it was desirable to have water-works, and as to what scheme it was preferable to adopt.

The Mayor read the report which has been published in our columns. He also read a motion which had been left by Mr. D. G. Hatton, to the effect that any private individual or company should have power to construct water-works to supply any ratepayers who might ask to be so supplied.

Mr. Dennistoun was called upon and said that it had been argued that it was preferable that the town should build the works, because, then any profit arising therefrom would go to the citizens, and that water should be supplied to the public at the very lowest rates. The Committee had not lost sight of this and they had so framed their report. They had suggested that instead of unlimited dividends the dividends should be confined to a small figure, and that any profits should be applied, in the first place, to the extension of the supply, and in the next place to the reduction of the cost of the water. He regretted that those most interested, the George Street merchants, had not shown more interest by their attendance. He believed that the time had come when a town of the population, capital, wealth and appearance of Peterborough should have a system of water-works which would conduce to the safety, the health and the beauty of the town. Whatever system was adopted must be one of a comprehensive kind; and if it was not that, it would not be satisfying to the ratepayers. People had lately been taking an interest in manufactures and he referred them to the manufactures they already had, and asked them to consider what would be the loss to the town if any one of these were to be burned. He was not wedded to any particular scheme—what he wanted was to have water-works, supplied wherever they could be got at the greatest advantage and the least expense. He believed they would prove a remunerative investment and that ultimately they would not cost the town a cent. He believed that it would be a proper thing to employ a skilled engeneer to assist us in arriving at a correct conclusion.

Mr. Lech said the scheme was for an expenditure of only $40,000. He would rather have seen it $80,000 or $100,000, or some sum that would be sufficient. If we began at $40,000 there would be no knowing where it would end.

Mr. McClelland was opposed to the company scheme, and thought the town should manage water-works if we were to have them. The town could then fix such rates as would not be a burden.

Mr. Trout explained the scheme which had been submitted by him. It covered five and a half miles of street, and according to his estimate could be built for $48,900, and according to Mr. Ellis, for $49,206.

Mr. Cluxton said even if the water-works cost $75,000 or $100,000 the town should have them anyway. He believed they should have not only fire but domestic purposes, and that the town should build them.

Mr. Cahill moved the resolution which had been left by Mr. Hatton.

Mr. Cox thought there were sufficient persons and sufficient persons and sufficient property represented at the meeting to authorise the Council to submit a By-Law at all events. It was not fair for the few to stand in the way of the many. They should be actuated by public spirit and broad views. The question should be allowed to go to the people, and if the majority wanted water-works, let them have them, and if not there would be an end of it.

Mr. Cluxton moved a motion, asking the Council to procure a professional report, from a hydraulic engineer, upon all the available sources of supply, including Kelso's dam.

Mr. Cox seconded the motion.

Mr. Denne was called upon, and said he did not come to oppose water-works. He rather agreed with Mr. Hatton's motion. He referred back to the time when the question was before the Council previously, when Mr. Cox had said there would be no reduction of insurance. He thought insurance companies should pay their share. If the town decided to have water-works he would willingly pay his share, but he thought it would not be right tax a man whether he was willing or not. If we were to have water-works the principle suggested by Mr. Hatton, or some similar one, was in his opinion the right way.

Mr. Cox explained as to the insurance matter mentioned by Mr. Denne. He believed the insurance would be reduced 25 per cent. if we had water-works.

Mr. Richardson supported water-works on sanitary principles.

Mr. Hartley referred to the creek from Lily Lake, and said it was never dry. He pointed out that even now we are paying the interest on $75,000, more than enough to build water works, for very inadequate protection.

Mr. Stapleton was water-works to the backbone, no matter what they cost.

Mr. W. H. Moore thought the town should build the works, and reap the almost certain profit. It was worth while to have waterworks, if only to avoid the poisonous stenches from the sewer.

Mr. Cox thought we should get the fullest possible information, no matter what it cost. They should have a report and have a By-Law submitted.

Mr. McNaughton said as a Councillor he would not object to having a By-Law submitted, but as a ratepayer he would vote and work against water-works in every shape and form.

Mr. Cox thought it was a piece of presumption on the part of any Councillor to say that he would not allow the ratepayers to say whether they wanted water-works or not.

Mr. Stevenson spoke strongly in favor of waterworks and did not care where they got the water from so long as it was fit to use and in sufficient quantities. He alluded in severe terms to those who were blindly opposed to waterworks, without reasoning the question. He would undertake to put water down George street for $12,000, but he supposed if it were laid down for nothing men like McNaughton would still oppose it.

Mr. Cox, insisted that the ratepayers should be allowed their right to decide the matter, and those who were in a minority, on one side or the other, should bow to the majority.

Mr. Claxton thought at such a meeting Councillors should not monopolise the time but listen to the opinions of the ratepayers and form their judgement afterwards.

Mr. Denne was not opposed to water-works but he wanted them on the right principle. He pointed out that we now pay as much for what was almost no protection at all, as would pay the interest on waterworks construction.

Mr. Foot said if any reasonable minded man would look at the matter in the light of common sense he would be in favor of waterworks. The water we are drinking in the town is not fit for use. As a merchant doing business on George street he was in favor of protecting their goods from chances of destruction by fire and depreciation by dust, by construction of waterworks.

Mr. R. Weir said he was not benefitted by the fire engine and supposed he would not be by waterworks, but he believed as a citizen he should consider the interests of the town at large. He pointed that if any employer on George street were burned out, an employee would lose more by the loss of his wages in a week or a month than would pay his trifling water rate for ten years.

Mr. Claxton's motion was then put and carried, only Messrs. Montgomery and McNaughton voting against when the "yeas and nays" were called.

Mr. Cahill's motion, seconded by Mr. Denne, was carried unanimously and the meeting adjourned.

MAJESTIC MARVELS.

(From the San Francisco Alta.)

W. W. Cole's New Mammoth Circus made a grand parade through the streets yesterday—a more picturesque display than when the establishment visited us at the first. Its calliope sent its steam music everywhere. Last night, it opened at the corner of Mission and Seventh streets, with (to quote the words of the advertisement) "a perfect flood of majestic marvels." The attendance was a crusher. There is no more popular amusement in the United States than the circus, and a good one is always sure of a crush and coin. There are a great many new features that Cole has been smart enough to acquire during his visit to the Antipodes and these have freshened the ordinary programme to such an extent that a second or third viewing has all the charms of novelty.

Among the more notable features is the female aerial bicyclist, Mlle. Addie d'Atalie, whose performances are marvellous. The menagerie has been reinforced by the addition of a white buffalo and some Australian kangaroos, rare birds, a troupe of South Sea Savages and Maori war dancers, who appear in their primitive costumes, its real Arabian athletes and a thousand other new attractions. Cole will pitch his city of tents in Peterborough on Friday, September 9th.

It is rumoured in political circles that an attempt is being made to induce Mr. Joseph Dontre, Q.C., to become a candidate for the Commons from the County of Chateauguay, Mr. Holton, M.P., retiring. When Mr. Dontre, in the ardor of his first convictions, essayed to enter the political arena, he suffered two defeats in Chateauguay. His influence has greatly grown since then, and it is acknowledged that he would be a leader of the character and calibre most needed by the Quebec Liberals. The main difficulty will lie in inducing the learned gentleman to forsake the emoluments of a lucrative practice.

A night or so ago Dr. Oliver's residence, Barrie, was entered and a quantity of provisions stolen, Mr. Hunter, who lives on the same road, was visited by thieves who left a diminished supply of clothing and provisions; the next house of call was that of Mr. James Sandford, from which place the thieves purloined a pair of trousers, in which was a small sum of money; and made off with his wedding cake, too. Thieves also stripped a clothesline belonging to Mr. Loan, who lives at the west end of the town, and on which was hung an unusually large quantity of bedding, &c. and a valuable horse and buggy was stolen from Mr. Thomas Cundle.

The San Francisco "Occident" of the 3rd inst., has the following item in refer to the Rev. T. F. Fotheringham, late of Norwood and Hastings: "Rev. T. F. Fotheringham has become stated supply of the church in Daviaville. Bro. Fotheringham was a member of the Presbytery of Peterborough, in the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, and brings letters of introduction and commendation from such men as Dr. John Cairns of Edinburgh, Dr. Wm. Ormiston of New York, and Dr. G. M. Grant of Queen's College, Kingston, Ont." It was a matter of deep regret to Mr. Fotheringham's many friends in Canada, and to his attached flock in Norwood in particular, that the state of Mrs. Fotheringham's health to the sufferer, and, should it so happen that even then it may not be thought desirable to once more risk exposure to our Canadian climate, we are sure that Mr. Fotheringham's abilities as a preacher of the Gospel will find full appreciation in the land of his sojourn, and that thus what Canada loses by his enforced expatriation, California will gain.—Presbyterian.

The iron ore now being shipped from Blairton is taken from a new mine which the Company have selected near the lake, a considerable distance from the old one. The ore is said to be softer than that obtained from the old pit, and consequently of a more marketable value. From the time operations were suspended a few years ago, water began to flow into it, and for some time past it has been nearly full of stagnant water, a nuisance of no small account to the people of the village. It is possible that the mine will be drained in the course of some months of operation, as it is said connections will be made with the new mine, and thus bring within their reach an easier means of carrying off the water. If the mining continues, and there seems to be good prospects for it now, Blairton will return to its former prosperity, and carry its name back again to the remembrance of the most prominent iron dealers of this continent.—Campbellford Herald.

GUITEAU IN JAIL.

A Conspiracy to Seize and put him to Death by Slow Torture—The Jail to be Protected with Artillery.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—Corkhill, District Attorney of District of Columbia, who has been taking a vacation at Cape May, left yesterday for Washington. It is reported that Corkhill said he had been informed of the existence of a secret organization at Washington, whose purpose is, in the event of Garfield's death to break open the gaol and kill Guiteau. Their desire is to hang Guiteau by slow processes. In the meantime each member of the organization will be allowed to put a bullet into Guiteau's body, taking care not to strike a vital point until the last possible moment. Corkhill says he has good reason to believe that the guards of jail who are ex-Union soldiers know of the organization and are in sympathy with it. It is further reported that Corkhill said it has been with the utmost difficulty that the warden of the jail has prevented the guards from finding an excuse for killing Guiteau. This, it is alleged in a measure explains the encounter recently between a guard and Guiteau in the latter's cell. Guiteau knows the guard wants to kill him and has suffered great mental anguish. Since the first relapse of the President he is so nervous that he gets little or no sleep. Corkhill says that while he believes that no torture too great can be visited on Guiteau, he must see the law obeyed which protects Guiteau and secures for him a fair trial. All that will be necessary to secure the jail from the interference of the mob will be a battery of artillery. There are now three batteries of artillery at the arsenal in Washington and 250 marines at the Navy Yard.

AN EXTENSIVE LEGACY.—It was noticed in the daily papers a few days ago, that a resident of Buffalo, named Riley had recently died there, leaving a fortune of some $600,000 in the division of which by the will the members of the O'Brien family, nephews and nieces of the deceased were benefitted to the extent of $10,000 each. One of the lucky beneficiaries, is Mrs. R. Lang, of South Monaghan. The late Mr. Riley years ago taught school at Centreville, and afterwards engaged in business at Millbrook, previous to removing to Buffalo, where he amassed his fortune.

DROWNED IN RICE LAKE.—A very sad case of drowning occurred in Rice Lake on Saturday. Robt. Grierson, of Colborne, and Andrew McClellan, of Aylwick, were camping on an island in the lake, and on the day mentioned they went out in their canoe to have a look at the steamer carrying the Cobourg Car Works excursionists. Getting into the swell, the canoe upset, and though McClellan was pulled out by persons on the danciug scow, attached to the steamer, Grierson was not seen again. It is supposed he came up under the steamer or scow, and thus was beyond the willing assistance of the excursionists.

PRESENTATION.—On his return from Europe the other day, Mr. J. W. Flavelle was presented by the members of his Bible Class with the following address to which he returned a suitable and feeling reply:

DEAR TEACHER AND FRIEND,—About three months have passed by since we last met together as Teacher and Class. Then we regretfully bade you "good-bye," previous to your departure on a holiday trip to Europe; now, we heartily bid you "Welcome Home" on your return from that trip.

During your absence we have daily prayed God's blessing and presence to be with you, and that His protecting arm might shield you from all danger and bring you safely home again. The letters and messages you have kindly sent us from time to time have assured us that the former part of our petition has been answered, while your presence with us to-day is an answer to the latter part.

We are grateful to our Heavenly Father for His answers to our prayers, and we pray that you may be long spared to labor in the Master's cause. We find it difficult to express to you just now how much we have missed you, but let it suffice to say that your absence caused a blank which no one but yourself could fill.

Our joy in having you with us again is also inexpressible, but we trust we shall show you our appreciation of your labours for our benefit by increased attention in the Class, as well as by more thorough preparation of our lessons than formerly.

We once more as a class bid you a hearty "Welcome Home," praying God's blessing may ever attend you.

Signed on behalf of the Class, 28 Aug., 1881. J. H. Burrows. J. T. Emmerson. John Cobb.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT. 1, 1881.

The Season's Outlook.

There can be no longer any doubt that the results of the crop of this year are in the highest degree satisfactory. In almost every branch of agriculture, and especially in this district, the yield is not only above what is considered an average crop, but very far beyond what has been the average crop for a number of years past. Coupled with this gratifying circumstance of an abundant yield is the prospect—we might say the certainty—that the prices are likely to maintain a remunerative figure. The crop in the old country is by no means so satisfactory, from the point of view of the British agriculturist, and there is no doubt that a very large importation of cereals from abroad will create the demand and the price for Canadian breadstuffs, which fix the income and regulate the profits of the Canadian farmer. Already there is abundant evidence that the apparent success of the year's agricultural operations is having its legitimate effect upon all other branches of business enterprise. The fall trade of the wholesale houses has opened with unusual firmness, and on every hand there is evidently a degree of confidence and an elastic feeling which have not been observed for several years past, and we may look forward as a consequence to at least a year of unusual prosperity. This shows to what a large measure the general prosperity depends upon the production of capital from the soil, and how utterly fallacious are the views of those who contend that a country situated like Canada ought to lean upon mere speculative enterprise, and to depend upon an unhealthy stimulation for national capital. Manufactures in this country will flourish just in proportion to the increase in the amount of money brought into the country in exchange for our natural productions. If foreign necessities create a brisk demand and remunerative prices for our products of grain, cattle, butter and eggs, lumber, fisheries and minerals, the country accumulates capital rapidly, and the stimulus given to the circulation of money is directly felt by the importer and the manufacturer, and the latter reaps an advantage which can never be extended to him by any artificial means. The good results of agricultural operations this year, brought into direct comparison before the British agriculturists with the discouraging features their own operations of recent years, will tend to direct more and more their attention to the productive grain fields of the North-West, and will have the effect of giving a renewed impetus to the movement of Old Country capital and industry to the Dominion, hastening on the development of our western heritage, which all circumstances seem now to combine to favor, and will accelerate the arrival of the period when the western provinces will be able to offer to our eastern manufacturers an almost unlimited market, and a legitimate and stable basis of prosperity which no amount of illusory "protection" at the expense of the producers and consumers, who till the soil and develop the mine and forest, can ever afford. The fiscal statistics of last year showed plainly that it was to the productiveness of the soil that we owed the return of prosperity, and the lesson will be made even plainer by the results of this year's operations. It shows, too, the folly of pursuing a policy which cripples the circulation of money by unjust impositions upon the agriculturist, upon whom we depend for the production of capital—a policy which the good sense of the country and a recognition of the true conditions of success lead us to hope will not long endure in this Canada of ours.

The American Contest.

On the day of the voting in August last the Mail wrote as follows:—"Our despatches this morning indicate that the "Quebec Radical element led by Messrs. "HUNTINGTON and LAFLAMME (a sweetly "precious combination) are active in the "congenial practice of electoral corruption; and it is to be hoped that in view "of their presence Mr. ABBOTT (and "every one else as well) will have all "private correspondence made secure, "and all ballot boxes guarded against "tampering." We suppose it ought to an amply sufficient answer to the scurrilous assertions and insinuations of this unscrupulous writer to say that Mr. HUNTINGTON was not in nor near the county during the whole course of the election, so that the Mail's editorial is simply made out of whole cloth in order to create a slander, if possible, against Mr. HUNTINGTON. We only allude to it, however, to draw attention to the persistent policy of insult and misrepresentation which Dr. TUPPER's organ seeks to pursue the leaders of the Liberal party, and to suggest to the Liberal journals whether the time has not arrived at which patience ceases to be a virtue, and when they would be justified in holding the mirror up to the face of nature in regard to the private character and reputation of the Conservative leaders, who have adopted in their party press the policy of endeavoring to break down the personal character of their opponents. If ever a set of politicians had reason to be grateful to the liberality and forbearance of their opponents in this connection, it is Sir JOHN MACDONALD and his associates in the administration of the Government, and yet it would seem that the more their failings, and worse than failings, are overlooked by politicians who seek to elevate the status of public life in Canada, and to confine political discussion to its legitimate field, the more they are disposed to abuse and provoke those whose good nature is so ill requited.

West Peterborough Election.

The member elect for the West Riding, is to be congratulated upon having secured, at the least possible expenditure of money, time, temper and convenience, a position not often attained with so little difficulty, and as well upon the unique position which he occupies as the only Independent member of the Assembly, representing alike both political parties. We are quite satisfied that the Doctor will perform his duties as a member of the House, occupying this position to the best of his ability, and in an unbiassed manner. We have sufficient confidence in the integrity and wisdom of Mr. Mowat's government to remain satisfied that any member not bound to oppose their measures from purely political reasons, will find himself in the main voting in their support. That he may differ as a matter of judgement occasionally would not surprise us, since that is the position which even his colleague of the East Riding reserves, and which every truly Liberal member will insist upon maintaining; but we believe that, leaving the question of politics aside altogether, just and liberal measures, a wise economy and a judicious administration of the affairs of the Province, will command Dr. Kincaid's general support for the Government on a higher and better ground than that of politics. That he should give the Government a purely political support is not expected, any more than honor would allow him to vote for the clap-trap resolutions of "want of confidence" in which Opposition benches are alway fruitful at the end of a Parliamentary term.

Those $32,000.

The Review considers that the conduct of those who venture to remind the Minister of Public Works of the mystery which surrounds the fate of the $32,000 which Sir Hector Langevin received as his share of the price for which the original Pacific Railway Charter was sold to Sir Hugh Allan, is "dastardly." It does not presume to deny that Sir Hector received the money, though, no doubt it would do so, as Sir John Macdonald did when the charges in connection with the subject were first formulated, but for the fact that the proof is at hand and cannot be explained away. That it is the impression in Quebec that Sir Hector did not spend the money in the purposes of political debauchery for which it was given him, is a well known fact, as it is equally well known that it was from Sir Hector's friends, who thought they ought to have shared the money, but did not share it, that the charge originated. That Mr. Langevin did offer to divulge to Hon. Mr. Joly the disposition of the money, on a pledge that he would keep his guilty confidence inviolate, does not in the slightest degree exonerate the Minister of Public Works. Whether he kept the money for himself or applied it to purposes equally base, makes no difference in his guilt. The fact is clear that he received the money for a grossly improper purpose, and that he applied it to some purpose so vilely culpable and unjustifiable that he dare not say to where the money went, or what he did with it; and we can only wonder that a highly moral journal like the Review should expend all its indignation on those who want to know where the plunder went to, and yet have no condemnation whatever for the thief.

HON. MR. MACKENZIE has sailed from Liverpool for Canada, and Sir JOHN MACDONALD leaves early this month for home. His arrival at Ottawa will, we hope, be a signal for his "touring" colleagues to return to the capital and the discharge of duties which they now leave to their subordinates.

Various Topics.

HON. MR. BLAKE has reached Sir CHARLES TUPPER's stronghold, and was welcomed in Halifax with one of the most enthusiastic demonstrations tendered to him during his tour in the Maritime Provinces. No wonder there is much perturbation and hurrying to an fro in the Tory camp, for which the opening of the general elections will be the crack of doom.

THE Lower Province papers poke fun at the Tory organs for their silly conduct in ascribing "brutality" to Mr. Blake, for having talked politics on the same island where Hon. J. C. Pope lay ill, and then following it up by an exparondition comprising Sir S. Tilley, Hon. Mr. Caron and Thos. White, accompanied by brass bands, fire-works, yelling crowds, and other concomitants calculated to soothe the nervous irritability of an invalid.

There are five vacant senatorships, made as follows:—By the elevation of Hon. Mr. Cornwall to the Lieutenant-Governorship at British Columbia, by the resignation of Hon. Mr. Skead, by the resignation of Hon. Mr. McLellan to accept the Presidency of the Council, and his subsequent election as M. P. for Colchester, and by the deaths of Hon. Messrs. Bull and Brouse. None of these vacancies are yet filled. It's understood Mr. Mckay, ex-M. P., will get the Nova Scotia vacancy. Dr. Grant and Mr. Currier, M. P., are again spoken of as possibly successful aspirants to the Senate.

IT SEEMS that not only do the British tenant farmer's delegates object to the Syndicate monopoly in the North West, but to the unfair operation of the tariff as regards agriculturist in the older country as well. Mr. Imrie, the delegate brought here by the government to report upon Canada as a field for emigration to the people of Lanarkshire, writes as follows:

I thought I had found a satisfactory field in the North West, and said so most heartily. But shortly afterwards your government inflicted upon it a railway monopoly, with powers practically greater than those which the government itself possessed—powers comparable, in fact, to those of any Farmer General who ever devastated the fair provinces of the Turk. Being thus compelled to conclude that the excessive agricultural energy of the Mother Country could no longer betake itself to the North West, I gladly put myself to the trouble and expense of looking into the merits of most of the Maritime Provinces, but only to discover that your government has set up in the country generally an equal tyrant to harass the interests of agriculture and of the other naturally profitable trades. For my part, I shall not be tricked into settling in any such country, nor in recommending it to any one else, unless the government shall decide upon immediately modifying their policy of agricultural harassment, and upon abolishing it altogether as soon as they equitably may."

THE Liberal party loses one of its most faithful and truly liberal adherents in the death of Dr. W. H. Brouse, Senator, at Ottawa, last week. Some singular fatality, which looks with a kindly eye upon the present Ministry, seems to have followed Liberal politicians and office-holders since the advent of the present Government. The following is from the Parliamentary Companion:

"Hon. William Henry Brouse, M.A., M. D., son of Col. Jacob Brouse, a descendant of one of the first U. E. Loyalists that settled on the banks of the St. Lawrence. Born in Matilda, Dundas Co., Ontario. Educated at Victoria College, Cobourg, in Arts, where he took degree of M.A.; studied with the late Hon. Dr. Rolph, in Toronto, and graduated at McGill College, Montreal, in Medicine, where he obtained degree of M.D. Married Francis A., eldest daughter of the late Alpheus Jones, of Prescott. Was surgeon 56th Batt. V. I.; a member of the Senate, Victoria College; and a Director of the Toronto Life Assurance and Tontine Company, and of the Prescott and Brockville Macadamized Road Company. Appointed member of the Medical Examining Board for U. C., 1850. Elected member of Medical Council for Ontario, 1866, 1869 and 1872 continuously, since its formation, and elected President of that body in 1870. Has been Reeve and Mayor of Prescott. An unsuccessful candidate for St. Lawrence Division in Legislative Council, Canada, in 1858. First returned to Parliament, for South Grenville, at general elections, 1872; re-elected at general elections 1874. A Reformer. Took an active part in securing the appropriation of $50,000 as a reward to the surviving militia veterans of 1812. Believes that the loyal men who quelled the rebellion of 1837-8 should be rewarded, and therefore moved that a grant of land in the North-West equal in extent to that granted the emigrant settlers, should be given them for their services. In favor of the establishment of a Dominion Sanitary Bureau, and of the introduction of military drill into schools, respecting which he moved in the House of Commons for a Committee during the session of 1875. Called to the Senate, 1878."

A COOL PIECE OF BUSINESS.—We find the following in the Port Hope News:

"Peterboro' has at last got something, and the local press has gone into ecstacies over the possession. Disappointed in the car works not being removed from Port Hope to that town, the Review clothed itself in sackcloth and ashes, and then went to work to prove that Port Hope had always been a drain, instead of a feeder, to the Midland Railway. Suddenly the wailings were interrupted—a prize had fallen at the town's feet. It is needless to say that the possession did not cost the town any money, or it would n now be there. The skill and endurance of the Peterboro' Lacrosse Club won the Glidersleeve Cup from the Kingston players. The average Peterboro' ratepayer cannot now talk of anything else. Even the F. L. R. (Fret lunch reporter) of the EXAMINER, dubbed so by the Post, because he tried to sponge a free dinner out of the Sturgeon Point Hotel proprietor, is willing to pay 25 cents for a fifty cent dinner to-day. Peterboro' only wants the Trent Valley Canal constructed by the Government and then Peterboro' will be in Paradise. Wherever any thing can be got without paying for it, Peterboro' wants a hand in that game."

We don't take a great deal of stock in the News because we look upon it as an instrument which only exists for the purpose of swindling an innocent old farmer out of more dollars than he can afford to lose. We do not feel called upon to sacrifice space which we endeavor to make valuable to our subscribers, to bandying words with the Port Hope News. We will simply remark, with all the emphasis that the reader may choose to put upon it, that the reptile who says that the "Free Lunch Reporter" or any other kind of a reporter of the EXAMINER "tried to sponge a free dinner out of the Sturgeon Point Hotel proprietor" or any other hotel proprietor is a liar and the truth is not in him. This is plain language, and as the liar we allude to is a member of the church, we trust they will impress upon him that it is one thing to learn, but another thing to exemplify the ninth commandment.

Hacking coughs lacerate the lung and beget consumption; consumption fills our cemeteries. If nipped in the bud with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, the destructive malady is deprived of its power. Pain is also subdued by this benign healing agent—corns, sores, frost-bites, burns, and other troubles.

Midland District Notes.

Digest, Compiled and Condensed from County and other Convenient Contemporaries.

The many friends of Mr. Keyes, of the Cobourg Express, will regret to learn of the death of his wife, in that village, on Sunday last, after a short illness. The deceased was well-known in Cobourg, being the daughter of Mr. Russell, who lived there some thirty years ago.

On Monday night of last week a fire broke out, place about four miles east of Oshawa, by which Mr. Gillies' barn and contents, comprising this year's crop, were completely destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown. $300 on the barn was the only insurance.

USE THE celebrated "Lardine Oil" on your machinery. Best and cheapest oil in the market. Does not clog or gum. Has a good heavy body and will not thin in summer. Sold in Peterborough by Messrs. McKee & Davidson; and in Lakefield by Mr. H. Casement. Try it and you will use no other. 25-52t

The Trenton Battery of Garrison Artillery having become non-effective, is removed from the list. The following officers are placed on the retired list retaining rank;—Captain Henry Wright Day, First Lieutenant Shuter Smith Bontier, and Second Lieutenant Charles Francis.

The bush fire north of Trenton is destroying much valuable property. On Tuesday the fire bell rang out the alarm and for a while excitement ran high. It was a call to the Fire Company to turn out and combat the bush fire. They went to work all day, and did considerable to retard the progress of the flames.

PROFITABLE PATIENTS.—The most wonderful and marvellous success in cases where persons are sick or wasting away and a condition of miserableness, that no one knows what ails them, (profitable patients for doctors,) is obtained by the use of Hop Bitters. They begin to cure from the first dose and keep it up until perfect health and strength is restored. Whoever is afflicted in this way need not suffer, when they can get Hop Bitters.—Sentinel-Star. 34-2t

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star says:—"On Friday afternoon, a little boy, aged 6 years, only son of Charles King, an employee at the Gas House, while engaged picking chips at the end of the new pier, fell in the water and was drowned. Several efforts were made to recover the body by means of diving, but without avail, and hooks were finally used, which brought the little fellow's body to the surface, after having been in the water nearly two hours. No inquest was held.

Mr. Thos. Head, of Duffin's Creek, must be a cheerful sort of a soul. He makes the following announcement in the Oshawa Reformer:—Mr. Thos. Head, miller, formerly of Oshawa, now residing at Duffin's Creek, who has been suffering for the past four years with chest disease, has been given up as incurable by Dr. Wright, of Toronto, who visited him on Tuesday last and informed him that he cannot live but a few months. Mr. Head requests us to state that he will be pleased to see any of his numerous friends in Oshawa who can make it convenient to pay him a visit before the sands of life are run.

Tom Moore's Tory Pledge, written fifty years ago agrees pretty well with Tory ministers' practises nowadays:—

To fasten on the public purse,
My nephews, brothers-in-laws and brothers
Nor so we proper care a curse
How much 'tis at the expense of others.

While the Bard of Niagara was visiting one of the western camps in company with the Minister of Militia, one of the men under inspection was heard to say he had always been under the impression that Plumb was a great gun, but he now saw that he was only a Caron-aide. The man was wrong; Plumb is a small bore.

A few days ago Thomas Smith, of Hope Bay, had been in the woods and on coming out found himself almost face to face with a huge bear. The animal, instead of fleeing, turned upon Mr. Smith, and was soon hugging him for all he was worth. Being unarmed, with great presence of mind Mr. Smith feigned death, and dropped, dragging the animal with him. The bear probably reasoned that his victim was now safe, and he might go for his mate and have company at the feast. At any rate he molested Mr. Smith no further, and when the wounded man looked up Bruin was nowhere to be seen. Mr. Smith found that his arm was badly hurt by a bite, and he was otherwise injured, but still had strength enough to walk, and he walked homeward with the best speed possible. When near his own home the bear was heard sounding through the brush, and had but a few yards to go to reach his victim, when Mr. Smith fell exhausted within his own doorway.

The man with the patent horse shoe has been at Trenton, and entered into writings with Mr. Haney for the manufacture of the same in Canada. The shoe is of Bessemer steel and consists of an inner shoe on which are the corks, joined to the outer at the toe. The outer shoe fits the horse's foot and is nailed firmly. The shoe is only for the fore feet, and is designed to give the horse a gentle step on the ground. It must be a great comfort to have a yielding step that becomes firm as the whole weight of the animal bears on it. Mr. Haney has two or three plans for its manufacture in contemplation. It is possible he will go to Thorold. He said if our water power there really he would likely have located the factory here. The company intend turning out 1,000 pairs a day; with the machinery this will employ 17 skilled hands.—Courier.

NORWOOD NEWS.

BIRTH—MARRIAGE—DEATH—THE DREADFUL CASE—COME TO HALIFAX—DAMAGE BY BUSH FIRES.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Sarah Maguire, aged 25 years, daughter of Mr. A. Maguire, of this village, died suddenly on Tuesday last. About noon a violent fit of coughing seized her, when, feeling blood flowing from her throat, she exclaimed, "Oh, mother, I am going;" and immediately fell upon her breast in prayer, and shortly after peacefully died. During the coughing she had burst a blood vessel.

James McCalley, son of Mr. Jas. McCalley, residing about a mile from Norwood, in Asphodel, died at the family residence on Monday evening. Deceased for some time taught school in that township, a vocation he was compelled to give up on account of failing health. He went south for some time to recruit; but the change gave him no relief. As a teacher he was universally liked, and was looked upon as a young man of much promise. The very large concourse of people, both Catholic and Protestant, attending the funeral, on Wednesday, fully evinced the high esteem in which the deceased was held. A funeral service was conducted in the Catholic Church, Norwood, by the Rev. Father Quirk.

Our Division Court was held here on Wednesday last, and was a remarkably short one. Mr. R. Dennistoun presiding in the stead of his father. The only case of interest was that of Wm. Sargent vs. Norwood Board of School Trustees. The most amusing part of it was the selecting of a jury, as both parties found it difficult to collect five men who were honest enough to give the matter on hand their unbiassed consideration and judgement. When the jury was empannelled it was found that there was nothing for them to do. Counsel for the defendants stated that there was no authority for the proceedings as instituted by the plaintiff, and contended that he could not sue the Board for damages in their corporate capacity and make the school section the piper. Mr. Sargent stated that he had the authority of Mr. Crooks to take these proceedings; but as the Judge thought this not quite sufficient authority in the case, and as he agreed with Mr. Edwards, counsel for the defendants, in his objections, he was compelled to throw out the case. Mr. Sargent now intends to overwhelm some individual member of the Board. However, nearly everybody in the community conversant with the case fully expected the Court to decide in favor of the Trustees.

Mr. Thomas Burke left on Friday for a trip to Halifax.

The new Flour Mill of Mr. James Cummings is nearing completion, and will be ready for operation in a few days.

Messrs. Roxburgh and Pearce returned from Manitoba this week.

Bush fires have been doing great damage a few miles north of this village. Roads have been blocked, fences destroyed, standing crops and even buildings endangered by these fires. The season has been so hot and dry that the flames in some places, in Dummer, could not be checked, and run from one place to another with fearful rapidity, the grass igniting and carrying on the blaze like a train of powder. The light of the sun is considerably darkened by the dense volume of smoke arising from the burnt district.

Mr. Thos. Fraser has disposed of the year's wool, purchased very advantageously, his supply being of such an extra fine quality as to bring the very highest price given in Toronto, even exceeding that obtained by dealers in Peterborough. Mr. F. consequently feels deservedly elated.

CANADA PACIFIC RAILWAY.

An important meeting of the Pacific Railway Syndicate was held at Winnipeg recently. A telegram states that the following highly important questions were disposed of:

1. The approval of the location to Moose Jaw Creek.

2. The continuation of the location of the survey of Fort Calgarry, to be completed this season, and the line itself to be completed next season.

3. The location in conformity with the Winnipeg By-law of the Winnipeg and Pembina Mountain branch, and provision for its immediate construction.

4. The immediate location and construction of the Assiniboine branch from a point twenty miles east of Brandon, nort-westerly towards the Little Sekatchewan, Fort Ellice, Riding Mountain, and Touchwood Hills.

5. Immediate location and construction of the Saskatchewan branch from a point near the great forks of the Qu'Appelle, extending in a north-westerly direction.

6. Immediate location and survey of the Souris branch, extending from Brandon south-westerly towards the Souris and Turtle Mountain District to within 24 miles of the International boundary, and then westward parallel to such boundary to the 184th parallel of longitude.

7. The granting of leases for elevator and grain warehouses at nominal rents.

The subject of the most effectual means of continuing the sales of agricultural lands as far as possible to actual settlers was not finally disposed of. The construction of freight and passenger stations offices, workshops, and stock and cattle yards within the city of Winnipeg as soon as the city By-law shall have finally passed was decided upon.

Saturday's Dominion Gazette contained the appointments of the following Queen's Counsel:—Richard Martin, Hamilton; Samuel Smith McDonald, Windsor; Hon. Alexander Morris, Toronto; Allan R. Dougall, Belleville; John Charles Rykert, St. Catharines; John Creaser, Owen Sound; Samuel Jonathan Lane, Owen Sound; Thomas Wardlaw Taylor, Toronto; George D'Arcy Boulton, Toronto; Henry Burkett Beard, Woodstock; Byron Moffat Britton, Kingston; William H. WORTHY OF PRAISE.—As a rule we do not recommend Patent Medicines, but when we know of one that really is a public benefactor, and does positively cure, then we consider it our duty to impart that information to all. We know whereof we speak, and can freely recommend them to all.—Exch. Sold at fifty cents a bottle. Taylor & Macdonald, Agents.

MIDLAND EMPLOYEES' PIC-NIC.

The annual pic-nic of the Midland Railway employees was held at Hudgin's grove, on Wednesday last. Excursion trains left Lakefield, Port Hope and Midland City early in the morning, and arrived at the grove about 10.30 a.m., carrying nearly two thousand excursionists, and fully a thousand more reached the ground by conveyances. A more beautiful place for holding the pic-nic could not have been selected, and the weather being very fine the party seemed to go in for amusement. The 46th batt. band accompanied the excursionists from Port Hope and contributed much to the enjoyment of the occasion. An interesting programme of games and races for which valuable prizes were offered was admirably carried out. There was also a lengthy programme of dances, music being furnished by the string band of the 46th batt. The following is a list of the games and the name of the prize-winners:

Just before the close of the day's doings an address was presented to Mr. Geo. A. Cox by Mr. Gothwaitte, of Port Hope, on behalf of the employees of the road. Mr. Cox responded in a few happy remarks. A motion was moved by Mr. A. Burton, Lindsay, seconded by Mr. J Buller, Peterborough, tendering the thanks of the employees to the Directors of the road, [illegible] therewith the names of Messrs. Lewis Ross, of Port Hope, and J. R. Dundas, of Lindsay, for their interest taken in the event, and for their uniform kindness to the employees of the road. Mr. Ross made a short appropriate reply. The trains left the grove about six o'clock on the return journey.—Post.

THE PROPOSED WATER-WORKS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

MR. EDITOR,—I am pleased to find water-works again interesting our people, and hope the question will be settled and an efficient system secured before another season passes. In a town so admirably situated as Peterborough is for such works, I think we should lose no time in taking advantage of our position and at once protect ourselves, as far as a good supply of water can do this, from such a calamity as a great fire. There are several plans suggested for our works—the one which seems to have the most advocates is a pump, or large fire engine at Mr. Hilliard's, which would, I have no doubt, be very servicable, if we had no better and more economical plan; but then we can have a reservoir with 150 feet head, about two miles from George street, which we can have by damming the creek at Mr. Kelso's old dam. Then we could have a full supply of pure water without the cost of pumping, etc., at the expense of laying down the pipes which, I understand, can be done for not more than one dollar a foot. Suppose the distance to be two miles, this could be done for from $12,000 to $15,000. But if we had even to go to Lakefield for our water, it would, in my opinion, be preferable to the pumping, which would entail a continual expense for repairs, management, and water-power. This item should not be lost sight of, for, though Mr. Hilliard generously offers equal advantages to a company, we are not to have Mr. Hilliard always, and the next owner of the mill site would, most likely, when he had the right, very properly claim a good substantial sum for his water-power and accommodation, and of course the company would be at his mercy after the pipes were laid down. These expenses, I have no doubt, however moderate, would be more than pay the interest on a sum sufficient to lay the pipes from Lakefield to Peterborough, though to lay pipes from there would probably cost, at $1 per foot, $40,000. Trusting that, before going to any great expense, the matter will be well discussed, and the best plan adopted, and our town no longer left in a position of such danger,

I remain, Yours, etc.,
ACQUARIUS.

Olive Logan began one of her lectures recently with the remark, "Whenever I see a pretty girl I want to clasp her in my arms." "So do we," shouted the boys in the gallery. For a moment Olive was nonplussed, but, recovering her self-possession she replied: "Well, boys, I don't blame you."

GIVEN AWAY.—We cannot help noticing the liberal offer made to invalids and sufferers by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. If you are suffering with Consumption, Severe Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Loss of Voice, Hoarseness, or any affection of the Throat or Lungs, it will positively cure you.

Messrs. We may say that in several instances it it has effected cures when ailments has been pronounced incurable by eminent practitioners."

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Manhattan Feed!

—FOR—

HORSES, CATTLE, MILCH COWS, SHEEP AND PIGS.

IT is a source of health, because it keeps the organs in a natural healty tone. It acts as a relish, promotes perfect digestion, and purifies the blood, thereby keeping the coat in a free and glossy condition. TRY IT! BUY IT!

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

Prescott, Ont., May 3rd, 1881.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen.—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Yours etc., GEO. LABATT,
Manager P. B. & M. Co.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents,—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you guaranteed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

Peterborough Examiner

PETEBBOROUGH, SEPT. 1st, 1881.

Clerk of the County Court.

It is with no small reluctance that we feel it necessary to draw the attention of Attorney-General to the management of the office of Clerk of the County Court and Clerk of the Surrogate Court, in this County. That we have not done so before has been due to reasons which everybody here understands; but we are now compelled to state that if the complaints which are common here as to the management of the office have not yet reached the Government, it is high time their attention were drawn to the matter. Such complaints, well founded as the whole community knows them to be, must be examined into by the Government, which is responsible for the good conduct of the office, and the cause of them in some way removed. We are not going to suggest any remedy, or to offer any advice to the Government in this matter. We simply perform a duty in drawing their attention to the condition of the office, and should be very glad indeed if it were possible to avoid doing so, without injury to the public interest and to the reputation of those who are responsible to the public for the proper administration of affairs connected therewith.

Campaign Utterances in 1878.

HOW RIDICULOUS THEY SEEM NOW.

A few quotations from the utterances of Conservative leader in the elections of 1878. How ridiculous they seem now!—"Was it not a crying shame that "though the country had a fertile soil, a "healthy climate, a strong and well educated people and good laws, 500,000 of "of our own people should have crossed "the border in a few years to take up "their residence in the United States, "because they could not find employment "here for their skill, energy and enterprise, in consequence of the false policy "of our rulers." Still, half a million of our people have been driven out of the country since the Conservative party took office in 1878. "Our industries would be "twice blessed" And blessed industries they have made of some of them! Look at this brilliant prospect held out to you poor unfortunates who were suffering under Grit rule:—"If the Conservatives "gained the elections there would be a "return of confidence at once, and even "before a new tariff could be introduced "the manufacturers would have such "hopes for the future that they would be "employing more men and circulating "more money, all of which would reflect "beneficially on the farming community." How many more men have obtained employment in Peterborough, or in this County, by virtue of the Conservative victory? Another choice bit from the campaign speeches of the Conservative leader:—"The American manufacturers "would bring their capital here, towns "and villages would arise everywhere, "cities would double their size, from the "States we would draw, and profitably "draw, the very population which now "endanger them and us." How ridiculous, in the face of the fact that the population of the town has decreased! We will give one more quotation, and it is a gem:—"If you desire to see this country "rise out of the slough of despond into "which it has fallen, if you desire to see "manufactures rise, if you desire to see "labor employed, if you desire to see the "emigration of your young men stopped, "if you desire to bring those who have "emigrated back to the country, if you "desire to see the value of land rise, if "you desire prosperity, you will vote for "the National Policy." Well, the people did desire prosperity, they did desire to see the value of land rise, they did desire to see more labor employed, they did desire to see the emigration of our young men cease, and the return of those who had left us, and with some hope of having those desires fulfilled many people voted for the National Policy who would not otherwise have voted on that side. The Tory politicians desired office—that was their sole desire, and so long as they got that they cared little apparently for the people whom they have so basely deceived.

PERSONAL.

Rev Dr. Clarke of Christ Church Belleville was in town last Friday.

Mr. W. A. Morrow and Rev. Mr. Shaw returned from Manitoba on Saturday.

Mr. A. F. Wood, ex-Warden of Hastings, and brother of Hon. C. S. Wood was at the Huffman House on Saturday.

Mr. Mewburn, Inspector of Customs, is on his rounds, and is expected here in a day or two.

W. E. Roxburg, Esq., of Norwood, returned yesterday form the North-West, where he had been an a tour.

P. R. Randall, Esq., Mayor of Port Hope, was registered at the Caisse House yesterday.

D. W. Dumble, Esq., returned on Wednesday morning from an extensive tour of Kansas and the North-West. He looks remarkably well, and says he has not seen a town in the course of his travels which approaches Peterboyough in any [illegible]

We regret to learn that the Rev. R. [illegible] of W[illegible] and brother of [illegible] W. A. Morrow of this town departed this life at Winnipeg on Wednesday morning the 31st. August at 4.30 a. m. The Rev. gentleman was highly esteemed by [illegible] who had the pleasure of his acquaintance and his death is deeply deplored.

We understand that Mr. G. A. Morrison, well and favorably known here in the insurance line, is about to remove to Winnipeg to promote there the business of one of the most prominent and reliable companies doing business. The Company may rely upon having a first-class and pushing agent, and the uninsured in Winnipeg may as well surrender to the inevitable when Mr. Morrison pays them a visit.

The Brantford Telegram says:—"The Judicature Bill passed by the Ontario Legislature is now in operation, and under it, among other changes, Mr. [illegible]ridge, the present Deputy-clerk of the Crown and Pleas, becomes Local Registrar of the High Court of Justice, which includes the duties of the Deputy-Clerk of the Crown and Deputy-Registrar of the Court of Chancery, the latter of which was held by His Honour Judge Jones. We congratulate Mr. Rubidge, who is an efficient and obliging officer, upon this addition to his duties and emoluments." Mr. R's fortunate career will give the liveliest satisfaction to his many friends in this section.

A few days ago one of the Rochester Church choirs made an excursion from Charlotte to Port Hope, as the guests of Captain Crawford, of the steamer "Norseman," and were by him very handsomely entertained on the trip. In recognition of many kindnesses the gentlemen of the party purchased a handsome meerschaum pipe, which they forwarded to the Captain, accompanied by a letter of thanks signed by all. Yesterday the "Norseman" made another excursion trip down the river having left Toronto on Saturday evening with a large number aboard. A stay of about an hour was made here.—Kingston Whig.

The last number of the Christian Guardian has the following:—"The Rev. Coverdale Watson, and his newly married wife, left Brampton, on Thursday last, for their distant field of labor in Vancouver's Island. Brother Watson carries with him the esteem and confidence of all the brethren who have known him since he entered the work in 1869. He has won for himself the reputation of a most estimable Christian gentleman, and an exceptionally able and successful minister. We only express the feeling of a large number of brethren, who have known him intimately, when we say that we could ill afford to spare him from the work in the Province of Ontario; and the authorities of the Church could have given our friends in Victoria no stronger proof of the deep and lively interest which is taken in them here, than by sending them such a man. And from all that we can learn of the estimable lady who has recently become his wife, she is in every way worthy of the relationship upon which she has entered. She has for years distinguished herself as an active and successful Christian worker; and the many costly gifts presented to her on the occasion of her marriage, and other tokens of appreciation, showed the high estimation in which she was held by those who knew her best. We trust that the blessing of God will accompany our brother and sister to their distant field of labor, and crown their efforts with abundant success." Mr. Watson was formerly a very popular minister of the Methodist Church in this town.

Peterborough Markets.

(Supplied by W. H. Wrighton, Grain and Produce Dealer, and General Grocer, George Street.)

PETERBOROUGH, Aug. 31, 1881.

Receipts of grain although small are increasing. Prices are somewhat unsettled, buyers not being certain as to value. Last week fall wheat sold at $1.18 to $1.20; spring about the same. This week prices run up and down, from $1.20 to $1.24 being paid. It is not safe to count on more than $1.20. Barley is not offering freely yet. The price is unsettled—from 50 to 60 cents has been paid, and in one or two cases 75c. was paid. The market may be quoted at 50 to 60 cents Oats have declined and will not bring 40c.; have been sold at 35c. In peas there is no movement. Saturday's market was fairly attended for this time of the year. Butter was rather slower and more plentiful; sold from 20 to 24 cents. Two or three tinnets brought 20c. Eggs are plentiful but in good shipping demand, at 12½c. to 13c. Chickens were plentiful and in less demand selling at 30c. to 40c. per pair. Lamb brought 8c. to 9c. In fruit the quantity offering is not large, and the quality rather poor. Apples are small, and are selling well, considering the quality, bringing from 75c. to $1.25 per bag. Plums are in good demand. Blue are selling at 11c. to 12½c. per quart. Red ones from 50c. to 70c. per pail. Potatoes continue to hold their price—supply moderate; selling at 75c. per bag.

THE EAGLE, THE CAT, AND THE SOW.

An eagle [illegible]
Had [illegible]
A cat [illegible]
In a [illegible]
A sow had found a place to fit her
Right at the roots to have her litter.

This chance companionship had lasted
Some little time when it was blasted.
By the cat's guile and wicked cunning;
For, one day up the tall tree running
To where the eagle dwelt, regardless
Of [illegible] "The curse," she said, "on [illegible] I fear—
[illegible] set up here—
[illegible] grunts about,
And [illegible] with her snout,
Has [illegible] against us folk.
[illegible] and the oak.
[illegible] devour our young.
When [illegible] on the ground, they're "Hung."

[illegible] said; and, full of terror, down
The tree [illegible] she reach'd the ground.
Before the [illegible] swine she stood;
"Twas [illegible] your precious brood;
Our [illegible] summit perches.
[illegible] researches,
When [illegible] other workers.
To [illegible] on your little "pasterns."

Having alarmed them both, she stole,
With [illegible] round, up to her hole,
Where, [illegible] night, she left her bribed
With [illegible] to get them food.
All day [illegible] her door she sat
Pretending fear—this wily cat

Fearing the downfall of her house
The enslaved against the boughs
Hide, [illegible] next day. The pig
Had not [illegible] to eat; but dared not dig.
For [illegible] still none bird
Would [illegible] young ones if she stirr'd!

So, these two fools, through Puss's cram-min,'
Wish all their [illegible], died of famine;
Giving the old adage [illegible]
A better meal than they ate!

I think I've met with cats like this
In human shape, who never miss
A chance to hook two heads together
For selfish purposes. But whether Fable is the messenger of the Fable
I leave to others better able To say. Cortes, for downright evil
Commend me to a two face devil.

THE ARITHMETIC OF LOVE.

2 lovers sat beneath the shade,
[illegible] and the other said;
[illegible] 1 & 2 that you bee
[illegible] smiled upon this suit of mine:
If [illegible] heart it pulps for you—
Thy voice is mud melody—
'Tis ? to be thy loved 1, 2—
Say my nymph, will marry me?"
Then lisped she soft: "Why, 1, 3, 1"

II.—THE COST AND PROFIT OF TWO AND THREE-YEAR OLD STEERS.

In my evidence before the Ontario Agricultural Commission last year, I had occasion to advert to the importance of paying more attention to finishing our beefing cattle at an earlier age than prevails by present practice. As corroborative of this position I beg to submit some figures upon the relative growth, cost, and value of steers between 18 and 36 months old, as obtained by recent experience here.

Four head, averaging 18 months old, were tied up on the 13th October, and withdrawn on 1st May following. They entered at an average weight of 837 lbs. and stood at 1,187 lbs. each at the end of 200 days. The rate of progress here was 1¾lb. per head per day, or just equal to the average of the best three-year old steers. Now what does this imply? This: A cattle beast destined for the shambles, having been well done to in nursing and after treatment up to 18 months, is put into the stall in order to premature with the view of immediate disposal for food. Entering this new stage at a weight, as we have seen, of 837 lbs.—which shows a previous rate of less than 1¼lbs. per day (from birth to 18 months old), it is served to extra treatment in the shape 8 lbs. hay, 60 lbs. turnips, 7½lbs. corn meal and 1½ lbs. bran, until 24 months old. It is then sold for 5½ cents per pound live weight, or $65.28. The same animal put to grass, and carried on through another winter to 37 months old, will weigh, under the best management, 1,648 lb., and fetch in these times $107. Which pays best?

There is but one sound way of arriving at the cost of producing beef or flesh of any kind, that is, to charge the animal with everything it consumes, uses, or requires in any form, either as food, bedding, or attendance; and it is just as plain and reasonable that in whatever way the animal accounts for these things it must get credit therefor—all according to current market prices or acknowledged value in whatever form. I have hitherto followed this rule very strictly, and see no reason now to change from it except as a means of simplifying or explaining anything. Several explanations are given in other parts of this Advance Report, and the [illegible] is likely to show that all the items charged [illegible] credit in one [illegible] year [illegible] whose [illegible] years also [illegible] in [illegible] practice.

As [illegible] subject to [illegible] the firmness of the flesh being equal, it is perfectly plain that there is much more money in getting rid of our beefing steers at two years than by holding them up to three years, under liberal management. I say so upon no estimate or guess work, but solely according to recent experiment, so that no doubt need exist on the subject. Of course, if anybody desires to make heavier beef or to maintain animals as manure manufactories, the subject of discussion is entirely changed.

But again, it will be obvious to the practical farmer that unless most liberal management is carried out from birth to twenty-four months, no cattle beast of that age will be fit for the butcher. And it is just as true that the three-year old could not be made up to 1,648, or even 1,200 lbs. without similar management, so it would be no argument to say that two-year-olds weighing about 900 or 1,000 lbs. could be bought cheaper than 3½, and brought out more profitably at 36 months than shown by the previous tables.

At the same time I am disposed to give more value to the manure of the three-year-old as against that of the other, and altogether on this important subject, reference should be made to Chapter IV. herewith.

In a stable of 1,000 head of fattening cattle, as for example at Toronto, or at Mr. Wiser's, of Prescott, the difference in favor of two-year-olds would be $11,-000, and for the 100,000 of those annually exported from the Province, the handsome sum of $1,100,000.

III.—DOES IT PAY TO FATTEN CATTLE FOR MANURE PRODUCTION ONLY?

There really exists no difficulty in setting this question at rest, and the plainest possible way to illustrate it fully is to purchase a two-and-one-half-year old steer at a price equal to what can be got for it when matured six months afterwards, and give no credit for extra weight of flesh produced; or, what will amount to the same thing, get the loan of such an animal, feed it with whatever you choose for ordinary good production of beef, and return to its owner six months afterwards,—in short, will it pay to use the animal system as a manure-making machine only?

In regard to what constitutes the actual value of farm-yard manure, it is necessary here to have a distinct understanding with the average farmer, and accordingly I have to draw his earnest attention to the chapter herewith entitled "The Value of a Manure Heap," wherein is clear proof of the facts that must, at the present time at least, guide all men on this valuable subject.

On the 1st October then we are supplied with the use of a three-months old steer, and for the succeeding 220 days it consumes:

6½	tons Swede turnips,
3½	" mangolds,
1½	" of straw, of kinds.
½	ton hay,
½	" pea meal,
½	" corn meal, and
½	" bran.

The actual cost of these as produced from the farm amounts to $31.26, thus:

	Act'l Cost.	Mar't Price.
Turnips	$8 04	$17 60
Mangolds	3 66	11 00
Straw	2 40	4 04
Hay	1 80	4 04
Pea meal	6 06	12 12
Corn meal	7 10	12 10
Bran	72 20	2 20
	$31 26	$63 06

Now, according to the valuation standard of such materials after passing through the animal system, they are actually worth as fertilizers from one three-year old steer, during 220 days, the sum of $32.06, as thus detailed:

Turnips, $1 per ton (of raw materials)		$6 50
Mangolds, $1.35 per ton	"	4 06
Straw, $3 per ton	"	3 75
Hay, $6 per ton	"	3 00
Pea meal, $15 per ton	"	7 50
Corn meal, $7.50 per ton	"	3 75
Bran, $14 per ton	"	3 50
		$32 06

We have then an actual cost of food amounting to $31.26, against what is understood to be as practical a value, amounting to $32.06, which under proper management, lies as so much money to be invested for future cropping. Put in another way, these droppings are equal to one ton of bone dust, or one ton of mineral superphosphate, laid down on the farm from the manufactory, according to present prices; but, will any experienced farmer assert that he would rather have either of these special fertilisers than the farm-yard manure from this animal? Would he give seven tons (which the one steer produces), of such first-class home-made manure for one of bone dust, or of mineral superphosphate, valuable as they be? Long practical experience in the use of these manures says that for the production of grain, roots, and other crops, four tons of first-class farm-yard manure is more active, more permanent, and more suitable than one ton of either of these special fertilizers.

This then is no fanciful valuation or comparison, and I can see no grounds whatever for doubting the affirmative to the question "Does it pay to fatten or feed cattle for manure production only?" Any one then who asserts that the feeding of cattle does not pay because, on charging all food against the actual increase of weight of flesh and extra price, the account won't balance, is either dead to the value of farm-yard manure, or prejudiced against all such advanced views.

END OF THE WORLD

Leonardo Aretine, an Italian of the 14th century, predicted the end of the world for the 15th of November, 1881. Behold the exact programme of the catastrophe, which will happen in a few months:

Nov. 1—The ocean will overflow its shores.
Nov. 2—The earth will be soaked with water.
Nov. 3—The fish in the rivers will die.
Nov. 4—All the water fowl and fish will die.
Nov. 5—The birds in the air will die.
Nov. 6—The houses will fall down.
Nov. 7—The rocks will fall down.
Nov. 8—The earth will tremble.
Nov. 9—The mountains will fall.
Nov. 10—The men will become speechless.
Nov. 11—The tombs will open.
Nov. 12—The stars will fall.
Nov. 13—All the men and all the women will die.
Nov. 14—The heavens will disappear and the land will be no more.
Nov. 15—A general resurrection and the last judgement.

A RAILWAY INCIDENT.

[illegible] A clergyman Creates Trouble Thereby.

[illegible] Thursday, Sept. 25.—On the five o'clock G.T.R. train for Duffin's Creek for Duffin's Creek, on Saturday evening, were two Roman Catholic clergymen, Father Shea, of this city, and the curé of Duffin's Creek parish. On the conductor proceeding to collect the tickets Father Shea presented one which was two days overdue. The conductor refused it, and told the rev. gentleman that he would have to pay his fare or leave the train. Father Shea, who was sitting next his brother priest by the window, vowed that as he had paid the full price for the ticket some time ago, he would ride on it. When the Don Station was reached the case was represented to the Ticket Inspector, who gave orders that Father Shea should be summarily ejected, but this order was more easily issued than executed. The conductor and inspector then seized the rev. gentleman, who exerted himself violently to maintain his seat, declaring that if they were bound to put him off they "would have to hitch the engine to him." The brakeman was summoned to the assistance of the two officials, but when he discovered that it was his Father Confessor he was called to lay violent hands on he declined to act, and producing his greasy purse he paid the priest's fare. The occurrence created considerable excitement among the other passengers.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends its self so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Nyman." Sold by all druggists

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, laryngitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung membrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of these elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

The sense of loneliness, to my nothing the heat and pain she is suffering from almost deprived Fancy of whatever little courage she once possessed; but at very moment when heart and brain alike beginning to fail, a carriage is seen to be crossing the moor from direction in which she has been look- long and anxiously. The clumsy of hobby of a cab, is hardly less than the pain and fear and heat, the carriage stops beside her, and she recognises a familiar voice and face verything seems to reel round her, a shing darkness succeeds to the light glare of the sun and moor; she falls upon the heather, half fainting, and, for a few seconds, loses consciousness altogether.

When Fancy recovered consciousness she still lying on the ground, and two ies are bending lovingly over and pporting her at the same time.

"Laura," she cries softly, "how did come here, and where am I?"

"You must not talk, dear; at least, yet. We found you fainting on the or!"

"Oh, yes, I remember! I sprained my and could not walk another step." e caught her ankle and shuddered as a ner twinge of pain suggested more care the moving of her foot.

"My ankle, Laura," she says slowly. trod upon a stone. You can't think" pathetically—"what agony I am suf- ing!"

"Never mind, poor child; you will n feel better."

All this while Lady Winton and her panion are arranging the carriage for oy's reception, and then she is gently ed into it, the order "Home" is given, , in less than half an hour, Fancy is Winton Hall.

* * * *

sprained ankle is not a serious thing; it sufficed to keep Fancy a prisoner some days; and after that she had a ht attack of nervous fever; and the r recommended her by all means to Winton instead of at once return- to Langley. Rob, much as he longed ve her back again, could not help ing that, in the circumstances, it was haps better for her to remain under Winton's care; yet, could he have his own way, he would have gladly ried her back, even had it been in his strong arms, so that no one but him- should nurse her with patient un- g care.

"You are too good to me, Rob," she once ventured to say, with a pretty e tinge of red flushing her pale face. n no-worth making such a fuss about don't know who would be!"—and, stooped over her and kissed her, threw back her head, and her breath e fast, while her eyes sparkled like onds. This had happened upon the sion of her first visit. When he had , she had indulged in a violent fit of erics.

"You don't know how miserable I am," had confessed to Lady Winton; but, e did not reveal the cause of this appiness, Lady Winton's sympathy not very profound.

dy Winton was very young, good- red, and decidedly clever. Several s before she had taken a great in- in Fancy, as being the only pretty sentimentable girl in the school they frequented. She was the only ter of a former Vicar of Langley; almost as soon as she left school, married Sir Rupert Winton, her 's great friend and the owner of ral large estates in and out of the ntry. He lived only a very short after this marriage—dying, in fact, ing his honeymoon in the South of ce; and, almost immediately after- ds, his young wife returned to Eng- and persuaded a cousin of her band—a Miss Winton—to share her e for a time, wherever that might She also wrote, at the same time, ancy Carlyon, saying that, when she rned to Winton, she should expect y to pay her a visit. While Fancy's had dwelt longingly upon the ght of this visit, Rob had been great- gainst it. Personally he disliked Winton. He could not forget that had sold herself for so much money ainst little; and he did not think it d be good for Fancy to be mixed up a set of people in a totally different ion of life from her own.

t, now that Fate had ordained that should be so, at least for a time, was quite happy, and could afford espise Rob's fears and prophecies of . At Winton Hall life flowed on so y, in smoothly that existence itself almost enough to live for; the only k was, so far as Fancy was con- d, was that it might not last for- No doubt this change from the tony of her life at Langley helped o put away the thought of Garth eron without indulging in too many id fancies or recollections. No e had come for her to the little Win- post-office at which his letters were left for her. After several weeks aiting, not even a line from him the silence; and Fancy had no on address of his, nor did she even who his friends in town were. On points Garth had been very re- d, and she had hardly thought to re. It would not be true to say she did not feel his faithlessness— ded pride as much as love made her angry and miserable sometimes; he "love in idleness," born of the and music of her life, had no to affect her deeply, and whatever ffering or disappointment she felt oon over.

sides, there were so many things at on to soften the poignancy of Garth's tion. To say nothing of Rob's visits, ne friends of Lady Winton came to with her from time to time, and the became the scene of numerous small rties, small necessarily, because Christmas's period of mourning was et ended.

e morning, Lady Winton enters 's room with a letter in her hand. is from Rob," she explains. "He it is time you went back to y. Now the question is, Do you to do so?"

ncy's face grows a little pale and a rises over her lovely eyes.

seems very sudden," she says," a pause; "and yet I have been here t a month."

you agree to a plan I have in my you need not return to Langley at stead of that, I would get Rob's ld for you to go to town with Laura! Oh, how good-yes—no!" sh colour leaps into Fancy's face, and her eyes flash with a sudden joy.

"I make it a rule to do so every day. It is necessary for him to exercise a pretty girl like you can be dull at Langley all your life. How are you going to marry and settle in life, I should like to know? Unless Rob marries you himself; and that, I suppose, would be your fate in the long run!"

"Oh, I hope not! I shouldn't make him a good wife, at all events, not the one after his pattern," says Fancy hastily.

"It would be ridiculous," says Lady Winton.

"He will never let me go to town, Laura; it would be of no use asking him!"—resignedly.

"But you wish to go, dear? You would not be afraid of trusting yourself with me?"

"There is nothing in the world I should love so much, Laura; it is best—"

"Then surely you are old enough to have something to say in the disposal of your life," interrupts the other quickly—"unless, of course, you prefer being treated like a child."

Fancy's heart beats rapidly, and she gives a fierce little laugh.

"You forget that Rob is the only friend I have in the world. If I defy him, I must beg for a livelihood. It is not a question of choice with me, but of necessity."

"Possibly," says Lady Winton coolly. "But still, if that is your only objection to acting against his wishes, we may consider the matter settled that you will go."

"But I do not understand——"

"There is no need you should just now. When I have seen Rob, I will explain more to you."

"You will break it very gently to him, Laura, will you not? I would do it myself were I not such a coward. Do you know I was thinking of Rob when you first came in; and, when you spoke of the letter and my going back to Langley, I had almost made up my mind in a moment to run away, go up to London if I could get there, and earn my own living, as we once talked of doing. Do you remember? It was dreadfully wrong of me, I know; but I am convinced that, if I were to go back to Langley now, I should go mad or do something desperate."

"Poor child!" says Lady Winton, smiling and taking the hot little hands in her own while she tries to soothe the restless excitement which she only half comprehends. "There will be no need for Langley to become the scene of a tragedy such as you suggest. It will be your own fault if you return. I wish for no greater pleasure than to keep you always;" and then, as though afraid of having said too much, she checks herself suddenly and changes the conversation into ordinary topics.

CHAPTER IV.

That night the crisis comes.

Rob calls at the Hall with a message for Fancy from Jenny, regarding some unimportant household detail, and is at once shown, by Lady Winton's orders, into her favourite sitting-room. Fancy is there alone; a small table near her is strewn with cards. Evidently several people have been playing lately. The room is brilliantly lighted with wax candles, and the atmosphere is oppressive with the perfume of flowers. Fancy is sitting in a low chair near the fire; she wears an exquisite costume of soft silk, embroidered with red and yellow roses.

"It is too large for me," Lady Winton had said earlier in the day; "but, with a little alteration, it would just fit you; and you shall wear it to-night."

So Denise, the French maid, had exercised a little skill in adapting it to Fancy's figure, and the result was a brilliant success; the dress fitted closely and looked perfection.

But to Robert Constant, who has the vaguest ideas as to the necessities or beauties of a woman's toilet, this exquisite costume, with a train of a yard and a half, the creamy lace falling away from the snowy arm it is supposed to cover and does not, the perfume and softness and wonder of it fill him with undisguised horror. How lovely she is! How bright, how gay among these strange people! A colour like a rose is on her face, and her breast and hair are full of flowers.

Her utterance of his name as he enters the room strikes like a knell upon his heart. For the first time it dawns upon him that she is happy here, that she is one of these many honoured guests, an equal indeed in everything but the mere accident of wealth. Her voice, her words, seem all strange somehow; and yet the outstretched hands and the clear brown eyes that shine above the roses should reassure him if anything could.

At the soft warm touch of her fingers a dogged determination comes over him. He draws her towards him for a moment, and then suddenly releases her; his voice is thick and strained.

"I am glad you are better, my child," he says kindly. "But where is Lady Winton? I want to speak to her. This place too is stifling to me. I have just walked across the moors. Have you no cooler room?"

She leads the way into the library. Here a murmur of voices and low laughter greet them. On the other side of the conservatory, into which the library opens, is the drawing-room where Lady Winton and her guests are amusing themselves.

"If you will stay here a few minutes, Rob, I will bring Laura to you."

She moves away through the flowers to do this, and Rob gazes after her, his heart full already of a deep and passionate regret. Alas, how shall he draw her back to the narrow life that once seemed so all-sufficient for her happiness? Where are the pretty dresses she used to wear in the summer evenings at Langley, the soft muslins and gray merinoes that harmonised so well with her girlish beauty without making it the wonderful maddening thing it seems now to his enraptured eyes?

Is it possible that anything so brilliant, so incomparably lovely can by any chance belong to him? Is she not rather fast drifting away, soon to be lost to him and his world for ever?

He has feared it from the first; he is now convinced of it. This wealth and splendour have stolen her away. A bitter hatred, for what or whom he hardly knows, possesses him. But it is not yet too late. She is still his child; he is her guardian by every law of man and Heaven. He will assert his right to her, will take her away, take her home this very night, and never let her part from him again. While all these miserable conflicting thoughts are surging through Rob's mind, Fancy returns, a little paler, a little more distrait than when she left him.

Rob grasps a chair to steady himself by; he hardly dares trust himself to speak to her.

"I want you to come home," he begins quietly. "We are lonely without you, Jenny and I. I can't speak for myself, Fancy, because it might seem as though I grudged you your pleasant holiday; but the time has seemed endless to me; and the more patiently I have tried to be, the worse it has been. Come home, Fancy. Some hands to-night, his voice full of suppressed pain and passionate entreaty, pierces the girl's heart like a knife.

"Lady Winton has a proposal to make, Rob. I am sorry, very sorry"—turning from him and resolutely forcing back her tears—"that you have missed me. I was afraid I had given you too much trouble for you to care much about me."

"That is not true. Why do you say so to me?"

"It is true," she cries excitedly; "and I can never be sufficiently ashamed of it!"

In her sudden startled glance at him, the lace about her throat is caught in the flowers there, and a shower of yellow waxen petals fall at his feet.

"Tell me, child, what you mean!" he demands fiercely. "All is a mystery. For Heaven's sake, speak so that I can understand!"

"Laura——"

"You tell me!" he interrupts bitterly. "Never mind her! Whatever blow you have in store for me, let it be your own hands that deal it, not hers."

She turns very pale, white even to the lips; but does not speak.

"Are you afraid or ashamed!" he continues with a tenderness he is only partially aware of. "Oh, Fancy my darling, is this bitter thing to come as the result of my——"

"It is not my fault!" she sobs at last. "And I am very unhappy!"

"Unhappy," echoes Rob, fairly bewildered and coming nearer to her.

"You were not unhappy a month ago when I told you how I loved you. What has happened since to make the difference now?"

"I never could have made you happy, Rob; I am not anything like so good as you think," she says, leaning by the table, her face buried in her pocket-handkerchief. "I never dreamed you would wish to marry me, and that is the truth."

"You do not want to marry me, Fancy?"

"Forgive me, Rob."

"Hush! There is nothing to forgive. You shall not marry me but you must come home."

Fancy looks up as he ceases speaking, wondering if she hears aright. His face is white and haggard, and he breathes heavily in the perfumed silence, like a man in deadly pain. Fortunately at this moment Lady Winton comes into the room, and at once perceived that some kind of explanation had taken place. Without, therefore, wasting time in preliminaries, she opens the ball at once with a proposal to adopt Fancy and keep her with her always.

When at last she stops, waiting for him to reply, she is prepared by the very nature of things for some kind of opposition or dissent, but certainly not for the suppressed fury with which Rob, while ridiculing the idea that any one can take his place to his ward, absolutely refuses her offer. Not for another day, not for another hour—so he declares—shall Fancy remain under her roof. It was not to be at that, dazzled by the splendour and frivolity of all around her, she in her ignorance should mistake the shadow for the reality; but he who knew of this would be doubly guilty if he did not at once step in to save her.

With a woman's invincible weapons, suaveness, tact, delicacy, Lady Winton addresses herself to the task of showing Rob how wrongfully and cruelly he has misread and misjudged her. Like himself, she has only the girl's happiness at heart. It was dull for her, besides being actually prejudicial to her health and spirits, to live at Langley without friends or companions of her own age and sex. Had not she and Fancy been friends together in the years that were past? And did not she understand, perhaps better than himself, the loving sensitive nature of the girl who, at the very time when motherly love and prudence were most needed, was left without even the weak arm of a woman-friend to lean upon? Surely then there were no reasonable grounds upon which he could justify himself in standing in the way of the girl's happiness?

TO THE WEAK, WORN, AND THE WEARY,—FROM THE BOSTON Recorder.:—"The Peruvian Syrup is one of the few advertised medicines which is worthy of notice, and a personal trial of it for many years has showed us that it possesses all the qualities claimed by its proprietors. As a tonic in cases of impaired health or weakened consitution it has no superior. Unlike most Tonics and Bitters, it is entirely free from alcohol, and therefore its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction. The certificate of Dr. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, and of Dr. Chilton, the celebrated chemist of New York, agree that there is in its composition no mineral or vegetable poison, or objectionable substance whatever. We can most unhesitatingly recommend it to all the weak, and worn, and the weary. We make these remarks voluntarily, and if our own prompting, richly experienced its benefits."

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes o adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

NEW IMPORTATIONS.—Messrs. Hall Innes & Co., having cleared out by special sale their large stock of carpets, are now receiving, direct from the European manufactories a new stock which for extent, variety, elegance, and cheapness, it is not going beyond the mark to say, we do not think has been equalled by any ever brought into Peterborough, and perhaps not by any but of the largest wholesale dealers in Montreal and Toronto. These goods comprise Brussels, Turkey, Tapestry, Kidderminster etc., of all the standard makers, but what strikes one peculiarly on an examination of the stock, is the evident improvement in the art of manufacture, which combines richness and delicacy of finish, and the highly artistic effort evidently exercised in patterns and in combinations of colors and effects. Some of the Japanese designs in Brussels, and the Velvet Carpets, are exceedingly elegant, and will be sure to captivate the favor of the ladies. All the latest and newest designs are comprised in the new stock, and as adequate description is impossible we advise our lady friends not to fail to see the opening of this Department on Saturday, when special attention will be given to the display of these goods.

WELL AS HOME.—Dan. Williams and Nash will be in town to attend their numerous visitors, on Wednesday next, 7th proximo.

CENTRAL EXHIBITION.—We have received the prize list for the coming Exhibition at Lindsay. The artistic appearance of the pamphlet reflects credit upon the capacity and resources of the Post office, whence the work is issued.

HORTICULTURAL SHOW.—We trust that our readers will not forget that the annual show of the Peterborough Horticultural Society will take place to-day, Thursday. The exhibition is almost certain to be of unusual excellence, and those who are fortunate enough to attend may depend upon a treat of no ordinary character.

SHE ADVERTISED.—Some say that advertising is no good and that people never read advertisements. Three weeks ago we advertised for a milch cow, for a widow woman at Hiawatha, who after having the roads hunted thoroughly, advertised in the EXAMINER. Last week she recovered the cow, and now believes in advertising.

THE MOON.—There will be five changes of the moon this month, which is the only month in the calendar that will furnish such a lunar spectacle this year. The moon reaches its first quarter to-day, full on the 7th, last quarter on the 15th. On the 22nd new moon, and the 1st quarter on the 30th.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.—Complaints occasionally reach us that our carrier boys do not always leave the EXAMINER in the customers' houses. We pay the boys to carry these papers properly, and would be glad to hear from subscribers who have anything to complaid of in this connection. Our boys are all trustworthy, but once in a while a little carelessness annoys a subscriber.

RESUMING BUSINESS.—The many old friends of Mr. E. Brown, who formerly conducted a sewing machine business here, but who has been doing business in Barrie, will be glad to know that he will be a member of the firm of Ham & Brown, Sewing Machine Agents, who open up business here in a few days, and that Mr. Brown will remain here permanently.

A LITTLE OFF.—Friday's Review contained the following item:—"The day before yesterday, while working a circular saw, Mr. H. Reid had a thumb taken off at the first joint. He was able, after binding it up, to proceed with his work." This is all right except for two trifling inaccuracies. The first is that the thumb was not taken off at the first or any other joint. The second, that Mr. Reid was still so badly injured that he did not "proceed with his work," as stated.

THE BOAT CLUB.—At the meeting of the Peterborough Boat Club, held on Monday evening, Messrs. G. C. Rogers, R. E. Wood, A. H. McDougall, W. H. Budden and E. B. Edwards were appointed a committee to make arrangements for a Regatta during September. If favorable arrangements can be effected, Bridgenorth will be the objective point. Mr. Edwards presented the trophies and souvenirs brought home from the recent meeting at Lake George, and a club signal for canoes was agreed upon.

THE DROUGHT.—To depict the drought which prevails up to the hour of our going to press, is something beyond ordinary capacity. The root crops are shrivelled to nothingness, and the very trees die for want of nutriment, which neither the parched air nor the arid soil can afford, As Sir John gets credit for the good crop, we hope our truly good friend of the Review will exert his influence, in order that the magic N. P. wand may be induced to send rain.

LITTEL'S LIVING AGE.—The numbers of The Living Age for August 20th and 27th, contain articles from the Quarterly; Nineteenth Century; Cornhill; Fraser; Argosy; Good Words; Temple Bar; St. James Gazette; Saturday Review; Pall Mall Gazette; Nature; with instalments of "In Trust, and "The Frere's," and the usual amount of poetry. For 52 numbers of 64 large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littel & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

ALARM OF FIRE.—About noon yesterday quite an alarm was created by the ringing of the alarm bells, everybody being apprehensive of his own residence, if he happened to be absent, as everything is so dry that it would be hard to estimate the results of a fire at any point, if it gained headway. The steamer and hose company were promptly turned out, and soon found that they were in for three miles tramp to the Red Mills at Nassau, where they have been doing good service during the afternoon. It seems that fire got among the swampy material in the neighbourhood of the Mills, and threatened the lumber piles, the danger appearing so grave that the town engine was sent for. We are glad to know that the yards and mills are safe.

INTERFERENCE WITH THE WATERS.—A little more than a week ago complaints were made to the Engineer in charge of the Trent waters, that the water was falling very rapidly at Fenelon Falls, Sturgeon Point, Bobcaygeon, etc., and Mr. Belcher at once discharged men to let the reserve water out of the northern lakes. The stop-logs were taken up, and a sufficient volume of water let down to remedy the difficulty, which disappeared for a few days, when the same complaint was made again. Enquiry developed the fact that some persons had wantonly put back the stop-logs into their places and that the supply of water was thus again cut off, to the great loss and inconvenience of those interested in the navigation of the intervening lakes and rivers. Some special penalty should be provided for the punishment of such acts as this, the consequences of which are most serious.

EAST LYNNE.—This popular play was presented on Tuesday night at Bradburn's Hall to a large and fashionable audience, by Miss Ada Gray, sustained by Mr. C. A. Watkin's Company, from New York. Without entering into any lengthy commentary upon the performance, we may say simply that Miss Gray sustained fully the high reputation she has attained as an emotional actress of rare talent. Though not unfamiliar to Peterborough audiences, she brought with her new charms of expression, and apparently of form and feature. She was ably supported by Mr. Watkins and his company, and should they be able to pay a visit to Peterborough again, they may rely upon an enthusiastic patronage. We would suggest to Mr. Bradburn that the public expect when patronizing entertainments in his hall to be protected from annoyances such as infested the hall on this occasion. This much at least is due to the performers and the audiences, as well as to the good reputation of the town.

DEATHS.

A Sabbath Morn.

RESULTS OF A SATURDAY NIGHT'S SPREE.

One Young Man Sent Suddenly to Meet his Maker.

Another in the Prison Cell Thinking on the Hangman.

On Sabbath morn last law, abiding citizens who had gone to bed betimes on the previous evening were startled by a rumor which found swift-winged circulation, that a murder had been perpetrated as the previous week's house of toil had plunged into the beginning of that day of rest, which nowadays seems so little spared to too many. And it was not long before enquiry heard of a young man, in the flush of life and the full enjoyment of health, lying the grim tenant of a damp and unwholesome cellar, face upwards on the one-time sign board of a grog-house, with ice piled about his sides, with a red rush upon his bared breast, with a pallid face upon which sat the awful mystery of Death, and whose only companions in the awful solitude were the watchers who kept the foul denizens of the drains and sewers from foraging upon what, but a few hours before, had been a man. There came another Sunday morning for another man, who, with his head on his hands, in the darkness of the stone cell at the gaol, was confronted, in the visions of his guilty imaginations, with a grim and ghastly gibbet, on which he could see a form with features hidden by a white cap, but which in his fancy he knew to be himself—hanged by the neck, until, to use the dread formula of the law, he was dead. The dead man in the ghastly cellar, watched as well by the bead-like eyes from noisome crevices, as by those who guarded all that was left of him, was Joseph Larocque, for the past few weeks employed at Mr. T. Fitzgerald's livery stables as caretaker, a young man of some twenty-five years. The other man, sitting in the cell of the gaol with the horrible phantom ever before his closed eyes, of his own figure swinging back and forth upon the scaffold of the imagination and anticipation, was Nelson Hamelin, of about the same age and condition of life as that which he in the cellar off the market square had been in life. Each had been brought to his dreadful extremity—and it is hard to imagine which was the more deplorable fate—by a Saturday night carouse. As nearly as can be gathered from the evidence taken before the Coroner's jury which sat on monday morning, it appears it appears that two young men, Lefort and Larocque had been drinking together during the evening, at an hour when the sale of intoxicants is prohibited by the law, and that at the midnight between the end of the week and the Sabbath day they had encountered the prisoner at a place to which they had had all resorted for liquor because the licensed hotels were closed. Something alleged to have occurred, by the man Lafort, at the house of Mrs. Berube, but to which no testimony is borne by any other person, caused Larocque to be seized with anger against the now prisoner Hamelin. The latter was evidently apprehensive of violence as he endeavored to induce a companion to accompany him home but did not succeed. On his way home alone he was waylaid and attacked by Larocque, who assaulted him. The rest of the story is found in the evidence, which we give below.

At 8:30 on Monday morning Coroner Fife empannelled a jury of which Mr. Andrew McNeil was Foreman and whose names will be found attached to the verdict below, and proceeded to hold an inquest in the old Town Hall. The following is the evidence elicited and the decision thereupon by the jury:

ODILON LEFORT,

Sworn:—Saturday evening met Joe Larocque first about seven o'clock; went into the Livery Stable with him, where he was at work. He stopped till about eight o'clock, when he got permission from his boss to go up street to see about a wedding. Went to Mrs. Berube's and had a few drinks of whiskey for which he paid. They went up George street, and walked round a while—they had had four drinks apiece at Berube's—went up to Daly's but got nothing there, and came down to stable. Then went to the Boarding house, and while there Joe thought he heard some rig coming in; witness went up after him, and they again come down street. Did not know whether it was after 11 o'clock or after 12. Went to Mrs. Berube's where they had one glass of liquor each. After stopping a little while this Hamelin, was there and one O'Connor. Mrs. Berube did not wish to have him, and O'Connor took him away. After a time he came back again, and when came back a second time they said: let them all go out, and get him away, Joe. Larocque went out first and the prisoner after him. He went out the side door of the grocery and gave a sign to Larocque, who was leaning against the door, to come in, as they didn't want to be with the prisoner—knew he was not wanted in the house, because she had told somebody to coax him out before. Larocque and witness held the door so the prisoner could not come in—prisoner shoved on the door three or four times, and when he ceased shoving they went in and sat down. In about 10 or 15 minutes prisoner came in again and ordered a drink. Deceased, witness and prisoner drank and he thought Mr. Guerin, who came in a short time after.

To Coroner.—Drank whiskey and catsup When deceased was drinking witness understood prisoner to say "he would like to know the son of a bitch who held the door." Larocque said "he did hold the door and he was no son of a bitch." Prisoner said he did not call him a son of a bitch, when Larocque said he did. They went up and asked them to quit. They all then went out. Larocque followed witness out, going up George street and they were going to the stable. At corner of the street—at Charlotte,—witness stopped under the gas light and waited for Larocque. Hamelin was behind them—could not say how far, when he overtook them, he said he was not in earnest about that, but fooling. Witness said never mind, its not worth your while. Deceased asked the prisoner, "Did you call me that?" with reference to the words referred to above. Prisoner said no; all he said was he would like to see the man that held that door. Deceased said he did not say that and he would show him that he was not the man to be called that, and took off his coat and handed it to witness. He saw Hamelin take his hand out of his coat pocket, standing sideways, close to Larocque, with his hand behind his back. Larocque struck at the prisoner, with his left hand, knocking a cigar out of the prisoner's mouth. Prisoner kind of staggered back towards the middle of the road. Joe went off to the sidewalk to him and they clenched. He went forward, as he supposed, to strike him, when prisoner got his arm over his neck. Witness could see prisoner striking at him with his right hand. Could not tell whether he had anything in his hand or not. Hamelin yelled out to part them, and he went over and as soon as he went they let go. He was only a few steps from them. As soon as they parted prisoner went up to the George street crossing. When they were near the crossing, Joe went and hit the prisoner two kicks. Joe stepped kind of back and put his hand to his side, and then he said: Did you stab me . . . and a second time: "Did you stab me stab me, you dirty pig?" Witness then saw the blood on Joe's side. Joe kind of stepped back and came to witness very weak. As soon as he saw the blood, then went over to the prisoner and said "Did you stab him?" He didn't answer and witness went back to Joe Larocque who walked towards the sidewalk and sat down with his elbows on his knees and his face on his hands: witness then went back and caught the prisoner as he was standing on George street crossing. Asked him "did he stab that man?" He said "How could I stab him; I ain't got a knife?" Said witness, "you stabbed him." Said he "Search me and see if I have got a knife!" Witness yelled for Mr. McGhee, holding the prisoner; yelled "murder!" several times. Prisoner said "Let me go," and was at this time eating an apple. Witness was excited and repeated three or four times "You stabbed that man!" Three or four times said "Why did you stab him? Prisoner answered "Because he hit me first." Nobody arrived at the time. Yelled again and could see young Bob White, and Mr. Ross coming toward him Don't know whether he said "Here's a dead man," or "Here's a murdered man," but they caught hold of the prisoner. Deceased had in the meantime fallen where he was sitting on the sidewalk.

Mr. McNeil—asked Coroner if it was not right in justice to the man in gaol, that he should be present to hear this evidence.

The Coroner said it was not necessary. If they wanted him as a witness he would send for him, but he was not on his trial. Their business was to find out how this man came to his death not to try the prisoner.

Witness continued.—When they got the prisoner, witness went over to Larocque. As he went over and lit a match, his left arm gave two or three twitches and fell back. Don't think there was anybody round at the time. When he turned around he could see the prisoner across the road, who was yelling "murder." Seen Mr. White, the elder, come out with a rifle. There was a gang around the prisoner but could not tell what they were doing. White ordered them to leave him alone. That was all he seen of the prisoner. The witness went back to Larocque.

In answer to coroner—Could not say whether deceased was breathing or not, or whether he was dead or alive. Did not touch him. That was all he knew about it. He sent a French lad down for Dr. King. Dr. Kincaid came afterwards and pronounced Larocque dead.

By foreman—Was deceased drunk at time he was killed?

Witness—No; he had afew horns, but you could not notice it on him.

Foreman—Was prisoner drunk?

Witness—He was the worse of liquor.

Foreman—Did he know what he was doing?

Witness—I could not say.

Coroner—Had he got liquor during the evening anywhere else?

Witness—No sir, got some at Mr. Breault's before.

TENEICE GUERIN,

Sworn:—I was just going down from the market about 10 o'clock; had forgotten to get candies for my children, and as I had a little bill to collect from Mrs. Berube, I went in there. Saw Mrs. Berube; walked into a room and saw this gentleman (prisoner) and Mr. O'Conners. There had been some other one in, he thought, but went out as he went into the store. Connors said "Let us have a drink;" they had a drink; he drank beer, witness paid for it. It was after 11 o'clock. After a little while, Hamelin called on another drink. After a time prisoner called for another bottle of ale. Hamelin had taken a corkscrew which he denied having, but which was found on him when searched, and he had not settled. They made an effort to get Hamelin out of the house, and they were all put out, as Mr. Berube wanted to go to bed. The man who had got killed, said the lady was alone, a widow woman, and she wanted to go to bed, and they should go home. Prisoner was the worse of liquor, but had his sense all right. Then the whole four got up and walked out. Lefort and the man who was killed went on, and witness and prisoner stopped. He (Hamelin) asked witness to go home with him, but he told him that he had a longer way to go than him, and left him. Heard some yelling but did not pay any attention to it.

Foreman—What time was it you parted with prisoner?

Witness—As far as he recollected it was 15 or 20 minutes past twelve.

Foreman—Did you see a knife with the prisoner?

Witness—Yes. He borrowed a knife to cut some tobacco. Thought it was a single bladed knife, but did not pay particular attention to it as he did not know that "that" was going to happen. He thought it was an ordinary jack-knife. He would not like to swear to it.

A small knife produced by Mr. McGhee.

Witness said it looked like the knife he had borrowed.

ROBERT WHITE, SR.,

was then called and sworn. Said:—About 20 minutes to one o'clock his wife got out of bed, and he asked her what was the matter? She says, "There's a great fight on the corner, Robert, I'm afraid they're killing somebody. Get up!" He got up, when he heard some man hallooing "Murder! murder! murder!" as hard as he could halloo. The calling was so great that he did not stop to put on anything but what he had on as he got out of bed. He grabbed his rifle as it hung in the hall, and ran toward the crowd. Prisoner hallooed, "Mr. White, save me, save me, they're killing me!" Witness says: "Gentlemen,"—they were not gentlemen, but it was the first word that came handy to his mouth—"the first one of you that lays a hand on him I'll blow your brains out."

Foreman—"Was your gun loaded?"

Witness—"No, sir. She wasn't loaded—a thing in her. But they scare people sometimes."

Continuing—One of the party came up to him and said, "Mr. White, he's after stabbing some one. He's after killing a man, and he's laying dead on the corner." "Well," says witness, "if he's killed a man it's no reason for you killing him. There's enough of you to take him to the lock-up. Take him away." He thought it was Mr. Macdonald and one or two more of the boys that took him off.

Coroner—What were these men doing that the prisoner was calling murder?

Witness—It was very dark and misty, and he could not see. Could not tell one man from another except they were close up to him, and could not distinguish any violence.

Continuing—He went into his own house—the prisoner went off quietly—dressed himself and came out and went to where the man was lying and seen he was dead. He asked if they had sent for the doctor, and they said yes. Dr. Kincaid came and pronounced him dead. Mr Rush said, "If this man stabbed him it is likely the knife has been thrown away on the street." He went with his lantern and found it. Mr. Dunn picked it up and handed it to him, with a blade broken in. He handed the knife to Dr. Kincaid. He identified the knife to the best of his knowledge. Could not identify the body, as he had never seen him before.

JAMES MCNAMARA,

Sworn:—He identified the body as that of the young man who had been engaged at Fitzgerald's Livery Stables, known as Joe Larocque. He was coming out of Potvin's barber shop, and heard shouting down the street. He ran down and found Lefort calling out that the prisoner had stabbed a man. Saw the deceased lying in the gutter, he did not know at that time that he was dead. Witness seized the prisoner who struggled to get away. While he was holding him Mr. White came out with a gun and threatened to shoot. Jim McDonald went over and tried to pacify Mr. White, who said "if he has stabbed a man why don't you take him to the lock up?" They then took him to the lock-up, and Macdonald called for Jim English who brought the key, and they took him in. When he caught Hamelin he said he had stabbed Larocque and was sorry for it, and when asked where was the knife said he didn't know; it was broken and thrown away. He then went back and met the body of the murdered man which he had left lying in the gutter, as it was being taken to the station.

ROBERT WHITE, JR.,

was sworn and said:—Was going home on Saturday night, when he heard Lefort hallooing for help. He and McNamara and Ross went past the Choate House when they took hold of the prisoner. Lefort said, "Take hold of that man, he has killed a man." Prisoner broke away, when witness tripped him and he fell on his face. He then got up and ran across the road. He asked McNamara to hold him while he went for Johnston. He met Macdonald at the barber shop, and he said "all right, he had a key." He went down and helped to bring him over to the lock-up. Prisoner said they had better go for the doctor, and go quick.

JAMES G. MACDONALD

heard a row in the street, and went down and helped McNamara to arrest prisoner. There was quite a row, and he did not know but prisoner was going to be lynched at once. Prisoner was worse of liquor. He asked him why he had used the knife, and said because he could not fight two to one. Asked where the knife was, and he said, "Over near Joe's." He cautioned prisoner that anything he said would be used against him. Identified prisoner as the man taken to the lock-up.

JAS. O'CONNORS

said:—On Saturday evening about 10 o'clock he was sitting in there at Mrs. Berubee's with this other man (prisoner.) There were three of them. They had a glass. Mrs. Berubee asked him to take the prisoner home. He asked him if he was going home, and he said he was. In about five minutes witness came back, and subsequently the prisoner. Thought the time the prisoner came in the second time would be about 12 o'clock. In answer to a Juryman he said he could not say who the stranger whom he did not know was.

THE POST MORTEM.

DR. KINCAID, M. P. P., sworn said:—I was sent for on Sunday morning at about one o'clock a. m. to visit a man who the messenger informed me has been stabbed, and on my arrival at the place I found a man named Joseph Larocque, lying face downwards in a pool of blood. I made a careful examination and found that the unfortunate man was dead, death, evidently, having occured instantly from the effects of a wound over the region of the heart. I had the body conveyed to the lock-up, and Mr. James G. Macdonald of the Review took charge of the man who by his own confession had inflicted the fatal wound. By order of the Coroner and Jury, I held a post mortem examination this morning (Monday) at 9 a. m. The body was that of a strong, healthy, well developed man about twenty-five years of age. Externally I could observe three wounds, one over the region of the heart; one over the elbow joint on the left side; and one on the left side of the chest between the fifth and sixth ribs. I proceeded to examine the head and found on opening the calvariume a well developed, healthy brain, with all the membrances sound, and the different nerve centres healthy. I then opened the thorax (chest) and found that the wound, mentioned over the region of the heart, had penetrated through the cartilages between the fifth and sixth ribs, passing through the wall of the chest, through the pericardium, and into the right ventricle of the heart, causing an opening through the centre of part of the said organ of about half an inch in diameter, through which his life blood had flowed into the cavity of the

A Sad Lesson.

The terrible and fatal tragedy which horrified the people of the town on Sabbath morning last, carries with it a lesson which we trust the Town Council will not overlook, and to which we have time and again called their attention. The absurdity of allowing a town of 7,000 people to remain without a night-watch of any kind is every night of the year exemplified on our streets. The time when the police protection is withdrawn is the time at which it is, in fact, most needed. The bullies and perchance assassins—for it is the merest accident or providence which hinders any one of the reckless rowdies whose midnight orgies are to be marked in the frequent destruction of property to be noticed in the mornings, and in bandaged heads and disfigured faces which we are accustomed to see on our streets—are not to be met and recognized, nor do they venture to give vent to their evil passions in the daylight, when every good citizen is, if needs be, a constable and a protector of the peace. It is only in the darkness of the night that guilt and crime stalk forth secure and unabashed, and it is in these hours that the police should be alert, and not in the day-time when their services are but rarely needed. We have repeatedly urged that the duties of the officers should be divided into day and night service, so that the majesty of the law might be always on hand, to awe the evil-doers, and more especially those cowardly and reckless wretches whose unrestrained excesses surely lead to fatal termination. We do not mean to intimate that the officers employed by the Council come short in any way of their duties,—on the contrary, we think it would be hard to get better or more faithful men in the discharge of their duties—what we complain of is the want of system for which the Council is responsible. Two peace officers may be sufficient for a town of the size of Peterborough, but we do not think the cost of a third officer would be either very severely felt or complained of by the ratepayers. Then our Chief Constable, so-called, has his time taken up almost exclusively during the summer months in the work connected with the streets and bridges, so that the security of the town practically lies with a single constable, doing day duty, and the result is that corner loafers and rowdies infest the streets in the evenings to the annoyance of respectable citizens, and later on staggering and profane violence stalks forth from the lairs in which that which inflames the passions and deadens the responsibility and moral sensibility is procured. What the Council should do is to consider the propriety of adding another officer to their police force, and divide the duties, so that one officer shall always be on service during the night, to protect peaceable citizens against these prowlers of the darkness.

Another matter to which this melancholy and fatal occurrence directs the attention, is the fact that is proven by the bands of drunken men to be seen on the streets at late hours, that something is necessary to be done to compel the more rigid enforcement of the laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors. Either licensed houses habitually violate the law, or there are sources from which the supply of liquor can be secured which are not licensed. We are much inclined to believe that the law is fairly observed by the hotel-keepers, as a rule, and that there are a few unprincipled exceptions, as well as unlicensed groggeries which ply an unlawful trade. It is not too much to say that if the Crooks' Act were thoroughly and vigorously enforced, as should be the case, the difficulty of effectual preservation of the peace would be greatly reduced, and the recurrence of such events as that which now engages our horrified attention, would be of the least frequence.

The Senate Vacancies.

There are now awaiting the return of the Premier, five vacant seats in the Senate, an amount of patronage connected with the Red Chamber, not likely to accumulate again. We observe that the Ottawa Free Press asks the Government to appoint a representation of Liberal Senators, in pursuance of the arrangement entered into by Sir JOHN MACDONALD with the late Mr. BROWN—that Senators should be appointed alternately from the two opposing parties. No doubt when this understanding was entered into Sir JOHN intended to carry it out so long as it proved convenient, and its convenience disappeared very speedily. As it stands now the Upper Chamber is composed almost entirely of Tory politicians, the handful of Liberals being in a most hopeless minority, and a more dogmatic, arbitrary and purely partizan majority never sat in any legislative assembly, unless it be the Council of Quebec. We do not want to see the appointment of any Liberal to the Upper House, because it is a part of the policy of that party to use its best endeavors to readjust that useless, effete, costly and entirely unnecessary appanage of our system of government, on some basis more in harmony with the genius of self-government and with the requirements of the country. The Upper Chamber costs a year some $130,562, which might be expended to vastly better advantage in works of public utility. Let us take the Senate and build the Trent Valley Canal with it! If the Government want to do something to redeem the character of the Senate, and rescue it from the reproach of being merely a refuge for senile and broken-down politicians, let them appoint men who are not politicians at all—men whose scholarly attainments would reflect some lustre upon the too sadly deficient intellectual field. Let them appoint men like Mr. GOLDWIN SMITH, Principal GRANT, Mr. SANDFORD FLEMING, Col. GZOWSKI, or Mr. PHIPPS, who would bring "new blood" and infuse some vigor and interest into the dry debates of the bogus House of Lords. If we might venture at all to ask a favor at the hands of Sir JOHN MACDONALD—and we do not presume to set up any claim—we would implore the Premier to have mercy upon the House of Commons and upon a suffering public, and appoint Mr. JOSIAH BURR PLUMB to at least one of the five vacancies in the Senate.

Those Costly Commissioners.

The London Advertiser draws attention to the following figures which show the sums that are being paid per day to members of the alleged "Pacific Railway "Commission," whether the Commission sits or not:

Judge Clarke	$10 00
Mr. S Keefer	10 00
Mr. E. Miall	3 00
Mr. N. F. Davis, Secretary	5 00
Mr. J. F. Brown, Accountant	3 00
Mr. C. Miles, Messenger	1 50
	$32 50

In addition to these disbursements, it must be borne in mind, that Mr. MIALL is presumed to be a very hard worked officer as Assistant Commissioner of Inland Revenue, at a salary of $2,400. Judge Clarke also draws his salary as a County Judge. We venture to prophesy that when the total expenses in connection with this Commission, cost of witnesses, printing evidences, etc., are figured up for the information of Parliament, people will be amazed to find how large a sum of money there has been expended, and how very, very little of any value there is to show for it. And when we say that the whole object of the Commission will have been attained by the expenditure, we are not very wide from the mark. In the rush for plunder which followed the late elections and the adoption of the spoils system, it was found impossible to find room for all the claimants for patronage at the public crib, and the fertile ingenuity of Sir John was exercised to find some legitimate means of rewarding the "trooly loil" of his followers. This Commission business was the result. It was suddenly found necessary that divers branches of the public service required investigation, and among others, special attention was devoted to the railway management of the late minister of Public Works. It was assumed and very broad hints to that effect were put in circulation in the Ministerial press, that there might have been scandals in connection with the award of contracts and the departmental administration, and to ferret out these and thereon transfix the fallen premier was the motion put forward by Mr. Charles TUPPER for this expensive Commission. As a scheme upon which to wreck Mr. Mackenzie's fame, however, the Commission proved a failure of the first magnitude, but as the engineer is often "hoist with his own petard," so the evidence taken before the Commission, while it thoroughly establishes the integrity of Mr. MACKENZIE'S management, disclosed such gross corruption on the part of his successor, Sir CHARLES TUPPER, and those nearly connected with him, were placed before the public in a very disgraceful light, and the disgrace of the revelations was so great that the Secretary of Sir CHARLES' Department, since some one must be made a scapegoat, was compelled to resign his position. This, however, was one of the unexpected results—something that Sir JOHN, in ordering the Commission in order that there might be a certain number of lucrative places created for his friends, had never contemplated, being no doubt under the impression that his colleagues possessed greater astuteness in covering up the tracks of their infamy. What it is all going to cost is something to be known when Parliament meets again, but it is satisfactory to the friends of the late Government to know that at least their skirts have been proven to be clean; and that whatever of wrong-doing there may have been, has occurred since they carried their principles out of office.

Editorial Notes.

BUSINESS men in the neighboring villages requiring any kind of Job Printing can have their orders filled by return mail, as neatly and cheaply as if they came themselves, by sending to THE EXAMINER Office, Peterborough.

IT is against the law to take liquor into the North-West Territories. LORD LORNE has just gone to the foot of the Rockies with a cart-load of grog, and the Globe says:—"Simultaneously there is a "call for another enrollment of Mounted "Policemen."

WE find this in the Ottawa Free Press: "The best joke of the season has been "perpetrated by the London, England, "Telegraph, which ascribes Canada's pro"sperity and increase of population to "the 'beneficial rule of the MARQUIS OF "LORNE, aided by the excellent manage"ment of that most sympathetic of "officials, Col. DE WINTON.'" On this the Kingston News shrewdly observes:—"The MARQUIS has undoubtedly con"tributed as much to the prosperity of "the country as he has to the increase of "population."

IN the course of some remarks made by the Hon. Mr. MACDOUGALL at a banquet in Winnipeg, that gentleman expressed the regret that he had not seen more farmers. He said he had met many energetic and enterprising men but they were not farmers. The truth is that the North-West is overrun with land speculators on the lookout for corner lots. The spirit of speculation is rife among the people and instead of the lots being cultivated they are held for a rise in their market value, which the carving out of another new city on the prairie may give them any day. The North-West is the "very home of wheat plant," and its wheat makes better better flour, more of it to the bushel, and brings a better price than other wheat. But all this will be in vain if the land is not tilled, instead of being held for speculation. The North-West is rapidly developing, but what it wants most of all is an influx of genuine farmers, who will not hesitate to take hold of the plough.

The editor of the Calais, Me., Times thus speaks of the Hon. Edward Blake's speech at St. Stephen, N. B.—"The speech of the Hon. Edward Blake was one of the most masterly we have ever heard. For two hours he claimed the attention of hearers by his pure diction, powerful analysis and irresistible logic. Attempting no oratorical display, appealing to no prejudice, alluding to his opponents with courtesy, and scorning the arts of sophistry, he impressed every hearer by his candour, and carried conviction by masterly presentation of facts. His dispassionate oratory was a surprise to those who have accustomed to the inflamed oratory of campaign speakers on this side of the line. A few such men as Mr. Blake would purify the methods of public discussion in the United States. Canada has not only produced a great mind, but a true gentlemen in Mr. Blake."

With reference to the exhibition the Lindsay Warder says: The progress with which the arrangements are being made for the holning of the Central Exhibition at Lindsay during the first week of October augurs well for its success. The indications are that it will be even more successful then the one held here four years ago. The prize list has been issued and entry forms distributed which will no doubt be rapidly filled up and returned to the Secretary. At its last meeting the town council voted $200 to the exhibition guarantee fund, but instead of a deficiency a very respectable surplus in anticipated.

A little daughter of Mr. Allen Ross, of Huntingdon, age one year, was accidentally drowned in a well on her father's premises on Saturday last.

The timber cut in Hastings district is likely to be very large during the coming winter. Messrs Gilmour & Co. have already established shanties on Tudor and are making improvements in Beaver Creek to facilitate driving.

On Tuesday last a Toronto Bicyclist made the journey to Whitby; including stoppages, in 4 hours and a half. He said he did not feel tired and would have made a good deal better time if the roads had not been so dusty. The day was an extremely hot one.

The school buildings at Port Hope and Belleville have recently had a thorough scrubbing, and they certainly look all the better for the operation. The ceilings have been whitewashed, the walls calcemined, and the wood-work throughout re-painted.

Mr. Daniel McCarten, formely of Sophiasburgh but now of the County of Lennox, had a field of 12 acres of barley this year which yielded 500 bushels, or nearly 41 bushels to the acre. Mr Joseph Shannon, of Waupoos Island, raised 196 bushels of wheat from 7 bus. of seed.—Picton Times.

Mr. W. Lovekin, who farms near Newcastle, had a close shave while crossing the G. T. R. on Wednesday week. His buggy was struck by the engine of the down mixed and smashed, he himself was almost stripped, and the harness was torn off the horse. Neither man nor beast was injured.—Port Hope Times.

A WRETCHED SCORE.—A score of years is a long time to look back upon, but when attended with continual suffering, it seems almost a century; and all this pain could have been avoided if, when your liver commences to trouble you, if you had taken Burdock Blood Bitters. Price $1 00, trial size 10 cents. 36-2t

TRUTH AND HONOR.—Query:—What is the best family medicine in the world to regulate the bowels, purify the blood, remove costiveness and biliousness, aid digestion and tone up the whole system? Truth and honor compels us to answer, Hop Bitters; being pure, perfect and harmless. See another column.—Toledo Blade. 36-2t

The question, "are police constables entitled to fees?" again came up in the London Police Court on Tuesday, in connection with a liquor case. The Police Magistrate in refusing to disallow the claim said he would be very glad if some person would object in paying these fees some time in order to have the matter tested.

Thomas Johnston, a tramp, hailing from Hamilton, was arested at Port Hope for abusive language to a lady and sentenced to $10 fine or two months in goal. In passing out of the court he made some insolent remarks to the chief witness in the case, and the magistrate at once called him back and lengthened the term of imprisonment to three months.

The special committee appointed by the county council to deal with the erection of a new bridge across the Burnt river at the village of Kinmount met at the county treasurer's office, Lindsay, on Thursday of last week. The committee decided to accept the tender of Mr. Henry Walters to complete the whole work, including sheeting the amount being $2,503.

On Tuesday morning as Miss Ward of Bobcaygeon, about twelve years of age, was taking her father's dinner to him at Bick's shingle mill a man named Jas. Atchison, who was hanging around on the road to the mill, caught the girl in his arms and attempted to carry her into the woods close by. He was arrested by one of the constables and was sentenced to two months in the Lindsay gaol. Atchison has been living in the township of Harvey and has a wife and family.

It is with deep regret we record the death of our well-known townsman, Mr. Edward Wingate, which took place on the 1st inst., at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. T. Dunlop, Jr., on Tuesday morning of this week. Mr. Wingate's illness was short; though he had for a lengthy period been suffering from the symptoms which, after less than a week's confinement to his room, culminated in his death. He was well known, having lived here for over sixteen years; and by his kindly social qualities, his unaffected yet fervent religious character, and his uniform gentlemanly bearing, he had won the esteem of all classes of the community.—Cobourg World.

FARMERS AND MECHANICS.—If you wish to avoid great danger and trouble, besides a no small bill of expense, at this season of the year, you should take prompt steps to keep disease from your household. The system should be cleansed, blood purified, stomach and bowels regulated, and prepare and cure diseases arising from Spring malaria. We know of nothing that will so perfectly and surely do this as Electric Bitters, and at the trifling cost of fifty cents a bottle.—Exch. —Taylor & Macdonald, Agents.

Mr. John Marshall, a farmer of Manvers, with his wife and daughter met with a serious accident on their homeward journey from Lindsay, when a wheel of the baggy broke and the horse at the same instant made a sudden dash forward, throwing the occupants out in a heap on the road. Dr. Burrows being sent for was soon on the spot. He had them removed to Lindsay and called in the assistance of Dr. Kempt. On examination it was found that Mr. Marshall had two ribs broken, one in two places, besides having his shoulder injured; Mrs. Marshall had her shoulder injured, besides being injured internally; and Miss Marshall had her ankle sprained. All three were severely bruised and scratched. They are now doing well.

The Campbellford Herald says;—Another painful occurence transpired at the woollen mills buildings, on Saturday last, by which Mr. Garret Locklin will probably loose the sight of one eye. During the ascent of a quantity of mortar, the large bucket containing it became detached from the rope and fell with a tremendous dash on the floor below, spatting the mixture in all directions. Mr Locklin was standing near the bucket, and a lump of the mortar struck him in the eye, and coming in direct contact with the ball of that organ. The victim did not suffer to any great extent immediately after it happened, but Dr. McCrae, his medical adviser, thinks the eyesigut may be entirely destroyed.

Another attempt will be made at no distant day, to organize a lodge of Oddfellows in Campbellford. There are now resident here, eight members of the order, some of whom are well honored with degrees; and it is their cherished hope that an instution of this kind may find a foothold and flourish like a green bay tree. Several gentlemen have expressed their desire to indentify themselves with the new project, and it is very possible that the costs of organization may be easily met by a score or more of good members. The three-link society is one of the best, if not the best, benevolent institution in existence,—an order honored by honorable men, and seldom dishonored by the lower element of human nature. Herald.

"THE BEARE IS A BEASTE," says a quaint old book, published in London three centuries ago, "whose flesh is good for mankynd: his fat is good, with laudanum, to make an ointment to heale balde-headed men to receive the hayre agayne." We know of many "baldeheaded men" who would be glad to "receive the hayre agayne," but we do not desire to encourage them in a trial of bear's fat and laudanum. Far from it. We, however, do not hesitate to commend Dr. J. C. Ayer's & Co.'s Hair Vigor, which not only has the effect in some cases of making the hair grow on heads once bald, but cleans the scalp and restores gray and faded hair to its original color and vitality, imparting to it the glossiness and softness of youth. The evidences of its utility are too numerous and of too high a character to admit of any doubt. It required years of study and scientific experiment to decide upon the combination of ingredients that would accomplish what Ayer's Hair Vigor now does. The Interior, Chicago, Ill.

A Toronto clergyman travelling abroad writes from Caithness, Scotland, to a a friend: Yesterday I went to the farthest north church on the mainland to attend worship, the parish Church of Canisby. The minister was advised of my presence and sent for me to the 'Freswick pew,' where I was directed to sit, pleaded that he was unwell, having got out of bed to come to church. What could I do but 'don the gown and bands' and go to work. I am glad I preached in this quaint old church, and I am sure you will be pleased to hear it. By the way, the clergyman, the Rev. Mr. McPherson, told me that the Hon. Mr. Mowat, Premier of Ontario, wrote him from London, wishing to know when he would have his sacrament, as he wished to commune with God's people in the church of his fathers. Mr. McPherson answered they did so next Sabbath. Mr. Mowat hurried from London to Caithness, arrived at this hotel (John O'Groat's House) on Saturday, remained until Monday, and thus communed on Sunday with the people of Canisby. A man who does this has a heart in him. I don't know Mr. Mowat, but I must try to do so if I am spared to return to Toronto. Happy are the people who have such rulers."

On Tuesday last says the Bobcaygeon Independent, Jos. Muskrat met Mr. Cahill, of Enismore, in the river, in a canoe. Cahill asked him to have a drink out of a tin pail. They went together to the mouth of the river and camped there, Cahill supplying altogether about three quarts of whiskey. On Wednesday Muskrat came up to the village and met another Indian, named Kishego. Jos. wanted more whiskey, and induced Dr. Lloyd to go to a tavern and buy them a bottle. They took the bottle and the three drank it together, and Muskrat becoming exceedingly drunk was arrested by Constable Cheetham, and confined to the lock up. On Thursday evening he was brought before the Reeve, where he pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness, and made the foregoing statement, on the strength of this statement the Reeve issued warrants for the arrest of Dr. Lloyd and Mr. Cahill, and both appeared before the Beanch. Mr. Cahill was liberated on bail to appear before the Bench on the Thursday following, and Dr. Lloyd having pleaded guilty to the charge of supplying Indians with whiskey, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in Lindsay goal, and a find of $5, or in default of payment an additional month's imprisonment. The Indian Kishego, was summoned as a witness, and he corroborated the statement of Muskrat. On Monday last, the two prisoners were removed on board the steamer to Lindsay goal.

FRASERVILLE NEWS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

ROBBERY.—On Wednesday, Aug. 31st, the house belonging to Henry Nethercotte, Esq., of Fraserville, was visited by some person or persons unknown to the proprietor as yet. And some folk think that meddling with everything they see in a room is essential. Nevertheless, whoever the visitor may be, he quietly transferred $21.60 from a pocketbook he happened to see, to his own; them, we think, calmly took his departure. Mr. and Mrs. Nethercotte, together with family, were absent from home nearly all day. The perpetrator therefore had a gallant opportunity.

THE PRESBYTERIAN Church at Springville is nearly completed, and undoubtedly is a handsome structure, and will be opened the first Sabbath in October.

HARVEST is now at a close, and the agriculturists feel like having a thanksgiving day, nearly immediately, on account of the abundant crops. Although a great many of the young men pretend to be very swift binders, still none of them can as yet bind 11⅞ acres in one day.

MR. CHARLES HOPWOOD, recently of the firm of Goodfellow & Baptie, Springville, left Tuesday (30th) for Lindsay. During his stay with us his kind actions and gentlemanly manners have gained for him many warm friends, and they all unite in wishing him success in his new employment.

MR. T. WRIGHT and his brother Robert left here a short time ago for the great North-West. May their trip be a pleasant and profitable one.

REV. T. MANNING, B.A., of this place, will deliver a lecture in Bethany on Tuesday, 20th.

Principal Grant does not exactly throw cold water upon the speculators in town lots at Winnipeg, but he reminds them that these identical town lots have been covered with water at least three times since the beginning of the present century. What has happened before may happen again. A sudden rise in the Red and Assiniboine Rivers would quickly swamp the Chicago of the Northwest and destroy millions of dollars' worth of property. In 1852 there was a lake three feet deep where Winnipeg's main street now runs. The latest flood was in 1861. Ontario's experience is that spring freshets are more frequent and destructive after the country is cleared up and drained than before. Some other line of reasoning may be applicable to rivers running through a prairie country, but, if not, Winnipeg occupies a dangerous location.

F. Burrows, of Wilkesport, writes that he was cured of a very dangerous case of inflammation of the lungs, solely by the use of five bottles of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Feels great pleasure in recommending it to the public, as he had proved it (for many of the diseases it mentions to cure) though his friends, and in nearly every instance it was effectual.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Manhattan Feed!

—FOR—

HORSES, CATTLE, MILCH COWS, SHEEP AND PIGS.

IT is a source of health, because it keeps the organs in a natural healty tone. It acts as a relish, promotes perfect digestion, and purifies the blood, thereby keeping the coat in a free and glossy condition. TRY IT! BUY IT!

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

COSGROVE & SONS,

Office of
Prescott Brewing and Malting Co.
Prescott, Ont., May 3rd, 1881.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Yours etc., GEO. LABATT,
Manager P. B. & M. Co.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald. Agents,—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

JOHN HACKETT'S

Having developed in a few years from comparative obscurity into his present prominent position among the Dry Goods Houses of Peterborough. The firm of J. HACKETT has never offered any other inducements to his customers than close prices and square dealing, while the great majority of his opponents offer extra long credit and other imaginary instead of substantial advantages, the result being that CASH BUYERS and others who are independent naturally drift into buying from such a house as

JOHN HACKETT'S

while credit customers, who are trading beyond their means, naturally drift toward houses who give long credit easily, even if their prices are higher, and therefore the immense development in

JOHN HACKETT'S TRADE

during the last year or so, since good times set in, proves the business of the country is in a healthier state than it has been for many years, and that the five years of hard times have swept over the country like a great bush fire that was confined to the dry and rotten wood, leaving the healthy vigorous trees to start on, refreshed by the open spaces, and it is to be hoped that people will not soon forget the lessons taught by hard times, to trade within their means and live within their income

WATERWORKS AGAIN.

Mr. Gamble's Proposition.

A meeting was called by the Mayor on Monday afternoon to consider a proposition by a Mr. Gamble of New York, who has taken a strong interest in the question of supplying the sufferers of Peterborough with water for fire and domestic purposes, and there were present at the meeting among others, His worship in the chair ex-Councillor Denne, Councillors Menzies and Rutherford, Mr. Geo. Hilliard M.P., H. T. Strickland, W. Walsh, A. P. Poussette, Jno. McClelland, D. G. Hatton, and a few others. The Chairman read Mr. Gamble's proposition as follows:

MR. GAMBLE'S PROPOSITION.

Council to pass By-Law granting to James Gamble and those who may associate themselves with him in forming a corporate company, all the necessary privileges to dig trenches, lay pipes, and generally to use the streets for the purposes of an efficient supply of water for fire, public and domestic purposes. The Company shall provide such number of hydrants as the Council shall determine, for fire protection and for public purposes. The rental for such hydrants to be agreed with the Council, but not to exceed the maximum charge in other cities or towns in Ontario. The works to be completed by the 31st October, 1882. The Council to have the privilege of purchasing the works at a valuation to be determined by arbitration in the usual way at any time after ten years from the opening of the works. The Company's property to be exempt from taxation. The Company to have the right of supplying private dwellings, stores, warehouses, etc., with water, and to collect rental for the same at a tariff to be agreed on with the consumer.

In answer to a question, Mr. Gamble said the scheme would give fire pressure of 60 or 70 feet, and the cost would be from $60 to $70 per hydrant.

Mr. McClelland asked what part of the town would be served?

Mr. Gamble said they would lay down pipes wherever they could get customers.

Mr. McClelland asked how many hydrants would be put down?

The Mayor said that would have to be determined by the Council. The average cost, according to report, would be $50 a hydrant.

Mr. Denne asked on what principle they would propose to construct these works?

Mr. Gilbert said they would have the water from the various sites analysed and would select the best. They would send their engineer here and would depend upon his report.

Mr. Menzies thought it was the best proposition they had had yet. The company proposed to build the works with their own money, not to cost the town a cent, and in ten years, if the town found the works were paying, they could acquire them themselves at a valuation.

Mr. Gamble said he supposed if the works were not paying the town would not want them.

Mr. Rutherford said it would save the town an immense amount of trouble to get this matter off its hands in the manner indicated. He suggested that they should at once pass a resolution accepting this proposition.

Mr. McClelland said he should like to hear something of the details of the proposition, before committing the town to it. They should not jump at this offer like a fish at a bait. One scheme suggested 40 hydrants to supply the town, another 50, etc. If they made a bargain at all, they should have some definite understanding.

The Mayor said the hydrants would be paid for by local taxation.

Mr. Moore asked for information as to the capacity of the supply.

Mr Gamble said they would put down 12 inch mains and would make the supply ample.

Mr. Hilliard thought the system entered upon should be adapted for general service of the town.

The Mayor said as the supply would be paid for by local taxation people could manage that for themselves.

Mr. Hilliard said if Mr. Gamble did not see fit to give a water supply to the outlying parts of the town, where there would not be so much profit we would be bound hand and foot.

Mr. Rutherford said nobody would pay for water who did not use it.

Mr. Hilliard considered they should have the scheme mapped down so that people could understand it, as had been done by Mr. Romaine and others.

Mr. Denne considered the plan the most feasible one yet presented. If it did not work successfully the town would not have to pay anything for it.

Mr. Poussette said sixty hydrants at $50 each would cost $3,000 a year. This was the interest on a large sum of money.

Mr. Denne drew attention to the fact that they could not have water supplied for domestic purposes without sewerage, which would not cost less than $100,000. Had they considered who was going to pay for that?

Mr. Poussette said the question of sewerage was one which they must have to meet one time at any rate. He had no doubt Mr. Gamble could build waterworks cheaper than the town could do, but the question was would it not ultimately cost more than for the town to build it themselves.

Mr. W. H. Moore asked if it was proposed to allow water for sprinkling the streets, as public service.

Mr. Gamble said yes, and for every public purpose.

Mr. Strickland suggested that a large number of hydrants should be followed by a smaller cost per hydrant. He believed in a comprehensive system, that would be adequate to the future of the city—as it would become—and thought if reasonable arrangements were made Ashburnham would join in taking the hydrants and so lessen the cost to the town.

After some further discussion in which Mr. Poussette gave the council the very excellent advice, that they should themselves carry the responsibility which they are elected to take, and instead of asking the ratepayers to recommend a scheme to them they should be prepared to submit a scheme to the people, a motion was moved by Mr. Hilliard, seconded by Mr. Denne, that the Council prepare a by-law on the basis of Mr. Gamble's proposition, and carried, some eight or ten ratepayers being present.

THE LATE REV. E. MORROW, M. A

The Winnipeg Times says: "A worthy and highly respected citizen of Winnipeg was acknowledged to have passed away when it became known yesterday that the Rev. E. Morrow had died. It can scarcely be said that the news of his death was received with surprise; for it was many times thought during his lingering illness that he had but a short time to live. Few, indeed, thought when he came to Winnipeg five years ago this summer that he would survive the fall or the winter; and at no period since did he gain very greatly in strength so as to give his friends any ground of hope that he gained a much longer lease of life. During the present summer season it has been observed that he was growing gradually weaker. This fact was, for the most part, not apparent to himself; yet, all along he knew, and from time to time expressed himself, that he had not many years to look forward to. He generally took the most encouraging view of his case, and hoped, until within the last day or two, for at least a temporary recovery. His active mind was continually forming plans which he seemed desirous of living to accomplish; yet in his affliction he often looked forward to death as a happy release from his sufferings. His last moments were in accordance with this expectation. When he knew that the last messenger was coming, he was perfectly resigned and ready to go; and his departure was as peaceful as a falling into slumber. For two or three hours he lingered unconsciously between life and death, and then, without a struggle, he was gone. There was nothing to mark the moment of his departure except the fact that he had ceased to breathe.

Rev. E Morrow entered the ministry of the Methodist Church of Canada in Peterboro', Ontario, in 1862; and was engaged in that work until 1874, when the failure of his health required him to desist. The places with which his name stood connected as pastor were Havelock, Newcastle, Pickering, Madoc, Sidney, Consecon, Paris, Princeton, St. Thomas and Peterboro'. Previous to his entering the ministry he pursued a course of study in arts at Victoria College, Cobourg, where he received the degree of B. A. in 1862. In 1867 he received from the same University the degree of M. A.

ENNISMORE NEWS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

WEATHER NOTES FOR AUGUST.—Another August has now gone into oblivion, with the old adage that there never was an August without frost, which took place on the evenings of the 8th and 15th, but on the whole it has been a very hot month, being in the aggregate 55°. Twice the glass stood at 94° in the shade at 1 o'clock p.m., and twice at 96°. On the 30th at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, 96° in the shade; from 1 to 2 o'clock p.m., 103°; and at 4 o'clock p.m., 96° in the shade, and at sun-down 82°, which is undoubtedly a very hot day. Rain fell on 5 days only, making 1¾ inches of water.

BUSH FIRES are doing considerable harm in this township. The leaden hue of the atmosphere and heavy, rolling clouds of stifling smoke too plainly indicate the destructive element at work, not only here but in almost every other section of the country. About three weeks ago a fire starting on lot 8, con. 5, spread to a fearful extent, burning barns, fences, timber, and everything it its course it could consume, the heaviest sufferers being Maurice Brick, who had 150 acres rented from John Crough the barns, containing the whole of this year's crop, and a number of pigs being burned. No insurance on on either crop or buildings. W. Kelly, of Bridgenorth, barns and stable, with crop, reported only $200 insurance; also fences and standing timber. M. Sullivan's fences, bush and oats have suffered severely. Philip Crough, John Scollard and others have sustained a considerable amount of damage. Some of the parties have entered a suit against those supposed to have lighted the fire. A report was in circulation that the barn and house of Richard Cosgrieff was burned, but on enquiry I find it not true. Several other large and dangerous fires are slowly but surely doing their work of destruction, and should a gale spring up, which it may do at any moment, we may be prepared for fearful consequences, as everything is so dry.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT—POGUE ON THE RAMPAGE—CHURCH SEPARATION.

Owing to negligence in loading a G. J. R. timber train, a fearful accident occured here on the 31st, ult. The timber projecting from the ends of the cars caught the head of a brakeman named Couch while coupling, and instantly killed him. The body was conveyed to Belleville by the same train.

The following morning another sad and fatal accident took place in our village. Anderson, eldest son of Mr. J. H. Scriver, and other boys were taking the cows to the pasture field. One of the boys threw a stone which missing the cow struck Anderson on the head, and almost instantly killed him. Deceased was about 13 years of age, and was well liked by all.

On the night of the 2nd inst., one of our roughs, after boasting that he could fight any man in the village, was roughly handled by a man named Hill, who is a very quiet, inoffensive person but will not be imposed upon.

A public meeting of the members and adherents of the Presbyterian Church is announced for the 16th inst., to take into consideration the advisability of separating from Norwood.

IS DR. TANNER DEAD?

RUMOURED FATAL ACCIDENT TO THE FAMOUS FASTER.

According to the Frankfort correspondent of the London Standard, Dr. Tanner arrived in Amsterdam about a month ago, accompanied by his wife and two children, and put up at the Hotel Cornelius, remaining unnoticed by the whole continental press. For a week after his arrival in Amsterdam Dr. Tanner confined himself to his room in the hotel. It is reported that during this time he used to eat five or six meals a day with a ravenous appetite, besides consuming a large quantity of spirits. At length he informed the hotel keeper who he was, and said that he had come to see Dr. Croff. This physician had in several Dutch papers expressed disbelief in the genuineness of Dr. Tanner's well-known fast and declared the latter must have obtained nutriment by secret means. The object of Dr. Tanner in going to Amsterdam was to perform in Dr. Croff's house a fast similar to that which he had gone through in America last autumn. The wager was to be 50,000 francs or £2,000. Dr. Croff, who was away at the time Dr. Tanner reached Amsterdam, returned home on the 18th ult., and at once sent a messenger to the American, who had begun to grow impatient of the delay. Rejoiced to hear that Dr. Croff had at length called, Dr. Tanner ran out of his room to receive him, but in doing so missed his footing at the top of the stairs and fell to the bottom. The fall caused concussion of the brain, and other injuries, and the unfortunate faster breathed his last the very next day. The medical men of Amsterdam desired to open the body of Dr. Tanner, but to this Mrs. Tanner, in spite of all their entreaties and offers, would not consent. She however, agreed, to let the body be weighed, when it was found that its weight was only 108 pounds. It will be remembered that at the end of his fast Dr. Tanner only weighed ninety-six pounds.

THE BEST COUGH REMEDY.—FRO MRS. ROBERT TURNER, OF UNADILLA, N. Y:—"I can say with the utmost confidence that I think Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry the best cough remedy I have ever known, and believe I owe my present existence to its wonderful curative powers, having at one time been brought very low by a distressing cough, accompanied with spitting of blood, and other symptoms of that dread destroyer, Consumption. I tried many remedies without effect, until a resort to the Balsam was had, which, by the blessing of Divine Providence, soon restored me to health. The Balsam is now our resort whenever any of our family is attacked with coughs or colds, and it has never failed to give the desired relief. I keep constantly a supply on hand. During the past ten years I have influenced many persons to make use of this remedy, and always with the same success."

The Horticultural Show.

The annual show of the Horticultural Society, took place on Thursday last and was fairly well patronized, a large number of citizens visited the hall during the course of the evening. The exhibits were extensive and varied, and reflected the greatest credit on the skill and enterprise of those who contributed. The judges performed their work in a very able and impartial manner, and as we have not heard a single complaint of any of the awards, we may fairly let the prize list speak for itself:

IV.—THE VALUE OF A MANURE HEAP.

Too many opportunities cannot be taken of showing the Province what a large sum annually is thrown from every-body's stable every winter into the barn cellar, in the form of what we call farm-yard manure; that it is actual cash we are thus handling, more so indeed than the beef and mutton being raised at the same time, and as much so as the golden grain that lies so much at the root of man's daily wants. It will be a golden day indeed for this or any country when the manure heap receives as much respect as the bank account; better a big manure heap than a bank account any day for the farmer—the one he can use at all times, the other is but a source of annoyance at most times.

During the past winter I took particular note of what went to make the manure heap of this farm, and, in the spring, had it properly squared up, measured and weighed. The story opens on the 12th October, when we housed and began to feed the following animals, and it ends on 1st May, being therefore 200 days. Of course the number of animals varied to some extent, but taken all over the following were the average on hand during that period:

15 horses.
42 cattle, over two years old.
26 cattle, under two years old.
8 fattening cattle, over two years.
127 sheep, breeding.
23 sheep, under one year.
25 sheep, fattening.

256 head in all.

These ate, or otherwise disposed of, the following materials:

Hay	173,000 lbs.
Pea straw	37,000 "
Barley straw	23,000 "
Oat straw	45,000 "
Wheat straw	83,000 "
Corn stalks	18,000 "
Total fodder		385,000 lbs.
Mangold	276,000 lbs.
Turnips	800,000 "
Carrots	6,000 "
Total roots		1,076,000 lbs.
Oats	29,000 lbs.
Barley meal	20,000 "
Corn meal	25,000 "
Pea meal	33,000 "
Bran	40,000 "
Oilcake	3,000 "
"Thorley's food"	500 "
Total grain		150,500 lbs.
Gross quantity		1,611,500 lbs.

There was added directly to the manure heap, at various times:

2,000 lbs. of gypsum.
15,000 lbs. of materials from cellars, etc.

17,000 lbs.

So that in accounting for the whole, we have to speak of 1,629,500 lbs.

What became of these 1,611,500 lbs. of food? First we have to credit, or debit:

Extra weight on horses	1,100 lbs.
" " 42 cattle	2,500 "
Calves produced, as dropped	2,700 "
Extra weight on fattening cattle	2,800 "
" " on breeding sheep	1,600 "
Lambs produced	2,900 "
Extra weight on fattening sheep	1,400 "
Total extra flesh	15,000 "
Milk removed from cows	14,500 "
	29,500 lbs.

For easy calculation it will best to to reduce the 256 animals of all kinds and ages to a representative average; this, as near as possible, is 75 head of three-year old fattening steers, and with these let us now continue the enquiry into this manure heap.

These 75 cattle, breathed, perspired, retained, and voided the 1,611,500 lbs. of food, enumerated, during 200 days. We have already accounted for the "retained" by the various forms of flesh as above, and have yet to look for 1,582,000 lbs. In doing this it is necessary to explain that the water—pure water (which exists in every kind of food in whatever condition) is usually not reckoned as food proper in such calculations, valuable and no doubt indispensable as it is undoubtedly, and as the data by which we have to be guided in these calculations have been established upon the footing of first getting rid of this water. I therefore divide as follows:

		Water.	Food proper.
Fodder,	385,000 lbs. give..	57,750 and	327,250
Roots,	1,076 000 " ..	968,400 "	107,600
Grain	150,500 " ..	21,070 "	129,430
	1,611,500	1,047,220	564,280

And thirdly, it is found on an average of things, that every such animal as our selected 75 will

Evaporate and breath 87 % of "food proper."
Increase in weight, 6 % from "
Void, as manure, 87 % of "

100

Which therefore makes the following abstract:

Used in breathing and evaporation, 22 lbs. per head per day	321,600
Increased in weight, 1-25 per head per day	33,850
Voided as manure, 14 lbs. per head per day	208,830
As above	564,280

Allowing the actual 29,500 lbs. of flesh and milk to stand against the 33,830 lbs. of estimated increase as above, we have to deduct the "vital force" amount—breathing and evaporation—of 321,600 lbs., and manure quantity, 208,830, which leaves 1,051,572 lbs. still to be accounted for. The water of the food equals 1,047,220 lbs., and thus leaves a balance of 4,352 lbs., or just the difference between the two first items 29,500 and 33,852.

But the manure heap actually weighed	1,085,750
Deduct gypsum, cellar cleanings, etc. and bedding (75,000)	93,000
	972,750
Deduct also dry manure voided	208,830
	763,920
Deduct water voided with manure, estimated about 70 per cent. of 691,830, the total weight of animal droppings	483,000
	280,920

This quantity of 280, 920 lbs. extra in the manure heap has to be accounted for by (1) the retention, and (2) the replacement by liquid from tanks, of part of its own liquid, water largely, (3) by addition of water from snow, the heap being uncovered, and (4) less so much by fermentation and evaporation in the process of decay. This one-fourth difference is not large according to old country experience of loss by fermentation and decay, which is usuall one-third and even one-half less than the original weight, but still probably large under the circumstances. These circumstances were an even steady winter, as against an open irregular one, either here or in a more temperate climate. In our case, therefore, with continuous frost, the treading of cattle daily, solidifying and excluding air, the application of gypsum to regulate and retard decay and retain gases, together with the addition of snow, there cannot have been much loss by fermentation and evaporation; and indeed the heap itself said so when being cut up, as greenness was common, with the want of that dark cheesy consistency so well known in ripe farm-yard manure.

WHAT THEN IS THE VALUE OF THIS MANURE HEAP?

Here does the ordinary farmer view this query of the subject? He thinks a load, or say a ton, is worth $1, as got from city stables, and as he can haul two loads per day with one team, on an average of distances, the load is therefore worth $2.50. He cannot deny this because he does it, and at the same time many of our readers will agree it is a very common saying among farmers that farm-yard manure at home—home-made—is worth $2.50 per ton, because they cannot do without it—they must have it, and from what they know abstractly of its effects upon crops, they judge this figure to be a close estimate of its value.

There is but one other way of valuing this material:—Long experience, as obtained by accurate experiments upon many crops, has shown what is the worth of any particular form of manure or fertiliser under a variety of conditions, and thus the practical farmer any the scientist have now laid their heads together and fixed upon a commercial standard for most forms of fertiliser—whether superphosphate, gypsum, bone dust, farm-yard manure, or under the more specific titles of nitrogenous, phosphoric, and potash. In the same way we have come to know pretty exactly what certain animals under a variety of conditions do with the food they eat, and thus can tell what the average manure heap consists of. Building upon these facts, I now submit what may be called the "Commercial Value of our 1880-81 Manure Heap"—the materials having passed through the 75 cattle specified, in 200 days:

98	tons	Hay, @ $8	$816
101	"	Straw, of kinds, @ $3	303
144	"	Oats, @ $0.50	120
10	"	Barley meal, @ $6.25	65
13½	"	Corn meal, @ $7.50	98
16	"	Pea meal, @ $15	237
½	"	Thorley's food, @ $6 (estimated)	3
20	"	Bran, @ $14	280
1½	"	Oil cake, @ $25	30
3	"	Carrots, @ $1	3
125	"	Mangolds, @ $1.25	160
400	"	Turnips, @ $1	400
780½			$2,624

(Average $3.40 per ton.)

Assuming that these materials represent the average in all respects of Canadian practice for fattening purposes, it appears that every ton given as food is worth $2.55 after passing through the animal system; that the 1,470 cubic yards of the manure heap weighed 537 tons, which at farmers' valuation of $2.50, gives $1,342 as total value; that the commercial value of $2,204 is $1.60 more per ton than the farmer's; that each animal (of the 75 representatives), made, or was the means of making, seven tons of manure during the winter; that the value of such manure per head amounted to $18 by the farmer's valuation, and $29 according to commercial valuation; and that, under deduction of purchased materials, the 370 cultivated acres of the farm have given about 1½ ton of manure per acre per annum.

THE SOILING SYSTEM.

The following report, from the Stratford Beacon, of a discussion of the above subject at a meeting of the Avonmore Farmers' Club, will be of interest and probably of advantage to our agricultural readers:

Mr. J. G. Jopling considered the matter of soiling a very important one, and one that many farmers, particularly in the immediate neighborhood, had not given sufficient attention to. Whether it was wished to change the present system of farming or not, circumstances were forcing it. The uncertainty of spring crops for a number of years past made the sowing almost a forlorn hope, and the successive constant cropping was filling the land with thistles and weeds. And now that the main profits of the farms were produced from winter wheat, stock and dairying, it was only a simple matter of business detail to make the most of it. To grow wheat successfully and profitably it was necessary to feed the land by manuring and proper cultivation. To make money out of stock, equal care was needed in the management. In the State of New York many farmers were practicing soiling exclusively in preference to pasture. In Downie, however, he would not advocate more than a partial soiling system—a something to bridge over the hot summer season when the pasture failed. For soiling purposes land should be selected near the building. One of the earliest kinds of green feed was winter rye, but he would not advise its use, as cattle did not like it at first, having to acquire the taste, and in a few days after being ready to cut the straw became hard and woody. A mixture of oats, barley and vetches would come in sufficient early, to be followed in rotation by a patch of clover, which in a moist season would cut two or three times, and the mainstay—corn. It was simply astonishing the amount of food one acre of corn well cultivated would produce. A patch of mangolds sown thickly was a great assistance in raising calves. They could be thinned and the bottom leaves taken off continually throughout the summer. There were other kinds of green food grown for soiling purposes, such as lucerne, etc., but the kinds mentioned were sufficient for all practical purposes. Where stables were close, ill ventilated, and not arranged for convenience in feeding, temporary sheds could be built with roof to protect from sun and rain, and a passage in front to feed from. Feed thrown into pasture fields for cattle to trample on was very wasteful. Mr. Jopling cited a number of cases that had come under his observation—one of a Mr. Eddy, of Haldimand township, who for two successive years, with a plot of three acres sown with oats, peas and vetches, and corn, with five acres of pasture and a small piece of bush, kept a herd of seventeen cows till the harvest was off, making the highest average of milk produced by any dairy in a cheese factory of 700 cows. No doubt it took labor, but it was labor that would pay. Besides the direct benefit, each additional well kept animal a farmer keeps added to the manure pile, which in turn would grow wheat.

Mr. Thomas Steele followed, giving his own experience for a number of years, showing the many advantages of soiling. Two acres of green feed would save ten acres of pasture, the rent of which in itself would repay the labor. His practice was to haul in sufficient each evening to feed night and morning, in the stable. A cart or a rack fastened on a stone boat answered the purpose. He also, for a portion of each summer, fed his horses by cutting grass instead of pasturing. He closed by making an earnest appeal to those present who said they had no experience, to at least make a trial.

Mr. Duncan Graham said in regard to the labor, that it usually employed one person and frequently more on an ordinary farm to attend the cattle and bring them through the winter. If that paid, it would certainly pay to spend the two or three hours each day needed in soiling, if the advantages were equal to what had been shown. It certainly did not pay to pasture cattle on good improved land, seeded with timothy and clover.

WHAT AN OLD FARMER SAYS.—This is the advice of an old man who has tilled the soil for forty years. I am an old man, upwards of three score years, during two score of which I have all I need; do not owe a dollar; have given my children a good education, and when I am called away shall leave enough to keep the wolf away from the door. My experience has taught me that: One acre of land, well tilled and well prepared, produced more than two which received only the same amount of labor used on one. One cow, horse, mule, sheep or hog well fed is more profitable than two kept on the same amount necessary to keep one well. No farmer who buys oats, corn or wheat, fodder and hay, can keep the sheriff from the door to the end. The farmer who never reads the papers, sneers at book-farming and improvements, always has a leaky roof, poor stock, broken down fences, and always complains of bad "seasons." The farmer who is above his business and entrusts it to another to manage, soon has no business to attend to. The farmer whose habitual beverage is cold water is healthier, wealthier and wiser than he who does not refuse to drink.

SHEEP.—"Mr. Stone of Guelph, says:—'In the winter time the sheep are too much confined in this country; it would be better if they were allowed to be more in the open air. I would leave them outside and let them have plenty of exercise till the lambing season comes on. Our ram lambs last year, although they were allowed to run out of doors last winter did very well. In all these things I judge very much by the habits of the animals. In hard, dry, freezing weather the sheep like to be out in the snow, and I believe they are better to be outside than to be shut up. I do not feed turnips every day to the breeding ewes. Last year we stopped doing so and I think we had better luck. If we give them turnips we may feed them an odd one or two, but that is all. We give them bran sometimes. I think turnips are bad for breeding ewes if you allow them to eat all they can. I do not give them grain very often; but, about a week after lambing, we of course feed them turnips and grain (oats and peas) it wont hurt them.' Great many sheep have been spoiled in this country by poor feeding."

COAL-OIL IN THE POULTRY YARD.—I experimented with the above until I knew it would eradicate vermin of all kinds in or about poultry houses or upon poultry. The first publication of the fact called out much adverse criticism, some claiming that it would injure the fowls, others that it would kill them. All this I finally silenced by affirming that it might be applied on the head, under the wings, and, when feathered, on the fluff, etc., of poultry of any age, from two months old up. Since my last reported experiments I have been testing its further value to the poultryman. I cured, with kerosene alone, a fine pair of Partridge Cochins, which had the roup in its full virulence. With a soft rag or a small piece of sponge soaked in kerosene, carefully wipe the nostrils perfectly clean; then force a drop or so in each; now carefully sponge the head and eyes thoroughly; when this is properly done, give each full-grown bird one-third teaspoonful down the throat. This is not cruel; I know that soaking the eyes in kerosene will not cause so much pain as half a drop of alcohol, or alcoholic mixture put into each eye.—[William Horne, M.D., V.S.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised

THE ALEMBIC OF THE BODY.—The stomach is the alembic of the human system. In it those wondrous chemical changes take place which result in the transmutation of food into blood. When it is vigorous the necessary processes of digestion and assimilation go on uninterrupted, and the system is suitably nourished. When it is feeble or disordered, they are obstructed, and being in consequence ill supplied with blood of a vitalizing quality, the physical organism becomes week and feeble, the nerves suffer, the liver and bowels are semi-paralyzed, and appetite and sleep fail. These disastrous consequences may, however, be prevented, or remedied with the supreme stomachic and aperient. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE, a medicine of rare purity and efficacy, which reforms a disordered and repairs a weakened state of the digestive organs, overcomes biliousness, relieves the bowels when obstructed without straining or weakening them, and promotes the exit from the system of impurities which infect the blood, which cause serious organic maladies. No objectionable mineral contaminates it, and its value is not marred by a subsequent re-action prejudical to the general health. Far perferable is it to the ordinary nauseous drugs used to produce a similar effect, but which are frequently ineffective as well as unpleasant; nor is it a cheap and valueless medicine, puffed into existence. It is used for dyspepsia, biliousness, affections of the blood, kidney complaints, fanale weakness, lumbago, &c., and in all blood diseases is unequalled. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Love in Idleness.

By the Author of "LOVEDAY," "MAY'S HOLIDAY," &c.

As she passes, she draws the girl to her; and the two women stand thus before him with their arms round each other's waists. A charming picture they make as they stand there; Lady Winton in a black velvet costume, and glittering with diamonds—Fancy in her long soft white robes, her face hidden on her friend's shoulder.

For some moments Rob remains silent, battling with a grief that is threatening to overwhelm him. He is conscious that it is not in his power to recall Fancy unless she is willing to obey; but to leave him alone and desolate for ever! He raises his head, his face is deathly white.

"I understand," he murmurs faintly.

Then a fiercer mood descends upon him like a whirlwind, and saves him for the time from an utter collapse.

"Is this what you wish?" he says sternly, his voice and tone rousing Fancy at once to an active remonstrance. "Is this what you have been planning and contriving during my absence? That she should seek to take you from me does not surprise me; that you——" He hesitates, his voice trembling with emotion.

"I shall come back, Rob; it is only for a little time. Oh, do not look so sad! I shall indeed!"

"You will not," he says, the moment of weakness over again, and his voice steady and firm as ever; "because I would not have you. No; there shall be no compromise of that sort; if you leave me now it must be forever; you cannot belong to us both; you must choose once and for all—my home or hers."

"You are very cruel"—laying one little hand on his arm and trying to see into his bowed face—"if you really cared for me——"

He interrupts her, putting from him at the same time her hand.

"Do not speak of my love, for you can never understand what I suffer, or have suffered. A man's love is not lightly given or easily put aside. Would to Heaven I could forget you as quickly as you will cease to remember my words."

The hopeless bitterness of this avowal touches her deeply.

"I know you love me, or have loved me a thousand times better than I deserve," she says simply; "but there are many things about me—nay, even incidents in my life which you know nothing of, but which make it necessary that I should leave you for a time. There can be no need for my choice now to be a final one, and I cannot look upon it as such. In accepting for a little while Laura's offer of a home, I am thinking almost as much of you as of myself. I shall only be her guest; and when the time is over, I shall return to you, if you will let me, your child in every respect as before. I wish for no home, no guardianship but yours. It would break my heart to think that I should never see you again."

For a moment there is an absolute silence, then the man's voice breaks it.

"Fancy, have pity; come home with me for one week, one day. I cannot let you go—I cannot!"

There is the rustle of a woman's dress past him as Lady Winton leads Fancy from the room; the girl is crying piteously; and, had not Lady Winton thought of taking her away, the next moment would have seen her in Rob's arms, or at his feet; as it is, she suffers herself to be led away to be comforted and consoled, feeling all the time that she can never really be happy any more.

Rob looks up as the door closes softly; he is alone in the sweet warm solitude. Suddenly the meaning of the silence dawns upon him, and he rises and hastens to the door; the last refrain of a song sung by one of Lady Winton's guests reaches him in low passionate cadences as he enters the large dim hall:

"It was best to leave you thus, dear,
Best for you and best for me."

Fancy has made her choice.

* * * *

It is past midnight at Langley; the fire burns low on the hearth, and the lamp is slowly fading into the darkness; the rain splashes in windy gusts against the shutterless windows, and the atmosphere is already chill with the deathfulness of the expiring day. Robert Constant sits in his lonely dining-room, with his arms leaning on the table and his face hidden on them. He has sat thus for many hours, silent, immovable—ever since he came from Winton indeed, and sent Jenny off to bed with harsher words than she had ever heard from him in her life.

Fancy is gone, is lost, is as dead to him from this day as though the grave had actually closed over her, he thinks. What then remained to him of hope or will to fight against the misery of such a loss? He has felt the last touch of her hands, heard for the last time the sound of her voice, taken his last look at her youth and loveliness. Nothing remains of her now but her empty room, in which her ghost may sometimes sit to speak to him of a lost, but not forgotten, past.

It is a farewell to all the love and happiness of his life that Rob takes in these midnight hours; his agony is a mortal one, but his renunciation is complete and final.

For him, as for her, a new life begins. He will not stay in England, lest the thought of his misery should mar her happy brightness, or the knowledge of his lonely life seem a reproach to her, calling her back in some tender mood at duty's and not love's call. Yet once in the stillness and darkness a great cry breaks from him, "Heaven help me!"

CHAPTER V.

The gardens at Baden-Baden are crowded with gay loungers, fashionably dressed men, and still more fashionably dressed women. The band is playing, and gay laughter and merry voices blend with the enlivening strains. At the extreme end of one of the gardens is a solitary little walk, so far from the noise and music that it is generally deserted at this time of the evening. In the centre of it stand two people, a man and a woman; not lovers certainly, for the woman has been waiting alone there for nearly an hour, walking up and down, and passing to rest from time to time against the rude seat that is half hidden in the shadow of the thick evergreens. With a bitter sense of wrong and suffering, she has waited until her patience was almost deserted her. She is young, but so closely veiled that her face is not visible; her dress is black, but has more the appearance of belonging to a religious order than to any worldly fashion, and her slight figure looks as though it had hardly the strength to support its heavy folds.

Half an hour ago, the man joined her, and they have been talking ever since. When they met, he slightly raised his hat. She drew back her proffered hand but did not raise her veil, and then, in quick, fierce, broken English she opened the conversation, her exquisite voice faltering occasionally, but deep and passionate throughout.

Five years before Garth Calderon and Marion Darrell met in Rome. He was travelling partly on business, more for pleasure, and became enamoured of the young singer on the night of her debut on the operatic stage.

She had a magnificent voice and was beautiful as a dream. At that time she was engaged to be married to the Comte de Herbelot, an officer in the French Army, a man highly esteemed and worthily connected. Garth persuaded her to elope with him, promising to marry her when they reached Paris and were to be out of the way of the Comte's resentment. Her scruples once overcome, her absolute and confiding love carried her safely through this step. She had no ambition except for the ordinary life of a woman loving and loved, and, during her short professional career, she had distinguished herself by her gentleness, modesty, and irreproachable conduct. Her meeting with Garth Calderon and her sudden unreasoning love for him had been the turning-point and ruin of a life full of nobility and promise.

The Comte de Herbelot was seized with a fit of appoplexy, and died a week after her flight; and Garth, true to his promise, married her a month later in Paris.

His father, who was then ill, would not have heard of this mesalliance, and Garth exercised only ordinary prudence in keeping his marriage secret. But, when his father died, and he returned to London, he manifested no desire to make it public, and upon his next visit to Paris rather congratulated himself upon the close secrecy with which everything had been arranged.

The entireness of the love of the woman who, in a fatal hour, had fascinated, but had not won, his fickle heart began at last to weary him. Idolising him as she did, she saw nothing of his coldness or reserve. She lived on for a brief time, oblivious of everything but the engrossing passion that wrapped her in a fiery element of love and devotedness. While he, bored, tired, and desillusionne, thought of nothing but regaining the liberty he had lost, she poured out in lavish profusion the riches of a generous enthusiastic nature, only smiling a little to think how much deeper her love was than his.

At the end of a year, Garth was recalled to England by the death of his mother. Marion wished to accompany him; but he would not permit this. Business took him from Paris one, two, three months; then, one day, Marion stood in the cool little office of Messrs. Levine and Co., his Paris lawyers, and knew that she was betrayed and forsaken.

The lawyers were kindly and genuinely sorry for her. At her earnest protestation that she was their client's wife they smiled faintly, but did not contradict her. They spoke to her of the generosity of the man for whose sake she had given up friends, home, reputation, and position. They mentioned a sum of money to be paid her in monthly or yearly instalments, as she preferred, and claimed only for their liberal client that he should be left in peace so far as she was concerned.

Never to see him again! Already the love — nay, perhaps the husband of another, and money offered to her as a substitute for all she so madly loved! One need not wonder that, at one fell swoop, devotedness perished so far as Marion Calderon was concerned, and never revived; only a soulless, loveless, miserable woman came out from the terrible swoon into which she fell, upon hearing her fate, and passed, as in a hideous dream, from the lawyers' office through the streets of Paris to her home. In the first frenzy that succeded to this stupor she tried to destroy herself; failing in this, a settled melancholy prayed upon her, sinking deeper and deeper into despair, and ending in the long illness that had made her dependant upon the Sisters of Charity for a home. In their noble self-sacrificising lives she believed she saw a panacea for her own wretchedness and misery. She was not unknown to them, having been educated in their convent; and they regarded her determination to enter upon a religious life as the manifest will of Heaven.

Having arrived at this decision, there had come upon her a very madness to see this man again, to learn from his own lips of the loss of that love which she had so exultantly believed in. Years had passed since they had last parted; it might be that the time had come when the memory of the past could re-light the extinct fire among the ashes of to-day. Madness and folly indeed! For when love is over, little power have remembrances or sentiment over the heart that chafes and rebels against the piteous recollections; besides, in all probability a newer and stronger love is already contrasting its splendour with the Dead-Sea fruit of the earlier experience.

In this case it was actually so. Garth Calderon, for the first time in his life, was really in love, and not with the woman who called herself his wife. It had become almost easy to forget the existence of the bond that bound him to Marion, and it was particularly annoying to be reminded of it by every word that fell from her lips. Could he by any means have got out of this interview, he would have done so; but Marion had been firm in her insistance upon it. If he would not come to her, she would go to him, so she had unhesitatingly declared.

Her idea of retiring to a convent met with his full approval. Once received as a nun, she would be so far safe, and her secret would be confined to her sister and and confessor. He would make her a handsome present, thereby satisfying his conscience after a fashion, and then he would be free to live his life as he chose.

In thinking of this now a sigh escapes him; it is only when face to face with liberty that he feels how terrible the strain caused by the realization of his position has been.

"And so you consent to this?" she says, after a pause.

"Certainly; it is the only wise thing you have thought of doing."

"I shall not be likely to trouble you again after that."

"So much the better for both of us."

"For you—yes, I believe that," she interrupts. "But, Garth, do you never think of the dear old past days?"

There is a ring of passionate pain and supressed feeling in the voice that asks the question: the man shrugs his sholders and lights a cigar. Presently he rejoins:

"It was not to listen to any sentiment concerning the 'might-have-been,' that I have come here to-night. Heaven knows that in our case there was too much of that kind of thing for any practical happiness. Let us keep to facts, I beg of you. You wish to enter a convent—the convent at which you were educated; and the sisters are willing to receive you upon a certain sum of money being paid to them by your solicitor; considering that the sums which have been left for your disposal are not yet bestowed, it seems to me rather unnecessary to have recourse to this interview. You know very well that no reasonable request of yours would have been refused by my solicitor."

"But it was you I wanted to see," she says brokenly—"you, my husband, the man for whom I sinned and suffered so cruelly, the man to whom I loved so in the days you will not remember! Oh, yes, I know your old hatred to scenes and recriminations; but Heaven is my witness that when you lured me away from my home and friends, from him who had no fault beyond his too great love for one so unworthy as I proved to be, I loved you so truly, so passionately, that had you really given me love for love, as you swore, in those early days, I should have held the world well lost for your sake! Oh, I know what you will say, that you married me, made me your wife in secret, and relied upon my pride and love to conceal that fact from the world, to suffer the obloquy that your silence exposed me to, and when, having wearied of me, you deserted me, to accept your decision without hope or right to appeal! Women do such things, and I am but one among many. It was right—was just; Heaven punished my presumption in thinking that one could sin and be happy. I accept a lifelong remorse and sorrow in place of all you promised me. Yet, last week, when I sent for you, and to-day, when I met you"—her voice softening and trembling with intense tenderness—"I knew you had but to say one word, and I should follow you to the farthest ends of the earth, forgetting everything but the love which can never die!"

Up to this moment the lady has kept down her veil; now she raises it and throws it back over her head, her eyes sparkling with an unnatural feverish brilliancy, and two red spots gleaming on her pale sunken cheeks, Garth Calderon starts involuntarily at the sight of the ravages that grief and suffering have made in that once lovely face; her hair, black as a raven's wing when last he saw her, is now thickly streaked with gray.

"I am afraid you have been ill," he says, with more sympathy than he has so far manifested.

"I have been very ill," she replies.

"I wonder," he says, after an awkward pause, "that you never cared to return to the stage; I always expected to hear that you had done so."

"My voice left me at the time of my trouble."

"And yet you refused to allow me to help you! How have you been getting a living all this time?"

"You never cared to enquire before, or I might have thought you so far genuine in your desire to spare me the humiliation I have endured," she answers, pressing her arm tightly over her breast to keep back the sobs struggling for utterance. "Suffice it that I did not touch your money; I would have died first!"

"You were wrong in that: it was my duty to help you."

The two red spots died out of her cheeks, and her eyes remained downcast. His duty! And this is all that the man she so madly loves is prepared to offer her, this all the atonement that the past may ask!

Presently she raises her head and forces herself to be calm; a very torrent of wild despair is surging in her ready to break forth at a moment's warning.

"I taught music all day and every day," she says quietly, "until at last I become ill; and then the nuns received me into the hospital and nursed me; and gradually I began to understand why all this misery had come to me."

"Why should you speak so hopelessly of the future? The past has been bitter enough, Heaven knows; but you are young enough to look forward to many happy years if you care to do so."

"Garth!"

There is a sudden wonderful eagerness in the half-stifled voice that annoys him more than he can say; she seems determined still to misunderstand him. He hastens to explain exactly what he means. He binds himself, upon the honour of a gentleman, never to interfere with any life she may wish to live; a certain sum of money large enough to enable her to live in comfort shall yearly be paid to her; and she, on her part, is to remain an entire stranger to him. It does not take long to say all this—only a few moments, in fact, for the programme could not be simpler; but all the while he is speaking Garth Calderon knows he is signing the death-warrant of the woman before him, and he resents the knowledge as an additional and unnecessary burden of remorse. She turns from him and sinks down on to the solitary seat by the clump of evergreens; the faint strains of the band and the hum and confusion of voices and laughter reach her as in a strange unreal dream.

(To be continued.)

WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT IT.—One who has fairly tested Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, though prejudiced against proprietary medicines in general, writes—"I would not rest over night without this reliable remedy for sudden attacks of Cholic, Cramps and Cholera Morbus so prevalent in the summer season, I keep a bottle ready at hand." 36-2t

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 60c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

Grangers, Day.—On September the 14th the Grangers will have a big time in Toronto. Special rates of travel have been announced, and all will be welcomed to the Industrial Exhibition.

The Band.—At the complementary benefit to the Band on Tuesday evening the attendance was large as it deserved to be, and the pecuniary results were we are glad to know, most satisfactory.

Just Received.—New Black Cash meres, Black Bunting Prints, New Tapestry Carpets, and Lace Curtains, New Boots and Shoes, also a splendid lot of New Tweed Suits for men and boys. W. J. Wallace, Lakefield. 20-tf

For Winnipeg.—On Monday, Messrs G. A. Morrison, T. Morrow and W. A. Morrow left for Winnipeg—the former to engage in business, and the latter called thither by the death of their brother, the late Rev. E. Morrow.

New System of Photography.—By reference to our advertising columns it will be observed that Mr. Esterbrook will in a few days introduce into in his studio the new system of portrait photography as invented by the celebrated Swan, of London England.

Rock Island Boots.—Messrs. R. Stenson & Son have just received several cases of Rock Island Boots, which are marked down to bottom prices. Full stock in all other departments, selling extremely cheap. Call and see for yourself. 36-tf.

Hymenial.—On Tuesday afternoon another sacrifice was offered to "adorable woman" in the marriage of Mr. Donald Edwards with Miss Lucy Cottingham, daughter of the late Capt. Cottingham. We wish the newly wedded couple all possible happiness in their journey through life.

The School.—The Public Schools of the town opened on Thursday, the 1st inst, with a large attendance of pupils there being in the Central School 452. W. Ward 190. S. Ward, 181, in all 823, but in consequence of the extreme heat the attendance has fallen off fully one third.

Confirmation.—The Bishop of Toronto will administer this Apostolic rite at St. Luke's Church, on Sunday next, the 11th of September, at 7 p.m. The Bishop is also expected to preach on the occasion, and will address the candidates previous to the "laying on of hands." The public are cordially invited to be present.

An Old Friend.—Mr. John Langton late Dominion Auditor, and many years ago a representative for this County in Parliament, is on a visit to this section of the County. Mr. Langton was the first settler in the township of Fenelon, and despite his advanced age is still hale and, hearty, and bids fair to become a centenarian.

An Advanced Old Age.—On Sunday last the township of Otonabee lost one of its earliest settlers in the death of the late James Borland, who died on that day at the advanced age of 85 years and five months, at his home at Villiers. Deceased was buried on Tuesday and the large cortege which followed his remains to their last resting place bore testimony to his worth and the esteem in which he was held by the community in which he had lived for so many years.

Funeral Sermon.—On Sunday Rev. Mr. Shaw improved the occasion of the death of the late Mr. Morrow, in the George Street Methodist Church in a most eloquent and touching funeral sermon. He spoke highly from some personal acquaintance of the Christian virtues of the late Mr. Morrow, who by a life of piety had been enabled to confront death without any pang but sympathy for the sorrow of those who were left to mourn their temporal loss, but his eternal gain.

Enterprise. Monday evening's Review congratulates its readers that the lengthy reports published in the Mail and Globe, of the Saturday night tragedy were supplied by the Review reporters. Considering that the enterprise of the reporters brought the reports for which the Review proprietors pay the pipers, to the town, some five hours before its appearance in our contemporary, we don't exactly see what it has to congratulate them on.

Business Opening.—On Saturday Messrs. Giroux and Sullivan opened their doors to the public, and judging by the extent of the patronage extended to them by purchasers, the opening augurs well for the future. The new store is spacious, well lighted, elegantly fitted up, and stocked in every department, to the best advantage. The reputation of Peterborough merchants for enterprise and style, in their business is not likely to suffer at the hands of Messrs. Giroux & Sullivan and we wish the new firm every success.

Fatal Accident at Hastings.—On Thursday morning last, while Andersen Scriver, a lad of 12 years old, son of J. H. Scriver, and another boy named Doris, were driving a cow to pasture, the animal attempted to run from them. Young Scriever tried to get before her, and while doing so Doris threw a stone at the cow, but it accidentally hit young Scriever on the head, when he fell and instantly expired, without uttering a word. The parents have the sympathy of the public in their sad bereavement.

I. O. O. F.—Some members of the Order of Oddfellow in a neighboring city claim that it is descended from a certain secret society which existed about 1, 100 years before the commencement of the Christian era. It was established among the Israelitish captives in Babylon, and enabled them to confer with each other by means of signs and passwords, without arousing the suspicions of their captors. Tradition says that by this means the Jews managed to keep alive their faith; and when they obtained their freedom this secret society was maintained, and initiatory rites were developed.

Fire Insurance.—The long list of sufferers by fire in the adjoining county offers a suggestion to farmers and others, who have not yet adopted the safeguard which insurance offers, upon which they would do well to act. No prudent man should allow his property whether stock, buildings or the contents of his house to go for a single day without the protection of insurance, and the rates now offered by the most reliable companies are so low that no one can plead inability to shelter himself from possible disaster. We refer our readers to the list of companies in which risks may be taken, at the office of Mr. George A. Cox, who himself needs neither introduction nor recommendation to the public.

A Reward of Merit.—For some time past a gentleman of this town has been harassed by anonymous letters, the source of which he found a difficulty in arriving at. Finally a private letter from a lady to her fiancee at Lakefield was taken from the post office by a person who had no right to it, and this was forwarded to the gentleman refered to with a most offensive epistle. Determined to get at the bottom of the matter, the party advertised the letter, engaged detectives to ferret the matter out, and finally was able to fix upon the writer. The latter came to town yesterday to "hush the matter up," by apologizing, and his apology was accepted upon his actually eating the sheet of foolscap upon which his letter was written. When the performance was half over the victim implored to be let off from swallowing the remainder, but the outraged recipient of anonymous persecution aided his digestion by the exhibition of a raw-hide which had been procured for a more warlike purpose. The senders of anonymous letters to private individuals will be prudent to take warning, since it only requires a little time and expense to ferret them out. The next offender will not be so easily let off, as to get free by the mastication of his own letter.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

On Tuesday evening Mr. P. Rudkins, Secretary of the Lacrosse Club, was the recipient of a surprise, and a very handsome present as well. It having become known to the members of the club, that Mr. Rudkins was about to remove to Toronto to enter upon a course of study for the priesthood, they decided upon giving him a slight souvenir of his connection with the club, and this took the shape of a very elegant and costly writing-desk containing a purse of $50. The following is the address:

To P Rudkins, Esq.

Dear Sir,—Your friends of the Peterboro' Lacrosse Club, of which you have filled the duties of Secretary for some time past with such zeal and industry, and particularly the playing members of the Club among whom you have ever held a foremost place both in their esteem and in the active work of many a well won victory, have learned with deep regret that the necessary preparation for your future life necessitates your leaving town, and abandoning the Club, of which you have been so active a member, we request your acceptance of the accompanying writing-desk and the purse contained therein, as a modest testimony of your personal work, and your services as a player and an official of the Club. We beg to tender you our most earnest wishes for your future success in life and our hope that you may live to become a distinguished ornament of the noble profession which you have chosen to devote your life.

Mr. Rudkins made a brief and appropriate reply. Mr. R. H. Fortye was elected Secretary in Mr Rudkins place. Mr. Rudkins has been one of the strongest players of the Club, and will be missed in the field.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Joseph Flavelle of Peterboro, was in town on Wednesday last. He pleasantly replied to the greetings of numerous friends and favored us with a piquant summary of his recent European trip. Mr. Flavelle seems to have been rather close to several crowned heads and saw many titled people in the flesh, but comes back with his democratic convictions as strong as ever. He was presented upon his arrival home at Peterboro' with a cordial address of welcome from the members of his bible class. Mr. Flavelle's travels will give him a flow of anecdote and incident which will often serve to point a moral or adorn a tale.—Lindsay Post.

Miss Keele of Peterborough, has been appointed to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Miss Sargent. Miss Keele taught in Norwood some years ago and judging from the success which attended her efforts at that time, we have every confidence that she will give a good account of herself.—Norwood Register.

Princess Maud, the youngest daughter of the Prince of Wales, is described as a musical genius. Although only twelve years old, she shows extraordinary vocal powers, and is so devoted and persistent a student of music that her parents have been obliged to restrain her enthusiasm.

Hon. Alex. and Mrs. Mackenzie have returned home from their trip to the Old Country. The many friends of the hon. gentleman will be grad to learn that he has completely recovered his health.

Hon. C. F. Fraser was elected a Bencher on Friday last in the room of the late W. H. Scott M. P. P.

WATERWORKS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

Three or four men in this town seem to think that the rest of the people do not know what is good for themselves. They tell us that we are dying for the want of water, and they recommend us either to spend a large sum of money in bringing for our use the water of the river Otonabee, or else to let somebody else do it for us. It appears that this last scheme is what our Councillors are about to enter into. By giving the work to a private contractor they feel that they can escape letting the matter go before the ratepayers. In this way they hope to force waterworks upon the town, whether we want them or not. A short time ago it was suggested that a cheap, limited system of waterworks, for fire purposes only, be provided for the central part of the town, capable of being extended as the wants of the people required. But no sooner was this plan started than forthwith Mr. Rutherford and Mr. Trout and one or two others came forward and virtually said that we did not know what we wanted, and they undertook to enlighten our understanding by telling us that we must enter upon a large and expensive scheme, which would give us water to drink and water for some of the gentlemen's lawns, as well as for fire purposes. They kindly told us that we should not use water out of our wells, because it was unhealthy, but they said that we would be all right if we spent a large sum of money in bringing water from Mr. Hilliard's mill dam, or from some other equally unfit place. The thing has now got into another shape. Now we are told that waterworks can be constructed by private individuals, and so they won't cost the town anything; that the water will be brought through the streets and all we have to do is to pay for the use of it, and I have heard it estimated that three thousand dollars a year will cover our outlay in this respect. Now this sum represents a capital of fifty thousand dollars, and I should like to know what difference it can make to us pecuniarly whether we build the works ourselves at this cost, paying interest on our bonds, or whether we pay somebody else the same interest. If we pay interest on the whole outlay, do we not virtually pay for the works. Many people do not see it in this light, but the fact remains the same. But there is another thing to be considered. The construction of waterworks requires the construction of sewerage also. As I understand the proposition, this contractor builds the waterworks, leaving us to construct the other. The cost of sewerage will be nearly as much as waterworks. If this be so, then we must pay the interest on a hundred thousand dollars instead of fifty thousand. Let us understand our position rightly. Now, I ask, are the ratepayers of the town going to allow themselves to be dragged blindly and unresistingly into this costly and imaginary undertaking. They had better consider the matter quickly, and if they decide in the negative, then they must speak out and let their minds be known before it is too late—that is, before the Council meets again. If we build the work we will own them. If we pay this contractor the interest on his outlay, we save no money, and we give him the works into the bargain. Would that be a profitable speculation for the town? If waterworks are to be undertaken, first leave it to the ratepayers to decide. They are the parties interested. They have to pay the expense, and they alone must say whether we shall have them or not. And I hope that the Councillors will not so far forget their duty, and so far insult and injure their constituents as to place this great expense upon the people without their consent first had and obtained.

A RATEPAYER.

W. SARGENT VS. NORWOOD SCHOOL BOARD.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

MR. EDITOR,—As your correspondent from Norwood would like to lead the public to believe that I was persecuting the Norwood School Board, and that I stand alone in this matter, and that public opinion is all with the Board, and as my name has appeared in your paper several times in connection therewith, you will greatly oblige by inserting the attached, commencing with the Magistrate's trial and ending with the Division Court suit, without any comments from me except what is necessary to make the connections:

THE EVIDENCE BEFORE THE MAGISTRATE COURT.

At the Town Hall, Norwood, on Wednesday 4th May, 1881, Charles J. Dutton stands charged by William Sargent, before John Brackenridge, Hugh Drain, Thomas Rork and Porter Preston, Justices of the Peace, with having at the Public School at Norwood on the 13th day of April last past, assaulted, beat and torn the clothes of Weldon Sargent, and on being asked what he had to say in answer to the said charge, answered not guilty.

WILLIAM SARGENT, sworn, says,—On the evening of the 13th April last past, my son, Weldon Sargent, came home and said that Mr. Dutton, the teacher, had beat him. I then went to see Mr. Dutton and asked him why he had beaten my boy so unmercifully. His answer to me was that he was master of the school, that he did thrash the boy and that if he did not get order he would force it. He also said he had torn the boy's clothes, and offered me no apology. On the following morning I went to my son's bedroom and examined his shoulders and found them discolored and the boy said they were intensely sore.

Cross examined by T. M. Grover, Esq., Counsel for the defendant,—It was about five o'clock on the evening of the 13th when my boy was seen by me first. I found his clothes torn and I knew he was hurt. I did not examine him myself but his mother did. Mr. Dutton admitted to me having thrashed my boy and torn his clothes, and said his reason for so doing was that he either would not or could not answer a certain question. My son said he had done nothing to merit the punishment he got. I got a notice yesterday at noon to attend a meeting of the School Board relative to expelling my son from the school.

WELDON SARGENT, sworn, says,—On the 13th April last past, while we were at our grammar class, W. Hetherington and I were together. Something went wrong. I pinched Hetherington. He, Hetherington, then kicked me under the desk. Mr. Dutton then asked me to repeat the lesson. I did so as far as I could; the last of it I did not know. He, the master, then asked me what I was doing. I did not like to tell. He then asked me to stand up. I did so. He then asked me again what I was doing. I made no answer. He kept me standing till noon, and asked me to stay after four o'clock in the evening with him. I remained after the school was dismissed. The master, Mr. Dutton, then asked me what I was doing in the forenoon when I was required to stand up. I told him then what I had been doing. He asked me if it would not have been as easy to have told him this in the forenoon. My answer was I did not know, but supposed it would, but that I did not like to stand up before the scholars and tell what happened. He then said I was still keeping to the lie, and that he would give me six slaps on each hand. I said I did not deserve a whipping any more than Hetherington. He then told me to hold out my hand. I put them in my pockets. He then tried to unbutton my coat. I kept buttoning it up as fast as I could. He then took the taws to me and struck me with them; he found the leather end did not hurt me much. He then took the leather end in his hand and struck me across the shoulders repeatedly as much as six times. He then asked me if I had enough, and if I would come out from behind the desk. I said no. He then caught hold of me and tried to jerk me out, but failed to do so. I said I could stand all he could give me, and that he would get his pay for it. He then got over to the other side of the desk when I jumped out and got away. The handle of the taws might be six or eight inches in length by three-fourths of an inch in diameter, made of wood. The leather part was about one foot long. There was no trouble between the teacher and myself up to that time.

Cross-examined.—I remained in my seat at the dismissal of the school. The teacher asked me to come over to where he was. I stood up near the teacher's desk. On being asked I told him what had happened between Hetherington and myself. He, the teacher, afterwards came out from his desk and asked me to hold out my hand and receive the punishment, namely, six slaps on each hand. After I got out of the school I told the boys I was not very badly hurt. I went straight home and told my mother and also my father as soon as I saw him. How I got back among the seats I do not know. The master seemed to be angry and turned white. Had the other boy been there with me I would have taken my punishment along with him. The slaps I got with the leather end of the taws raised ridges on my hand. I have been reprimanded before by Mr. Dutton. I was sent back home once for an excuse for being too late. The letter put in as evidence and marked No. 1. is the excuse I took to Mr. Dutton, and was given to me by my sister, and is in her handwriting. I got a notice yesterday at noon to attend a meeting of the school board relative to my being suspended or expelled from school. Several of the school boys told me when I came out of the school that they would go back with me and help me to thrash the master.

JAMES RADDEN, sworn, says, On the morning of the 14th April I went at the complainant's request to examine the injuries he said his son had received from the teacher, Mr. Dutton, the previous day at school. I found both shoulder blades discolored and very red, and two other marks on his right arm. One of the marks on the shoulder blade was turning green, or purple. It would take a pretty heavy blow to make the marks left on the boy through his clothes. The marks had not been made with a lash.

DR. MASSIE, sworn, says, On Good Friday, the 15th April last, Mr. Sargent brought his boy to my office. I examined him and found a mark on the left shoulder blade discolored, on the right there was a smaller mark and lighter in color. There were other marks or bruises on the right arm; but not distinct. My opinion is that it was some hard substance produced those marks. It would require a sharp blow to produce the effect I saw through clothing.

FOR THE DEFENCE.

C. J. DUTTON, sworn, says,—I am teacher in the Norwood Public School. I noticed Weldon Sargent on the 13th April last past, doing something. I enquired several times what he was doing and still received no answer. He failed to repeat the lesson. I then required him to stand up. He stood up and then sat down on the corner of his desk. I caused him to leave the desk; but he got back there again. He may have stood on the floor about 30 minutes in all. This was in the forenoon. After four o'clock, after considerable coaxing, he, Weldon Sargent, told me he had been striking Wm. Hetherington. I here proposed his punishment. He said he would not hold out his hand. I then punished him across the shoulders. I struck no blows only to punish him for this offence. The blows were not severe. The marks sworn to by Wm. Sargent, Jas. Radden, and Dr Massie could not have been made by me. I never struck the boy on the right shoulder at all.

Cross examined by William Sargent,—I was not in a passion when I punished your boy. I was somewhat excited. I don't admit having torn the boy's clothes.

S. P. FORD, M. D., sworn, says, I know nothing of the marks which have been sworn to as found on Weldon Sargent. I have heard Dr. Massie's evidence read. It will take a very light blow to produce a great deal of discoloration.

IN REBUTTAL.

LAMBERT VINCENT, sworn, says, After the dismissal of the school on the evening of the 13th April last past, I saw the teacher, Mr. Dutton, whipping Weldon Sargent across the shoulders with the butt end of his taws. The school door was open. I was standing at the gate post. He, Mr. Dutton, had the leather in his hand.

Cross examined by T. M. Grover, Esq.,—It was in the middle room and the door was open. I stood at the middle gate. Fred Stephenson was with me.

VERDICT.

We adjudge that Charles J. Dutton for this his offence forfeit and pay the sum of fifty cents as penalty, and the further sum of five dollars and fifty cents as costs, to be paid forthwith and in event of no sufficient distress to be imprisoned in the common gaol at Peterborough for the space of ten days.

PORTER PRESTON, J. P.,
HUGH DRAIN, J. P.,
JOHN BRACKENRIDGE, J. P.

Thomas Rork, J. P. dissenting.

At the earnest request of the defendant the above case was adjourned from the 25th April till 4th May, in order to allow the Norwood Board of High and Public School Trustees to deal with the matter, and if possible settle the matter without recourse to law.

After the adjournment of the Magistrate Court on the 25th April, Mr. Dutton writes his complaint against the boy, and twelve days after he had beaten him. The boy did not return to school again.

MR. DUTTON'S COMPLAINT TO THE BOARD.

"NORWOOD, April 23rd, 1881.

"I am, gentlemen,
"Your obedient servant,

RAILWAY NEWS.

The Perth Courier says: The Toronto & Ottawa railway has been located about half way to Franktown from Perth, and the route is nearly as level as a floor. After going this far, the party turned back to Arden, west of Sharbot Lake, for the purpose of surveying a tract which was submerged when there earlier in the season. When this is completed, which is expected to be in a few days, they will return and resume the location survey eastward to Franktown and Manotic.

The Toronto & Ottawa R. R. company are pushing ahead as fast as they can, and are now making permanent investments all along the line. On Tuesday their agent, Mr. J. B. Campbell, of Port Perry, bought from Mr. John Thornton four acres of land at the northern end of Wilson-st. for $1000, for track, station buildings, sidings, &c. A plan of the road west from Perth through this county was filed with Mr. E. G. Mallock, Clerk of the Peace, on Tuesday, and shows that the two blocks on the other side of the street, in Wellandville, have also been appropriated.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC RETURNS.—The Traffic Returns of the railways for the week ending Aug. 30th, 1881, are as follows:

MIDLAND RAILWAY.—Passengers and Mails, $3,923,79; Freight, $10,434.14; total, $14,357.93 as compared with $11,153.59 for the corresponding week of 1880 being an increase of $3,204.34; and the aggregate traffic to date is $236,295.07, being an increase of $32,971.20 over 1880.

GRAND JUNCTION RAILWAY.—Passengers and Mails, $1,025.53; Freight, $2,281.17; total, $3,306.70, as compared with $1,047.26 for the corresponding week of 1880, being an increase of $2,259.44; and the aggregate traffic from 1st June to date is $28,936.13, being an increase of $17,930.75 over 1880.

TEMPERANCE INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.—Rev. Dr. McCauly, of Columbia, Pa., called on us on Tuesday. He is here on business in connection with the Temperance Mutual Benefit Association of Canada. This Company affords temperance men the advantage of their own habit of life, and greatly increased longevity, in the matter of insurance, which is more than thirty per cent. It affords each policyholder insurance at the exact cost, save the membership fee, and afterwards for incidental expenses. Thus a man of 40 years of age becoming a member of this association is guaranted $1,000 for about $8.10 per year, and $2:00 a year afterwards for running expenses. This plan of assurance for total abstainers is being well received. Clause 6 of the circular issued by the Company says every married woman ought to be a member of this Association, and see that her husband is, also. If he neglect such a duty, she can obtain a certificate for him. The benefits will be secured to her and her children against any claims of creditors of her husband. This Company do not divide their members into classes and divisions, as co-operative companies do, which requires a much greater number of members before securing a full benefit, but put them all in one class, levying the mortuary assessments according to the respective ages of the members when their certificates are issued: the number of assessments will not increase after the membership reaches two thousand. Such is the plan of this association that, should any number of members die as membership increases, their expenses will not be increased, as increased membership is always liable to assessment, and in proportion to its increase the assessments of the Company decrease.

EDITORAL NOTES.

Mr. Blake's tour of the Maritime Provinces is at an end and he is on his way home.

We are afraid the aquatic glory will depart from the Queen City with the retirement of Hanlan from the oar.

Yellow fever is committing dreadful havoc among the French in Senegal, the Governor and many others connected with the administration having already succumbed. The deaths number 350.

We cordially agree with the Globe when it says that "Mr. Mackenzie's true-hearted patriotism makes his welcome home a warm one from men of all classes and parties.

It is thought that Capt. Howgate, who got the better of the United States Government to the extent of a couple of hundred thousand dollars, has taken refuge in Canada.

The City Council of Winnipeg have ratified the by-law granting $200,000 to the Syndicate, and the necessary instrument is being executed by the Company and city to carry out the pledges regarding work-shops, station and round-house, which are now being commenced.

And now we are told that the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George is to be conferred upon Sir John A. Macdonald for his political services to the Dominion. Is that the real object, or is it to distinguish him from Sir Hector Langevin?

It is currently stated that Sir George Elliott, who succeeded the other day in wresting North Durham from the Liberals, has expended £80,000 during the last twelve years in contesting that seat. It was high time such a lavish expenditure of money had been "recouped." But that is the way the "reactions" against the Gladstone regime are brought about.

Rev. Dr. Grant notices the scarcity of women and children in many of the congregations he preaches to in the North-west. He is greeted by those who hail from all parts of Canada. The streets of Winnipeg and other North-west places show all nationalities. The amalgamation, he thinks, will develop a distinct Canadian character, free from petty Provincialism.

The Liberals of Peterborough should make a note of their brethern in Napanee and go and do likewise. The Reformers of Lennox are determined not to be caught napping as they were in 1878, but on the contrary to leave no stone unturned to secure success for 1883, hence they have taken time by the forelock in the matter of organization with reference to both the Provincial and Dominion elections.

Ottawa Free Press:—At Shediac the Finance Minister announced that the government would like to remove the duty on tea and coffee. As the object for which the tax war imposed has not been and cannot be attained by it, the removal of the duty is not so much a concession to a popular demand as it is an admission of failure, and as such it will be accepted.

The revenue of India for the past year was four millions greater than calculated in last year's budget, due to opium. The expenditure was ten millions greater than calculated, owing to the Afghan war. Net result, six millions to the bad on the books, but from a moral point of view at least fourteen millions worse than last year. Another sad result of the useless Afghan war is the postponement of the abolition of the opium revenue.

After clearly exposing the mis-statements concerning Mr. Blake's visit to Prince Edward Island, the Charlottetown Patriot says:—"Honest Conservatives who have said to the writer that they had no reason to complain of the way in which Mr. Blake, and his friends treated the members of the government in their speeches, must conclude that if a prize were to be given to the champion liar of the Dominion, it must be awarded to the Toronto Mail."

When Mr. Mackenzie was leader of the Reform party and Mr. Blake was a humble follower, but was looked upon as an available successor in case of a change the Mail abused Mr. Mackenzie like a pickpocket and did every but tear his breeches, at the same time taking care to belaud Mr. Blake. Now that Mr. Blake is leader and Mr. Mackenzie is a humble follower, it abuses Mr. Blake and tears his breeches, at the same time buttering up Mr. Mackenzie. Toronto Telegram.

The sick President has been removed from the White House at Washington to Long Branch, the noted sea-bathing resort, and a place of undoubted healthiness. His physicians were unanimous in their opinion that the heat and malaria of Washington would kill him, if his wound did not, and that his only chance of life lay in his removal to a healthier locality. The President bore the journey well, though the heat was oppressive, and now that the change is made, it is hoped, though faintly, that his recovery will follow, and will date from this time. His own feeling is one of intense relief for the change.

The annual statement of the Canada Life Assurance Company shows how prosperous an institution it is, and its popularity with the public may be judged from the fact that no less than $4,157,185 was added in new assurances last year. Three points in the report are worthy of special mention. The Company refused undesirable lives to the extent of $400,000 last year; they paid all the death claims out of interest on investments; and in addition to 15 per cent profits paid durthe year, the assets increased $249,678, the total assets being $4,569,000. The management of the Canada Life is certainly in the best of hands.

The Tory organs stated recently that Sir Albert Smith was not prepared to follow Mr. Blake, and that he would retire from politics before next election. But Sir Albert has nipped the canard in the bud. At a recent mass meeting to hear Mr. Blake, Sir Albert announced, amid loud cheering, that he would again be a candidate for Westmoreland. As regarded the Syndicate bargain, he proved that, taking the showing of the Government, the millions of money thrown away on the railway were so enormous that he did not believe the country would ever forgive so great a crime. Sir Albert, it would appear, is still a power in Nova Scotia.

Toronto Telegram:—"People are beginning to grow weary of hearing that the Princess Louise is about to return to Canada. If she wants to return to Canada why does she not return and be done with it? Certainly no one can have any interest in hindering her, just as the great mass of the people of Canada are unconcerned in her returning. Whatever may be said of the treatment Her Royal Highness received in Canada during the brief time she honored the natives by being here, it cannot be denied that wherever she went she was treated with the utmost courtesy and respect, so that the people will have nothing to reproach themselves with if she never comes back. To be sure, there was a good deal of flunkeyism, but flunkyism is not confined to Canada. The truth is, as we are assured by good authorities, that the English flunkey is the worst species of the brood in the world."

We are pleased to learn that Mr. J. M. Buchan, M. A., formerly inspector of high schools, has been appointed principal of Upper Canada College, rendered vacant by the resignation through ill-health of Mr. G. R. R. Cockburn. We quite agree with the Toronto World that "the Government could have made no wiser choice of a head for the College than Mr. Buchan. With high scholarship he unites a thorough practical acquaintance with the best methods of teaching, and intimate knowledge of our school law, and a warm sympathy with the motives and aspirations of boy students such as will be committed to his care. Mr. Buchan's appointment is also probably a step towards a general reform in the management of the college, and the initiation of greater economy in its financial affairs.

The unscrupulous writers for the Tory press are finding that in their abuse of Mr. Blake they have overshot the mark. So many people in the Maritime Provinces have had the opportunity for seeing and judging him that the efforts made to paint him black can no longer have any effect. One of the slanders set afloat by the Toronto Mail has been found to react so much that the Conservatives have to repudiate it. Part of the Mail's article about Mr. Blake attacking Mr. J. C. Pope while he was ill, was reproduced in the Charlottetown Examiner. The Examiner now says:—"A week or two ago, there appeared in the Examiner a comment on an article in the Mail in which it was stated that Mr. Blake, when on the Island, made some coarse allusions to Hon. Mr. Pope, Minister of Marine. There are, we believe, no good grounds for the statement, and we greatly regret that it was made."

A spirited discussion is in progress in the columns of some of our contemporaries on the propriety of the Governor-General being permitted to import a large quantity of liquors, to take with him on his north-western trip, free of duty. We are not aware of the foundation of the report. If it is true, the Government is censurable for permitting either the importation of liquor free of duty or its shipment into the prohibited districts of the North-west. The Governor-General is in receipt of a handsome salary, and he ought to pay Customs duties the same as any other resident of the country. He is also amenable to the laws of the land, and he and his fellow pilgrims to the North-west ought to know that they have no more right to take intoxicating liquors into the districts in which prohibition is law than the poorest settler. If we wish our laws respected, the Government should be taught that it cannot wink at an offence on the part of those in high places, which it would condemn perpetrated by a poor immigrant. We would fain hope that the Marquis of Lorne has been misrepresented in this matter, but the journals which make the charge are positive in their assertions.

The Marriage Question.

A Union with a Deceased Wife's Sister Dissolved.

In the St. John, N. B., Divorce Court Judge Wetmore delivered judgment in the case of David Pugh, v. Charlotte Emma Pugh, granting a divorce a vinculo, and declaring the marriage void on the ground that the defendant was the sister of a deceased former wife of the plaintiff, and justifying the plantiff in instituting the proceedings, the wife having left her husband's home some years ago and rejected his entreaties to her return. The husband was directed to pay the costs. The parties, knowing their inability lawfully to contract marriage in New Brunswick, agreed to meet and did meet, in Houlton, in the state of Maine, where such marriages are permitted by the laws of the State, and were married, intending to reside in New Brunswick. They lived together as husband and wife for eleven years, and had several children born to them, but the wife's consciousness being awakened to the impropriety of the marriage, under the pretence of visiting friends in the United States, she went to Rochester, N. Y., and refused to return home, alleging that she expected all the time of the marriage that her husband would sell out his property in New Brunswick and remove to the United States. It was claimed for the defendant that she being domiciled in a State where such a marriage was allowable, was entitled to hold the contract valid, but the court found against this contention.

REV. LACHLAN TAYLOR, D. D.

On Sunday last, the 4th September, Rev. Dr. Lachlan Taylor died suddenly at Sackville, N. B., the residence of his nephew, the Rev. John Burwash. Few ministers of the Methodist or any other Church were better known or more highly esteemed than the deceased gentleman, and his loss will be deeply mourned by a very large circle. His labours in the Methodist Church, which have been of a most varied character, have lasted 45 years, many of which have been spent in travel.

Dr. Taylor was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, but in 1836, while yet a boy, came to Lachute, in Lower Canada. He received his early religious training in the National Church of Scotland, of which his father was an elder, but eventually he joined the Methodist Church under the ministrations of the late Asabel Hurlburt. His first post was on the Buckingham he subsequently minstered at Richmont, Prescott, Toronto, Hamilton, Brockville, Kingston, Bytown, St. Catharines, and Montreal. During this period his labours had been so incessant that in 1845 he held an invalid station at Three Rivers, and the year following he resided at Cobourg without a charge. For thirteen years, viz., from 1845 to 1864, Dr. Taylor did great work for the Upper Canada Bible Society, and was mainly instrumental in bringing it to its present high position. From 1865 to 1875 he was one of the general secretaries of the Methodist Missionary Society, a position which he filled with energy. During his life he travelled a great deal both on this continent and abroad, and he took an extended tour through Syria, Asia Minor, Egypt, and the Holy Land. As a lecturer Dr. Taylor was highly thought of, and his tour through England in 1877-78 lecturing on the North-West was a most successful one, and imparted much useful knowledge of that country. Some four years ago Dr. Taylor was attacked with a serious disease of the eyes which rendered him totally blind, a condition in which he remained with occasional intervals of dim vision. Notwithstanding this the reverend gentleman continued to lecture, and at the time of his death was engaged in delivering a lecture on "Jerusalem the city of the Great King."

HOW THEY WORKED.

We print to-day a well-written sketch of the reception of Sir Leonard Tilley, Mr. Thomas White, M. P., and Senator Boyd at Yarmouth We have further reports from several correspondents descriptive of the meeting, for which we may be unable to find room. It appears that the Conservative trio divided the work between them, into sections, as follows: Sir Leonard to do the "gush" over the fancied benefits of the N. P., Mr. White to contribute the abuse of his opponents, and Senator Boyd to come in at the end with a characteristic farce. The effect of such a plan of campaign is not likely to be great in any intelligent community, and Yarmouth is about the last place in which such methods could be regarded with respect. The putting up of men of the calibre of Messrs. Tilley, White and Boyd to reply to the speeches of Mr. Blake has an element of redicule about it which the Conservatives themselves seem to have recognized, as the trio have been withdrawn from the field. After the Yarmouth experience it was not thought expedient to risk a meeting in Halifax with such speakers. The Conservative managers do not often pay the people the compliment of recognizing their intelligence. As they have done so in some degree in this instance by abandoning the Tilley-White-Boyd campaign we feel bound to recognize the fact.—[Halifax Chronicle.

The apple crop is not so small as might be supposed from the fact that this is not an apple year. Many trees are fairly laden. In frequent cases a part of a tree is found to be full of fruit, while all the rest of it is barren. Peaches are a failure, and plumbs are scarce, but the crop of pears is so abundant that trees have to be propped up to save them from breaking.

Would Not be Without It.—One who has fairly tested Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, though prejudiced against proprietary medicines in general, writes—"I would not rest over night without this reliable remedy for sudden attacks of Cholic, Cramps and Cholera Morbus so prevalent in the summer season, I keep a bottle ready at hand." 36-2t

REPORT UPON THE NAVIGATION OF THE TRENT RIVER.

BY D. STARK, C. E.

PETERBOROUGH, 20th August, 1879.

F. BRAUN, Esq., Secretary,
Department Public Works, Ottawa.

SIR,—In accordance with the instructions conveyed in your letter, No. 50,254, of the 25th June last, I have now the honor to submit the following report upon the Trent River navigation :—

With the numerous and exhaustive reports which have been already made upon the subject, furnished me by the Department, and which are now before me, I conceive that all that remains for myself is a description of the changes my examinations would induce me to adopt, in what has been already recommended by others, who had few of the facilities for a thorough investigation such as is now afforded, both by the many improvements in the face of the country itself, and in the means of traversing it.

The changes I propose are few in number, and are adopted with a view, first to economy of construction, and secondly, to the shortening up of the navigation.

They consist chiefly in the substitution for the river of independent cuts for a canal at two points, that nearest Trenton being between Chisholm's Rapids and Crow Bay, and the other Katchewannoe and Chemong Lakes.

The first, in avoiding the detour by Campbellford and Percy Landing, saves a distance of 12 miles, and the other, that by Buckhorn Rapids and Stony Lake, 20 miles, making a total decrease in the length of navigation between Bobcaygeon and Trenton of 32 miles.

In both of the cases mentioned the ground is favorable for the deviations. At Crow Bay the running of about a mile from the bay with a cutting whose average depth will not exceed 10 feet, reaches ground falling towards Chisholm's, as a stream running through it shows, thereby affording a command of the country which renders a proper distribution of the locks all that is needed to reduce the amount of excavation to a minimum.

I am satisfied the selection of this route will affect a large saving in the expenditure by the river, the stream falling so fast as to render every two hundred yards of its length a mill power, and the number of dams and slides necessary extremely great.

The fall from Crow Bay to Chishom is given as 150 feet.

At the Chemong Lake the cutting for the same distance would be somewhat heavier, say from 15 to 20 feet before reaching the ground falling towards Lake Katchewannoe, but this route being only 4½ miles as against 24½ by the river, nothing exists in the cost of its construction to sustain any argument against its adoption.

The fall from Chemong to the Ketchewannoe Lake is shown by the report of Mr. N. H. Baird, C. E., to be 43 feet (I have reason to believe it a little less than this), necessitating, say the construction of three locks.

The great descents to be overcome, viz., that between Lakefield and Peterborough, and the nine-mile rapids above Trenton, will require to be dealt with in whatever manner actual and intelligent survey will indicate as best.

For my own part, as respects the former, I am at present of opinion that by carrying the water of Katchewannoe Lake the necessary distance below the village of Lakefield, it will be best, as at Crow Bay, to take an independent course, afforded by a small valley leading directly to the head of Little Lake, at Peterborough, and so again leave the river with its great fall and numerous mills uninterfered with.

The length of line between Lakefield and Peterborough is, by the river nine (9) miles, and I think this distance would be reduced from one-half to three-quarters of a mile by the route I mention. The total fall here is 147 feet.

As regards the nine-mile rapids, with the exception of one or two points where distance may be saved by independent cuttings, I think a system of locks, dams and slides the only available mode of construction.

The fall of these rapids, as given by Mr. Baird, is 116 feet.

This, with the cutting through of some points on the Otonabee River below Peterborough (which can be readily done), comprises all I have to remark upon to the southward of Balsam Lake, which has not been ably and exhaustively treated of already.

Here would seem to be the limit of my written instructions in this direction, but finding that the general desire throughout the whole of this section of the country is not merely a local opening of the navigation of the St. Lawrence (great as such a boon would be held), but that the "Trent navigation" is, in its integrity, regarded as the forming of a barge route for the produce of the great North-West from Georgian Bay to Bay of Quinte, I resolved upon examining the ground to Lake Simcoe also, by the route recommended some 45 years ago by Mr. N. H. Baird, viz., the Talbot River.

Doing this now is an easy matter, and I followed the valley of the river the whole way to its confluence with the lake.

About two miles from Balsam Lake the Talbot is struck with easy cutting, and then the whole country is commanded and most favorable. In fact, soon after striking in the stream may be left entirely, and the shortest available line to Lake Simcoe preferred.

Mr. Baird estimated the distance at 16¼ miles but I have no doubt that in this way his figures can be reduced.

The whole fall from Balsam Lake to Lake Simcoe is put down at 118 feet.

I will merely add that persons with whom I have conversed upon the subject who have lumbered on the river and know it well, all agree that between Lake Couchiching and the mouth of the Severn on Georgian Bay a highly favourable route is afforded for a canal, much of the river being now navigable and only one fall and rapids of consequence existing upon it.

The fall from Lake Simcoe is 120 feet.

An alternative line spoken of by Mr. Baird from Lake Simcoe to the Georgian Bay by the Nottawasaga river is impracticable.

I have added these few remarks upon the route north of the point named in my letter of instruction, i. e., Fenelon Falls, because to have stopped there would have been to omit a description of the ground so ardently desired to be covered by apparently all who reside in this part of Canada

With respect to the navigation on the Scugog River to Lindsay, it can hardly be regarded as other than a "branch to the main line." The river might be considerably improved by the cutting through of the various points now presenting obstructions to an easy navigation, and as stumping and dredging machines could certainly accomplish this at no very great cost, I think the matter should receive attention.

There is a large quantity of drowned land along this river, but upon which I understand no claims for damages exist.

Its extremely low elevation would render its drainage at any time impossible, and to take the water off it now would be a sure infliction of miasmatic diseases upon the whole adjacent country.

To a stranger, a first acquaintance with so immense a stretch of inland "waters fit for traffic" as exist in connection with the "Trent navigation," conveys a feeling of surprise, mingled with a sensation of wonder at his having been, perhaps, so long a denizen of Canada without having heard more mention of it.

Placing for a moment connection with Lake Huron to one side, there can be no possible doubt but that the opening up of such an internal "highway of waters" to the outside world by giving it access to the St. Lawrence, would be conferring an amount of prosperity upon this already flourishing district which could not but make itself felt to a greater or less degree throughout the entire Dominion.

No one can become acquainted with the country as I have this year had an opportunity of doing without feeling this.

From Lake Simcoe to Rice Lake the whole landscape lay golden in its rich and abundant crops of wheat, and what strikes one most forcibly is, that every petty clearing on the hills, half stumps as it may yet be, shines forth from the dark woods that surround it, with similar tokens of prosperity, a sunny pledge of what the whole country shall one day become, when cultivation will at last have driven off all traces of the absence of man.

No number or system of railways can possibly take the place, towards such a country, of a navigation which permeates every portion of it, and which only needs an outlet.

It is not for me to do more than give a simple statement of facts; but I have been asked for a full report, and think I am scarcely out of place when I say, with a thorough conviction of the truth of the statement, that no act of the Government could give more intense satisfaction, or be a more thoroughly popular one throughout the whole of this portion of Canada, than the exhibition of an intention to perfect, as quickly as may be, the navigation from Balsam Lake to the Bay of Quinte

That once done, there is little to fear, I think, for its ultimate extension to Lake Huron, because to get it there is too easy a task to call fear forth, and because once there its results must prove of transcedent benefit to the entire Dominion, and I am one of those who believe that the fact will soon be generally recognized.

With a plan of locks that will pass barges with expedition, it would be anything but a slow transit, with the assistance of the extensive and already navigable reaches that would bring a tow of 15 or 20 barges of wheat from Port Severn to Trenton, each barge containing its load for two railway trains, the whole capable of filling 30 or 40 trains. This, too, at a port so much nearer the great chain of St. Lawrence canals, as is Trenton, than any other that can be got, and where before them still lies the tranquil navigation of the Bay of Quinte, and that of the St. Lawrence to Montreal or the United States.

Indeed, the greater portion of the canal lies through lakes, the coolness of which admirably adapts the route for the conveyance of grain, and from the spacious land-locked harbour of Midland City, capable of receiving the largest vessels that navigate the lakes down to tide-water, the "still-water" navigation it certainly is, would render "insurance" almost nominal.

I am informed that the amount of wheat sent towards the frontier yearly, from this district alone cannot be set down at less than from four to five million of bushels.

Communication with Lake Huron would multiply this a hundred fold, and in view of our own coming contributions from the great North-West to Canada, I cannot but regard the perfecting of this shortest of all possible routes from the far west to the sea board as a subject well worthy the attention of the Government.

In closing this report I have to cordially acknowledge the kind and hearty assistance I received throughout the whole investigation at the hands of Mr. T. D. Belcher, the Engineer of the district.

Mr. Belcher threw himself into the matter with a zeal which rendered him not only of the greatest assistance to myself, but which showed him (what I think any one who once sees it must become) thoroughly imbuded with the importance the opening up of this navigation cannot but possess for the whole of Canada.

Appended I beg to submit statements bearing upon the various subjects embraced in my letter of instructions, and an estimate of cost, which, though necessarily approximate has still been sufficiently weighed to lead me to believe it is ample for the work it involves.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed), D. STARK, C. E.

STATEMENT OF WORKS ALREADY COMPLETED.

1. Lock at Balsam Rapids, 133 by 33 feet. Dam and slide, 133 by 33 feet. These works are in good condition.

2. Fenelon Falls.—Slide piers and boom. These are also in good order.

The steamboat owners desire a slight alteration in the location of the booms, which will necessitate the construction of three or four piers.

3. Bobcaygeon.—Canal, lock, dam and slide. These works are in fair condition, but require some slight repairs.

4. Buckhorn Rapids. Dam and slide. This dam is of great importance as retaining a large area of water, and regulating the depth in the lower mitre sill of the Bobcaygeon lock. It is in good repair, only requiring the usual overhauling after spring freshets. The slide has been extended to facilitate the descent of timber. In the event of the improvements to navigation being proceeded with, this dam should be raised and strengthened with a view to its keeping up the level in Chemong and the other lakes up to the lower mitre sill of the Bobcaygeon Lock, to high water mark.

5.—Burleigh.—Dam and slide. Exclusively for the descent of timber. The works are in fair order, but the slide requires to be extended some 20 or 30 feet.

6. Young Guard Lock, foot of Clear Lake.—The works are in good condition. Applications have been made to place the dam at Lakefield under the control of the Government, in consequence of its being the means of affording navigation between that place and Young's Lock. It is at present owned by private individuals, who may or will at any time impede, or even destroy, the navigation. I would refer to the report of the Superintending Engineer on this subject, of date March, 1875.

7.—Peterborough.—Lock, dam and slide. These, in so far as the lock and slide are concerned, are in perfect order, but the dam, in portions of it, needs renewals, which should be carried out as soon as practicable.

8. The Otonabee River.—This river requires dredging at various points, notably in the channel opposite the wharf of Peterborough, which, like all the rest of the navigation, is being rapidly filled up with refuse from saw-mills. The navigation here is very important, and a dredge of some kind should be provided. Points requiring the removal of natural obstructions are the "Yankee Bonnet" (boulders,) Dangerfield (the same,) and the outlet of the river at Rice Lake (saw-dust,) chiefly.

9. Hastings.—The works here are in good condition, but in consequence of the dam not having been originally properly scribed to the rock, the water flows beneath it, and a coffer dam should be erected round the spot, and the water allowed to escape, so as to admit of the vacancies being filled in with concrete. The superstructure of the dam is in perfect condition, as is also the lock, which, like all the other structures of the kind, is first-class work. A flat rock, about half a mile above this lock, requires removal by blasting, unless the dam is raised so as to keep Rice Lake permanently up to high-water mark, which in the event of improvement to the navigation, I should certainly recommend as the alternative, with the provision, of course, of sufficient sluice area at the dam to keep the lake under control in spring.

10. Healey's Falls.—Dam and slide. This dam is the means of affording navigation to Hastings, a distance of twelve miles. It requires some slight repairs which should be made this autumn. I may remark that neither this dam nor slide will be interfered with by any new works which may be undertaken in view of improvement to the navigation.

11. Middle Falls.—Dam and slide. These are constructed exclusively for the descent of timber. They are in fair order.

12. Chisholm's Rapids.—Canal, lock, slide and dam. The dam here is a substantial structure some 250 feet long, and maintains the water at a navigable height up to Percy Landing, a distance of thirteen miles. The canal is about half a mile long, cut through solid limestone rock. The lock is a substantial structure built of Ashlar masonry but requires new gates. The steamboat owner is anxious to have these repairs carried out so that he may run his boat through the Canal to the village of Frankfort. I think this should be done as soon as may be, and every facility afforded the navigators. I may further state that the agitated removal of the dam here would have prejudicial effect which can hardly be over-estimated. It would destroy the navigation, interfere with the lumbering trade, and at the same time render the whole surrounding country uninhabitable by its productions of fever and ague and other miasmatic disorders.

I have already expressed an opinion as to the "unwatering" of these wild and generally totally useless lands, and take the opportunity of again earnestly recommending that they should be allowed, in every case, to remain as they are.

I would here also beg to refer to the report of the Superintending Engineer for the fiscal year ending the 30th June, 1878.

STATEMENT OF APPROXIMATE COST OF THE THREE SECTIONS OF THE CANAL.

From Trenton to the Balsam Lake	$1,200,000
From Trenton to Lake Simcoe	1,800,000
From Trenton to the mouth of the River Severn, on the Georgian Bay	2,500,000

(Signed), D. STARK, C. E.

WATER SUPPLY.

The Canal would be supplied from Balsam Lake as the highest level on the route. This lake is fed from many others flowing into it by the Gull River, and many more can still be directed into it at pleasure. With the immense sheets of water to the southward, such as Sturgeon, Cameron, Pigeon, Chemong, Buckhorn, Stoney and Clear Lakes, and then at the mouth of the Otonabee, Rice Lake, all fed by other and independent means, and with Lake Simcoe to the north, the old doubts which existed at the time of Mr. Baird's survey, respecting a sufficiency of water, have vanished.

Independently of the water stretches mentioned, hundreds of square miles of supply could be utilized from the lakes lying northward and eastward, and above the level of the Balsam Lake itself.

FOR BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.—From Rev. Richard Edes, of Bolton, Mass. "For years I was a sufferer from boils, so that my life became wearisome through their frequent and persistent recurrence. A carbuncle, which ultimately occupied a space of three or four square inches, formed in the small of my back. During its progress large pieces of decomposed flesh were every day or to cut away; and prostration and general disturbance of the system were great. Before I recovered from this attack two smaller carbuncles broke out higher up, and I was again threatened with a recurrence of the suffering to which I had so long been subjected. It was at this time that I commenced taking the Peruvian Syrup; I continued taking it until I had used five bottles; since then I have had nothing of the kind. I attribute this improved state of my system entirely to the Peruvian Syrup: and I feel that I cannot express my obligations to it in terms too strong. For years I was one of the greatest sufferers, Other medicines gave me partial and temporary relief; but this remarkable remedy, with a kind of intutive sense, went directly to the evil, and did its work with a thoroughness worthy of its established character." Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL.

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald. Agents,—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

One of the most promising signs of the times may be found in the rapid rise of such houses as that of

JOHN HACKETT'S

Having developed in a few years from comparative obscurity into his present prominent position among the Dry Goods Houses of Peterborough. The firm of J. HACKETT has never offered any other inducements to his customers than close prices and square dealing, while the great majority of his opponents offer extra long credit and other imaginary instead of substantial advantages, the result being that CASH BUYERS and others who are independent naturally drift into buying from such a house as

JOHN HACKETT'S

while credit customers, who are trading beyond their means, naturally drift toward houses who give long credit easily, even if their prices are higher, and therefore the immense development in

JOHN HACKETT'S TRADE

during the last year or so, since good times set in, proves the business of the country is in a healthier state than it has been for many years, and that the five years of hard times have swept over the country like a great bush fire that was confined to the dry and rotten wood, leaving the healthy vigorous trees to start on, refreshed by the open spaces, and it is to be hoped that people will not soon forget the lessons taught by hard times, to trade within their means and live within their income

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE Mail still continues its ill-bred diatribes against the Hon. Mr. Blake.

MR. RICHARD O'NEIL has secured the contract to do the necessary dredging at the Port Hope harbor. The work is to be commenced immediately.

QUEEN VICTORIA is worth about $80,000,000. Her yearly income is $3,250,000, the half of which, it is said, she saves, and yet she will not pay the Prince of Wales' debts.

His Honor, Lieut.-Governor Robinson, on Saturday afternoon, administered the oath to the following Justices of the New High Court:—Hagarty, Boyd, Wilson, Armour, Cameron, Proudfoot, Ferguson, Galt and Osler.

It is understood that no successor to Mr. Buchan will be appointed at present, as Mr. Crooks wishes to seize the opportunity now offered of trying the experiment of having the work of inspection done by two instead of three high school inspectors.

WALLACE ROSS is now the champion oarsman, both by his victory yesterday, and Hanlan's forfeiture of the belt. The honor remains in Canada, and the only men who appear to be able to press Ross are countrymen of his own.

THE Midland Railway Company having made an application for the stationing of a Customs officer at Midland City on Georgian Bay, Inspector Mewburn has sent a man to that point. A permanent appointment will be made after the return of Hon. Mr. Bowell from Manitoba.

Business men will read with interest the announcement that a new telegraph company is being organized in Montreal to compete with the existing unwielding combination. This company will work with the Mutual Union Company, of New York, now actively extending its operations.

The PRAYERS that have been offered both in private and public on behalf of the president show, says the New York Sun, that deep-seated and radical infidelity has not yet touched the mass of the American people. The religious sentiment is still the most powerful which moves them, and a faith which is beyond reason has a strong hold on their confidence.

It appears that the new school for truants and expellants from Toronto schools is a work of private benificence. W. H. Howland is prominently connected with the scheme, and in a letter tothe Toronto press he states that "there are hundreds of boys in the city who are as much outside of our present school system as if they lived in Kamschatka.

IF Gambetta should accept office as a result of the late French elections, the chances are that he would use his influence to continue the commercial treaty with England. His last speech had an unmistakable ring of free trade about it, and if his opinions prevail with the government, it is not improbable that a more liberal treaty than the existing one between France and England may be ratified.

THE generally expressed opinion is that the Toronto Exhibition has never been exceeded in interest and variety by any show previously held in Canada, and loud encomiums are being passed upon the comprehensiveness and excellent taste displayed in the arrangements of the exhibits. Saturday last closed a very successful week, and everything augurs extremely well for the last week of the show.

The gale of Saturday night committed sad havoc on the great lakes. By the despatches it will be seen that the steamer Columbia has been lost on lake Michigan with about fifteen people. The schooner Region has also foundered with all hands—five in number. Other disasters, in a few cases accompanied by loss of life, and aggregating a tremendous loss of property, are also reported. This is the beginning of the fall record of disaster on the lakes.

No one can deny the aptness of last week's cartoon in Grip. Finance Minister Tilley shows a surplus of four millions in the Dominion Treasury as the gratifying result of his administration during the past year. Mr. Blake, however, is not inclined to grow jubilant over this plethoric state of the public purse, affirming that the surplus simply represents four millions of dollars paid in by the people over and above the actual necessary running expenses of the Government, and that Canada has no more reason to feel gratified than if her physician had, by the application of a leech, drawn four million ounces more blood than she could safely spare.

TIMBER FIRES.

Destructive fires have been raging for several days past in the timber limits in the northern part of this county and the adjoining counties. A large part of the limits—including portions of those belonging to Rathbun & Son, Gilmour & Co., Wm. Sutherland, Wm. Bleecker and Flint & Holton—have been devastated. Two hundred sleighs in the township of Angleseа, belonging to Messrs. Gilmour & Co. and their jobbers, have been destroyed. Mr. A. Sutherland succeeded in saving his sleighs, blankets, and a portion of his cooking utensils, but lost his shanties, stoves, and a large quantity of lumber. An immense quantity of hay belonging to various individuals has been destroyed. The fires are still raging.

Later news of the Michigan bush fires show that the first accounts did not show the full extent of the calamity. About 1,000 people have been burned to death or suffocated, 2,500 families have been rendered homeless, thirty-one townships have been swept, and twenty-one villages have been destroyed. The disaster has no parallel in America.

GRANT V. BEAUDRY,

THE FAMOUS ORANGE CASE BEFORE THE QUEBEC COURT OF APPEAL.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—To-day the case of David Grant against Mayor Beaudry for illegally arresting him while attempting to walk the streets as Grand Master of the Orange procession on the 15th July, 1877, was before the appeal side of the Court of Queen's Bench. Mr. Doutre, for plaintiff, set forth the facts that Mayor Beaudry had been most biased in his action towards the Orangemen, and after the determination to call out 500 special constables he chose out of the 436 men but four English, five Scotch, and one Belgian, the remainder being Irish and French Canadian Roman Catholics. Mr. Beaudry, it was shown, had been instructed by Edward Carter, advocate, to arrest the leaders, and thus disorganize the crowd and did so. The legal aspect of the question above was before the Bench, and Mr. Doutre quoted cases to show that he had given sufficient notice of the inauguration of proceedings against the defendant, which is the technical point raised for the defence. Mr. Roy, for the city, replied, also citing cases in an opposite direction.

FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR CHALLENGE.

Hanlan, evidently nettled by the unkind criticisms passed on his retirement from the aquatic arena, has addressed the following business-like defi to the Mail:

To the Sporting Editor of the Mail:

SIR,—During the past week many comments of an adverse nature have been made upon my withdrawal from the regatta brought to a conclusion to-day. It has been said that I might have retired with better grace by first offering to row any man in the world for a suitable stake. That I have frequently done, but in order that there may now be no mistake as to my intentions, and in order that I may retire in what the public appear to think a befitting manner, I hereby offer to row Wallace Ross, the winner to-day, or any man in the world, a three or four mile race for from two to five thousand dollars a side, on a course to be mutually agreed upon, within six or seven weeks from date. This is the last offer I intend to make, and its fulfilment or non-fulfilment, if not accepted within two weeks, will end my career as a professional oarsman. I hereby deposit five hundred dollars in your hands, to make the offer good.

Yours, &c.,
EDWARD HANLAN.

PETERBOROUGH, Sept. 14, 1881.

The quantity of grain offering during the past week has been heavy. Wheat has been in active demand with the tendency upward fall selling from $1.24 to $1.28; spring from $1.23 to $1.27; market closing firm. Barley is rather unsettled, the tendency being downward; nevertheless good prices have been obtained: bright selling from 75c. to 80c., and in some cases more was paid for extra samples; stained bringing from 60c. to 70c. In peas there is little doing; very few offering; worth about 60c. Rye is in demand at 73c. to 80c.—receipts light. Oats are worth 35c. to 36c.; not many offering. On the Market:—Butter continues scarce and in demand, at 20c. to 24c. Eggs are higher—selling at 14c. to 15c. Chickens rather plentiful—selling from 30c. to 40c.; but slow at 40c. Lamb selling freely, at 7c. to 9c. Nothing doing in other meats. Tomatos bring 75c. to 80c. per bushel—rather plentiful. Apples in fair demand at 50c. to 75c. per bag; something extra bringing $1.00 to $1.25. No plums offering.

SELWYN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

While bush fires have been devastating the country to the North and West of us, we have scarcely been molested except by the dense smoke and showers of ashes from the heavy fires laying waste the fine wood land in other places.

THE NEW METHODIST CHURCH.—A handsome brick structure is rapidly nearing completion, and is expected to be dedicated early in October, to which event we are looking forward with eager anticipation, as preparations are already being made for the occasion.

On Friday afternoon a pic-nic under the auspices of the Union S. S. (situated in S. S. No. 7.) was held in Mr. Robert Moore's woods, and judging from the many expressions of satisfaction to be heard on all sides, it is safe to say that the pic-nic was a complete success.

Thursday evening the Indians of the Pedauhbun lodge (Chemong Lake) I.O.G.T held an entertainment in the Selwyn Temperance Hall for the purpose of paying off the debt then resting on the new organ lately purchased by them, and we believe they were entirely successful in attaining their object.

The Indian Brass Band was present and gave much pleasure and satisfaction by the able manner in which they performed their parts. Speeches were delivered by several Rev. Gentlemen.

The root crops, on account of the protracted dry weather, are expected to be very light. Fruit is also much below the yield of last year, generally, although some orchards show very fairly. Grain crops as a whole, are not remembered even by the "oldest inhabitant" to have given more satisfactory returns in any year than in the present. Fall wheat gives such a good crop this season that many are encouraged to "try again" consequently quite a large area is already sowed, but the ground being very dry it does not show very well as yet, and will not until we have a great deal of rain.

On Wednesday evening the Sunday School conducted by Miss M. Mann held its annual entertainment in the Temperance Hall and was in every respect a grand success. The programme consisted of music, readings, dialogues, speeches, recitations &c. which were well chosen for the occasion, well delivered, and heartily enjoyed by the large and respectable audience. The festival was made up of most delicious peaches, pears and other delicacies calculated to tempt the most fastidious appetite. Much credit is due to the committee of management for the very able manner in which all the arrangements were made and executed and are well deserving of the success which crowned their efforts.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The council met pursuant to adjournment at 1 p.m. on Monday August 29th. Present, the Reeve and Councillors Brealy, Dunlop and Forster. The Reeve in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. A communication was received from the County Clerk and Treasurer, enclosing the County rate for the present year as follows,

General County purposes	$1113.87
Debentures Debt and interest
School purposes	105.00
	$1218.87

Applications were received from the different School Sections throughout the municipality asking the Council to levy their respective school rates for 1881 as follows:

For School Section No 1	$375.00
" " " " 2	425.00
" " " " 3	220.00
" " " " 4	165.00

Accounts.—Toker & Co. for printing, $4.25; J. R. Stratton for printing $16,32. Hugh Cunningham keeping sister, $8.00;

On motion of Mr. Brealy, seconded by Mr. Forster the above accounts were ordered to be paid.

A petition was received from Dr. Kincaid and 21 others asking the Council to deepen the drain between lots 12 and 13 in the 11th concession of North Monaghan, which was laid over to the next meeting of the council.

By-laws to levy the foregoing rates were introduced, went through their different stages and finally passed.

The council adjourned to the call of the Reeve.—COM.

The President.

Condition Very Encouraging.

LONG BRANCH, Sept 13.—At the examination of the President at 8 o'clock this morning the temperature was 99.4, pulse 100 and respiration 20. He passed a comfortable night, sleeping most of the time, and on the whole his condition this morning is encouraging and gives promise of a good day.

The President yesterday was livelier and more inclined to talk than for many weeks past. His bed was wheeled to a window and he gazed with evident delight upon the scene. A sentry came within the President's vision. He waived his hand as a salute and the soldier presented arms. The President also recognised among the passers-by on the beach gentlemen of his acquaintance. One of his remarks was that he would like to attend Yorktown celebration, and he added: "I don't know but I will do so yet."

Dr. Bliss states that yesterday, for the first time in a good while, the President showed no signs of a wandering mental condition.

LONG BRANCH, Sept 14.—Bliss says that the pus gatherings opened yesterday were so trifling that he did not consider the fact sufficiently important to mention it. The President will remain at Long Branch until the middle of October if his favourable condition continues.

ATTEMPTED MURDER OF GUITEAU.

PARTICULARS OF THE ATTEMPT ON HIS LIFE—THE PRISONER IN AN AGONY OF TERROR.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—It is stated that Sergeant Mason, who tried to shoot Guiteau yesterday, has been nineteen years in the service, and has an enviable record as a good soldier. His Captain says:—"He was sick for some days past with chills, and took a large quantity of strong medicine. My opinion is that this affected his mind." It is learned the first notice of the shot was the cries of Guiteau, who was found crouched in the corner of his cell, uttering loud prayers for his protection, and literally writhing about the floor in an agony of fear. An effort to calm the wretch proved fruitless. He refused to stand erect or even to lie on his cot, and remained huddled up in the corner furthest removed from the range of the window. Mason's shot would doubtless have been fatal but for the fact that to reach the window of Guiteau's cell he was obliged to aim so high. The shot passed through the outer window, the sashes of which were closed and the surface of the glass covered with moisture from rain. It was learned at a late hour last night that Guiteau was still frightfully excited, and it was feared that unless something could be done to allay his terror, the probabilities are that his reason will give way. All along Guiteau has feared he would be shot through the cell window. There is a report that there was talk among the guards recently in regard to which one should be chosen to shoot at him whenever he should present his head at the window. It was decided that Mason should do it and he made preparations. Last night three waggon loads of soldiers left the arsenal for the gaol to relieve the day guards. Mason was in the last waggon. His companions noticed that he was fumbling with the lock of his gun and acting strangely. Nothing was said to him however. When the waggon reached the gaol Mason was the first to get out. He pushed forward and reached a hillock three feet from where the horses stood. He took a steady aim at Guiteau's window, shouted "There he is," and fired. Before the smoke cleared away the soldiers gathered around him. When asked why he shot, Mason replied. "I wanted to kill the wretch in there, and I have been at it for ten days. I hope I have done the work in good style." Mason then walked toward the commanding officer, saying:—"Captain, I have tried to kill that dirty loafer in there. I did not enlist to guard an assassin. Here's my gun and bayonet, take me in charge." Guiteau was told the shot was accidental. He has been removed to another cell. It is stated the ball went through Guiteau's coat, and tore in pieces his mother's photograph which was in his pocket.

The Freemasons of Kingston have in contemplation the erection of a costly temple on Clarence street. A building of the kind proposed would be elegant and expensive.

The word character comes from a term which means to engrave upon or to cut in. In selecting pens it is advisable to see that the name of Esterbrooke is stamped on them.

The tank house on the Midland Railway at Millbrook was burned on the 9th. The loss will probably reach $600 or $800, on which there is an insurance of $400 in the Royal and Phœnix Companies.

W. H. Delaney of Trenton while fighting bush fires in the cemetery was overcome with the heat and smoke and had a narrow escape from death. He managed to escape by desperate exertions.

Difficulties between the employes of rival lumber operators in Parry Sound, it is feared will end in bloodshed. The question is the usual one in a dry season who shall have the "water rights" for driving logs?

At the last meeting of the St. Mary's Collegiate Institute Board of Trustees, they were not able to engage a new teacher, as none of the applicants possessed a sufficiently high standing for the work required in the school.

Mrs. Oddy, wife of Jacob Oddy, "Garnet House," St. Mary's, died on wednesday night, after a short illness, aged fifty eight years and seven months. Mrs. Oddy was well and favorably known in St. Mary's.

Another of Whitby's oldest citizens has gone to his long rest. Henry Hull Betts died at the family residence, Dundas street, on Tuesday of last week, in his 88th year.

Mr. John Luke, of East Whitby, is growing some sugar beets, and is well satisfied with their appearance. Dr. Scheidweiler examined the crop last week and pronounced it a fair average yield, being about sixty tons per acre.

Before engaging steam threshing machines farmers should see that their insurance policies contain a clause permitting them to use these engines on their premises. If the clause is not there go to your agent at once and have it inserted.

There is comfort in store for persons troubled with lame back, rheumatic pains corns or bunions, who commence without delay, a course of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, followed up systematically until relief is obtained.

The Oshawa Reformer says:—The sugar cane planted in this district is making rapid growth during this warm weather. One stalk measured a few days since, in the field at the eastern part of the town, grew eleven inches in eighteen hours.

Peterborough hunters say that deer in the back townships were never so plentiful in their recollection. This they account for by the enormous yield there of vegetables that the animals graze on. Bears also are numerous. Ducks are very thick on the back lakes.

Mr. McKenna, of Picton, has been appointed veterinary inspector for the county of Prince Edward. It is the duty of the inspector to detect, investigate and report upon contagious diseases amongst cattle, sheep and hogs.

The Port Hope Times:—Mrs. Nathan Choate was somewhat seriously hurt by a fall from a buggy, caused by the breaking of a ring-bolt. It is satisfactory to be able to add that the injuries received were not so serious as was supposed.

The station of the Midland Railway at Lindsay was entered on the 9th and the safe blown open. Two hundred dollars was taken from the safe. It is supposed to be the work of some of the followers of Cole's Circus, which exhibited in that town on the previous day.

Mr. James Lenihan formerly of Lindsay but up to recently Indian Commissioner in British Columbia, and who has lately become one of Dr. Tuppers victims was before leaving new Westminister presented by the citizens with an address of confidence couched in every complimentary terms.

A VEXED CLERGYMAN.—Even the patience of Job would become exhausted were he a preacher and endeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing, making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet, how very easy can all this be avoided, simply by using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial Bottles given away at Taylor & Macdonalds Drug Store.

During the past week Mrs. Thomas Russell, of Somerville, who has been of unsound mind since last spring, loaded a rifle and shot herself through the breast while alone in the house, and her husband, upon returning home with some seed wheat after dark, was horrified to find her lying dead upon the floor. The unfortunate woman, who was about 27 years of age, leaves no children.

The Perth Courier says:—A farmer named John Armstrong, of Oso township, had four head of cattle—two fat cows, one two-year-old heifer, and a two-year-old steer—poisoned with Paris green, while another heifer is missing, probably having lain down to die somewhere from the effects of the poison. No doubt the poisoning was the deliberate act of some one. Such an action cannot be too strongly reprobated.

The Lindsay Warder says:—Mr. John Quinn, in the employ of Mr. Wm. Arksay, met with an accident on Thursday night of last week which proved fatal the following Sunday. On the night in question it appears that he was taken ill, and in attempting to work his way down stairs in the dark fell over them, there being no bannister, sustaining thereby injury to the spinal column which as stated above proved fatal.

The Hastings Star says:—A deaf and dumb girl named Hannah Barnhart was struck by the tender of a G. J. R. engine which was backing up from the G. T. Station, to Belleville. The girl was driving a cow across the track at the time and being deaf did not hear the approaching cars, which struck her on the side and hurled her into a heap of stones, lacerating her face, and it is feared inflicting internal injuries.

James Shannon, Lesakdale, writes:—"For many years my wife was troubled with chilblains, and could get no relief until about two years ago; she was then not able to walk, and the pain was so excrucisting that she could not sleep at night. Your agent was then on his regular trip, and she asked him if he could cure her. He told her Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil was a sure cure. She tried it, and judge of her astonishment when, in a few days the pain was all allayed and the foot restored to its natural condition. It is also the best remedy for burns and bruises I ever used."

BOWMANVILLE, Sept. 4.—About 2 p. m. to-day the large and extensive establishment of the Dominion Organ and Piano Co. was found to be on fire. The long-continued dry weather added much to the danger, but by the prompt and efficient management of the fire organization it was got under. The fire originated, it is supposed, in the finishing room and must have been from spontaneous combustion. The loss will amount to $2,500.

The Omemee Herald says that we had the pleasure of examining four stalks of Chinese sugar cane, grown on the farm of Mr. D. Cornell, sr., of the township of Ops. The cane, which is now on exhibition at Dr. Norris' drug store, is fully nine feet high and will measure an inch in diameter. Mr. Cornell has an eighth of an acre of cane which is said to make first-class fodder for cattle. As the yield is much greater than corn we expect to see it cultivated quite extensively by the farmers of this and adjoining townships.

KINGSTON, Sept. 1.—Mrs. Ann Coulter, who kept a house of ill-fame at the Grand Trunk Railway depot, and who was prosecuted by Detective Flynn, has been dismissed on promising to leave the city. Her daughters, Ann Jane Jeffs and Ann Howard, have been committed to the Mercer Institute for one year. It is impotrant to add that the Government has notified the medical officer connected with the Government that he must not pass any prisoners for committal to the said institute unless physically able to work.

WOMAN'S TRUE FRIEND.—A friend in need is a friend indeed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with disease, more particularly those complaints and weakness so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are woman's true friend, and will positively restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Taylor & Macdonald agents.

The Lindsay Post Dunsford correspondent reports the following circumstances:—Mr. H. Ireton mortgaged his farm in Peterborough and failing to pay the interest, which amounts to $200, the bailiff last Friday seized on all grain and stock on the farm, which is the property of Mr. R. Foster, who is working the farm on shares under a lease given by the said H. Ireton, who is at present an absentee, and to pay whose debts all Mr. Foster's property and the cows belonging to the other persons are advertised to be sold at public auction on Monday, Sept. 12th. Messrs. Graham, W. Cooper, E. Woollard and Rev. Messrs. McFarlane and Tozeland each had a cow pasturing on the place, which were also seized.

Hastings Star:—On Wednesday last while a timber train was making up at this station, a young man named Geo. Couch, of Belleville, a brakesman on the train, met with a horrible death whilst coupling two cars. The timber, as is usual, was of various lengths, and on one of the cars a stick projected a short distance over the end. The deceased was warned of the danger, but relying on his agility, signaled the engine driver to back up, he, Couch, standing in a stooped position between the cars, which he succeeded in coupling but unfortunately raised his head while so doing. The projecting stick caught the poor fellow's head between it and the next car, causing instant death. The remains were sent to Belleville where his widowed mother resides."

A CLERICAL SCANDAL.

Rev. Mr. Appleby, an Anglican clergyman at Sault Ste. Marie, and Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Algoma, has been obliged to leave his mission and to skip out across the lines in consequence of a scandal in which he was implicated some weeks ago. He had been suspected of being to intimate with a well conected young girl in his congregation, who is well known in Toronto, where she was educated, but he contrived to avert suspicion for some time, till at last he was detected in open sin in broad daylight. The indignation of the people was so great that he thought it best to decamp, and is now practising medicine in Colorado having completely thrown off the clerical character. What makes the matter worse is that he is a married man with a family. The greatest sympathy is felt for his wife. The man was sent out of the diocese of Niggara for improper conduct, but by pleading repentance and expiating on the poverty-stricken state of his wife and family he managed to get round the Bishop of Algoma, who received him into his diocese, and in cousse of time, finding him a well-read man, made him his Examining Chaplain.—Globe.

DRYING FLOWERS IN SAND.

To dry flowers properly in sand, dishes sufficiently deep to premit the flower to be covered at least an inch with sand should be procured. While scouring-sand will suit; lay it half an inch deep in the dish. Place your flowers, stem downwards, in this sandy layer and sprinkle sand over them till all the petals are filled and the blossoms quite covered. It is well to hold them firmly while sprinkling them, so as to insure a complete dusting. The operation over, place the dish in a warm and dry situation. In about a week you may examine the flowers, but some flowers will require a much longer time than others. Should there be any trace of moisture in the dish at the first inspection, dry the sand before using it again, or use new sand. This is a very much better way to dry flowers than pressing them out. They are by this method kept in shape, their colors are preserved, and may be retained even for years. Bright flowers such as geraniums, carnations, pinks, pansies, gladioli, etc., are particularly adapted to this method. White flowers will not answer, nor will the plan succeed with secculent plants—as hyacinths; but ferns will answer very well under this treatment. Very pretty arrangements can be made of these dried flowers when mounted on card-board or placed in baskets, according to the taste of the individual.

It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends its self so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Nyman." Sold by all druggists

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, larnygitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung mebrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

Love in Idleness.

By the Author of "LOVEDAY," "MAY'S HOLIDAY," &c.

"My future and yours are two different things," she murmurs, with an exquisite pathos that has no chance of touching the sullen unresponsive listener, although otherwise capable of melting a heart of stone. "I may have a very little time to live; and, when we part to-night, we shall never meet again in this world. I had one friend whom I loved with all my heart. When I left Rome, by your wish, I sacrificed her with the rest. I want you to promise me that, when I am dead and the knowledge can in no respect harm you, you can tell her that I was your wife."

Garth flings his cigar away, and walks up and down the small path with manifest impatience.

"You are so absurdly romantic, Marion! Good Heaven! you might be proud of making my wife! It is not such an enviable position, I should imagine!"

"It is not," she replies, without looking up; "but it is true."

"How is it possible I could tell Vanna Winton the simple fact and leave unexplained a thousand other things? It is ridiculous!"

"Take care," she cries fiercely, and at the same time loosening the lace about her throat; "even you may try me too far! I ask for no recognition living—dead, I have a right to demand it!"

She faces him with that wild look in her eyes he had noticed when she first threw back her veil. It is not a pleasant look, and Garth does not care to meet it. He hastens to reassure her.

"Very well, so be it; but you are not going to die!"

"I hope so"—despairingly—"and then you will think of me sometimes, and perhaps feel a little sorry for me. Good-bye!"

She holds out her hand, but Garth does not take it.

"I am genuinely sorry for both of us," he answers moodily. "We never were suited to one another, and the only pity is we ever met. It was all a mistake from first to last."

"Do you mean to say you never loved me—that you were merely amusing yourself when you ruined his life and broke my heart?"

"I say it was all a mistake."

"A mistake," she cries wildly, "for which two have to pay with their lives! Heartless as you are and despicable as your conduct has been throughout, I did not dream it was planned and deliberate!"

"Marion?"

"Ah, you have betrayed yourself at last; and I do right to be avenged! I——"

But he interrupts her, laughing at her excitement and threat.

"I think our interview has already lasted too long. If you are ready to go, I will see you through the gardens."

But his cool manner and the laugh, as it is, are more than the over-strung nerves of the woman can bear. In another moment a knife flashes before his eyes; and, with a piercing shriek that brings people hurrying from all directions to the place of the tragedy, she has buried it in the breast of the man who has betrayed her!

CHAPTER VI.

"Where did you get this from, Jenny?"

"Out of Dick's pocket, Master Rob. It's been there, I think, best end of a month. Nothing important, I hope, master?"

"No, nothing important. What are you standing there for? Send Dick to me at once."

"I suppose the letter does not want an answer?"

"No. Why should it?"

Jenny would give her ears to know the contents of that letter; but Rob is in no mood to be trifled with; so she takes his hint and leaves him to himself.

The letter she referred to had been given her that morning by Dick the cowboy, who confessed to having received it from some strange gentleman on the morning of Fancy's accident. He, the strange gentleman, had given him sixpence at the same time, and bound Dick over to deliver the letter to his young mistress; but, as Dick naively put it, he "never seed Miss Fancy no more;" and, having spent the sixpence, the letter entirely slipped his memory. Jenny had triumphantly possessed herself of this letter and taken it to her master. It had no address, date, or post-mark. But not until Rob had opened and read it did Jenny think it necessary to mention for whom it was originally intended and the circumstances in which it had fallen into her hands.

But, whatever the letter contained, Jenny was not one whit the wiser—neither exclamation nor comment marked Rob's reading of it—only the paleness that gradually overspread his features and his short hard breathing divulged the nature of those hurriedly-scrawled lines.

"My own darling," so the letter ran, "I have just received a telegram which will make it necessary for me to catch the early train to town; so I shall not see you as arranged last night. I send you this by Dick—for you, my sweet one, are fast asleep at this early hour. I have looked up at your window and sent you a thousand kisses. Good-bye, my own little love. Remember your promise, and think of me until I come again to take you away for ever."

* * * *

"Laura, may I go to Langley this afternoon? I want to say a few words to Rob before we go away; and I have not bidden Jenny good-bye."

"Certainly, my dear. Cecil will drive you there."

"Ah, that is just what I do not want. I would prefer—oh, so much!—to go quite alone."

"But the distance!" urges Lady Winton kindly.

"Is nothing to me, Laura. I have always been used to walking about by myself."

"Very well, then; I suppose you must go"—reluctantly; "But I am not quite sure whether Rob will think, in that case, that I am taking proper care of you."

"Oh, I will answer for that! He will think nothing about it, for it is quite natural to me; but you,'—looking up steadily at Lady Winton, and a hot little colour springing to her cheeks—"you are not vexed at me for wishing to see him again?"

"On the contrary, dear—I think it is very natural; but you will be home for dinner, will you not? We have a guest this evening; some one you do not know—a friend of Cecil's. Who? No, I will not tell you, in the hope that your curiosity will bring you back earlier."

Fancy smiles.

"It will not take me long to say what I have got to say," she answers simply.

An hour after this, she has reached Langley, and is walking up the unevenly-flagged garden path with very much of the feeling of an already-condemned criminal.

Her heart beats so quickly that she can almost hear the rapid pulsations; and she trembles from head to foot with a vague sense of fear and trouble. The house is quite silent, quite empty—so it appears; the porch door stands open, and she walks softly across the cool wide hall into the dining-room beyond. A sudden overwhelming tide of recollections seems like a thousand knives plunged into her heart. Home! How sweet it is after all, how dear the faded carpet and every object of familiar household use—the book-case of solid oak, and the chairs and tables that shine as brightly as loving hands can polish them; the wide fireplace, with her chair still standing in her favourite corner, the old-fashioned piano and music-stand, the bits of china on the mantle piece, the blue bowls full of dried flowers—nay even the prints and pictures on the wall! The cat is curled up fast asleep on the sofa, and the sun, streaming in through the small panes of the large window, gives an air of repose and cheerfulness to the whole scene. Fancy, standing on the threshold of this room, holds her breath and wonders that nothing seems to have changed; there is no evidence to show that she has been away many weeks. All remains just as it used to be, only a little fairer and dearer than when she was last here. Some new element has entered into the composition of these ordinary household gods and given them a power to affect her strangely to make her suffer and regret as she has never yet done in all her short young life.

On a small shelf by the side of the fireplace are Rob's pipes and books, and underneath them on a lower shelf the slippers that she had worked for him years ago at the village school. How well she remembers every incident connected with the working, and Rob's reception of them! How proud he had been, how tenderly and lovingly he had thanked her! She takes them down and looks round her half fearfully. The door is closed, the house quite still; she presses the fading colours to her lips again and again, and at last kneels down by Rob's chair and sobs convulsively, the slippers pressed close to her heart.

"Good-bye," she murmurs brokenly, in her own mind bidding farewell not only to him, but to all her old past life. "Even if I had loved you as you deserve, I am not worthy of you, it is better for you that I go away—for both of us, a thousand times better."

Suddenly a door is opened, and a man's step, slow and weary, is heard on the floor: then a cry of fear, surprise, and joy all blended in one word—"Fancy!" breaks the silence. She looks up at first, overwhelmed with shame and confusion, then, forgetful of everything but the impulse that sways and bends her like a reed in a storm, she springs up and throws her arms round him and tries to speak; but all she can say is, "Rob" and "home."

For one instant Robert Constant suffers himself to taste the joy of his little ward's tender and clinging caresses, forgetting that in his hand he holds the record of a deceit that has well-nigh resulted in the despair and ruin of a life.

It would be impossible to measure the extent of Rob's suffering during the hour that has elapsed since he received his rival's letter. Words fail to describe the anguish of a strong man stricken through and through with the knowledge that all he has most loved and prized on earth has failed and betrayed him, that for him there no longer exists even an ideal of truth and purity. Only a moment ago, and the world had crumbled at his feet as he came forward, with haggard face and faltering step, to see the woman he loved spring to him, sobbing and trembling for joy, her arms round him, her soft broken happy voice not steady enough to murmur one single intelligible sentence. Dark and evil thoughts rushed into his heart. What he longed to do at that moment had been done by many a lover as passionate and as deceived as himself, who had listened with terrible result to the whispering of the fiends that haunt such hours as these.

Fortunately for Rob, the paroxysm passes away, and a sadder, calmer mood succeeds; and Fancy never once dreams of the conflicting emotions that have been struggling with in him for mastery. He holds her in his arms and presses her fair head to him. Gradually the look of hate and fierceness fades from his face, the keen blue eyes soften, and he stoops and kisses her forehead.

"Rob, forgive me!"

The words are so faint as to hardly rise above a whisper; but they recall Rob to the actual world about him as perhaps nothing else could have done. In a moment the dream is over, the illusion dispelled—once and for ever. He simply stands still and looks at her.

"She was my world: filled up the whole of being.
Smiled in the sunshine- walked the glorious earth.
Sat in my heart—was the sweet life of life.
The past was hers; I dreamt not of a future
That did not wear her shape. Memory and hope Alike are gone."

"I never meant to really leave you, Rob; and I have been so unhappy since I last saw you. I waited all this time, thinking that you would be sure to come again; and, because you did not, I—I have come to you."

Rob does not immediately answer her; then he says—and a gathering storm of anger that not all his strength of will can quite disguise, darkens his eyes and betrays itself in the slightly dilating nostrils—

"Unless you deal frankly with me, it would have been better had you not come."

"I could not help it; I know it is difficult for you to believe: but I cannot be happy away from you."

The words end in a little sob; then she looks up, smiling at him through her tears.

"Come here," he says, in a low clear voice. "Give me your hands; and now lift your eyes to mine while you answer my question."

She obeys, shringing a little from his fierce grip.

"Why do you come back to me? Do not droop your eyes, but speak the truth."

Despite this command, uttered with the imperiousness of a royal mandate, Fancy's eyes remain cast down, and her face is the colour of a rose.

"Surely," she says to herself, "he does not expect me to tell him that I love him! My coming back ought to suggest that at least."

He waits for her answer.

"I thought you would understand," she begins, the rose brightening into a vivid scarlet. "And please loose my hands; you are hurting me dreadfully. If you do not want me to come back"—her pride rapidly gaining ground—"why of course I cannot force myself upon you. I thought"—hesitating—"that you would be very glad—I mean I hoped;'—she stops and draws away her hands in absolute confusion. Nothing indeed could be more painful or humiliating than Rob's silence during her little speech.

But he is not thinking of anything beyond her words—only one idea is uppermost in his mind, that she still seeks to deceive him. By an almost superhuman effort, he conquers himself and makes a last appeal to her.

"Fancy," he says, after a little pause, "you once trusted me, believed in me, came to me with all your joys and sorrows, knowing how dear and precious everything that concerned yourself was to me. Put away for the moment every idea that I am not the same interested and anxious friend you ever found me, and trust me again; you may"—laying his hand upon her shoulder and still battling manfully with that inward and invisible flood that threatens every moment to break down the barriers of his reserve and leave him helpless in its terrible power—"trust me, my child; for Heaven's sake keep nothing from me."

She moves a little away from him, wondering and almost frightened at the strained and harsh sound of his voice. The last few words had escaped that fierce control which he had managed to keep over the rest.

"What can I tell you more than you already know?" she answers timidly. "I was tempted by the splendour and strangeness of everything at Winton and the promise of gaieties and visits to London, that Laura and Miss Winton talked of so much. I have always had a longing to be rich and to travel about and see the world as one reads of it in books; and, if I yielded and for a short time imagined these things could satisfy me, I was not so much to blame after all; besides, you were needlessly unkind to me that night, although I am sure you did not wish to be, for I never dreamed of leaving you altogether; and I did not think you would refuse to part with me for a time."

"Is that all?" asks Rob, when she has quite finished.

"I do not know what else you want me to say," she answers, almost passionately. "To force me to tell you how impossible it is that I can leave you is unkind, ungenerous.';

"Fancy, why do you lie to me?"

In these moments the man who speaks seems to have grown suddenly aged, his face is drawn out of all likeness to itself by the agony of that repressed suffering.

"You are insulting; I have not told you a lie!" she cries indignantly. "Whatever should make you think so?"

Lie to me, deceive me, betray me," he continues excitedly, his words drowning her own. "This letter not delivered to you as it ought to have been"—spreading out the crumpled paper which all this time he has kept crushed up in his hand—"came by accident into my possession this very day. Do you recognise the writing? Are these strange words intelligible to you? Who is this man who dares to write to you in this strain, and, unknown to me, is to take you away when you next meet him?"

The passion has broken loose now, and Rob is no longer master of himself.

"Who is he?" he demands again, with a fierce imprecation, uttered in a low tone.

Fancy understands at last. So this letter is the cause of the coldness and harshness that Rob has manifested to her during this already trying interview, a letter written no doubt to her by Garth; but where or how obtained by Rob she does not wait to inquire.

"Oh, let me speak, Rob!" she gasps, pushing the paper from her and moving nearer to where he stands leaning by the table. "I did not think you knew anything of that foolish affair, and it certainly is not worth while speaking of it now."

"I cannot believe you," he answers, with a hoarse laugh. "Why should I? When you might have spoken the truth, you did not, you deceived me throughout."

"It was not altogether my fault. I can explain," she begins; but he interrupts her.

"Do not; I should not believe you. How could I, when I know what was your real motive for deserting me? I wish to have nothing more to do with you or your life. You have chosen your home and friends. Our path can never be the same again."

"You will not listen to me—you are too cruel," she sobs, burying her face in her hands. "If you cast me off without hearing me, you will regret it as long as you live."

"You have cast yourself off," he answers doggedly. "It was not my wish, Heaven knows that. Your treachery and deceit have almost killed whatever of good or manliness was left in me; but, knowing this, there is nothing to do but leave you to the better and superior care of those who have adopted you. I proved myself an unworthy guardian; I saw no fault in you because I worshipped you; and you meanwhile"—speaking with concentrated bitterness—"mocked and betrayed me."

"I deceived you," she murmurs, in a faint low voice, "and therefore I suppose you have a right to say these bitter and cruel things to me; but I long ago repented of it; and, although I am not today worthy of your trust and love, yet, if you will forgive me—will help me"—drawing a long breath and turning to him—"I will try to win both in the future."

How much pride and dignity the girl sacrifices in making this confession no one but herself can ever know, yet it is altogether wasted on Rob. It is doubtful even if he hears it; the pain of his own jealous misery is all that he is conscious of.

"I cannot forgive you," he says moodily, after a short silence. "No, I loved you too well, a thousand times too well, to make the farce you propose possible to me."

She stands beside him, pale and trembling; at his stern words she draws back, cowed and humiliated.

"You wish me to return to Lau—to Lady Winton?"

"Certainly."

"You do no wish to hear——"

"I wish nothing more from you than that you will respect my loneliness and misery."

"Do not fear," she answers, with a sudden hauteur in the pathetic voice; "I shall not inflict myself upon you after today. You must indeed think badly of me to imagine such a thing possible."

"So much the better," he says sadly.

She picks up her hat from the floor, and, at the same time, restores the slippers to their little shelf. Her dress touches Rob as she passes him, and he turns to her with a sudden passionate vehemence and again holds her hands firmly in his.

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes o adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

WHAT TO WEAR!

Encouraged by the warm approval hitherto attending our efforts to make our DRESS DEPARTMENT one of the most prominent features in our business, we again venture to present our lady friends with our views for the ensuing FALL and WINTER.

Dress Goods being, perhaps, the most anxious item in the economy of every properly constituted Dry Goods Establishment, we have this season devoted more than our ordinary attention to that department. During last fall the demand for SELF-COLORED CLOTH EFFECTS was very great, and it is the general feeling that this year the demand for these will be still greater. The materials are soft, pliable and elastic, and in fact possess all the qualities that go to make up the tout ensemble of a lady.

We will show these goods in different makes, such as Foules, Croises, Foule Cassimere, &c., &c.

Fancy Dress Goods. In Fancies, the most effective will be the new OMBRE STRIPES. These stripes will be much worn in combination with plain materials, and look exceeding well.

Velveteens. Great as was the demand for these goods last year, the demand this season promises to be still greater. The MAKE of VELVETEENS has attained to greater perfection in finish and colour than ever before. The nap is shorter and firmer and the general appearance more silky. We call SPECIAL ATTENTION to our velveteens in plain and coloured.

Girdles are still greatly in demand. We have them in several styles and in every shade, to match our dress materials.

Our Stock will be complete this week, and will be the largest we have ever shown in every department.

MUNRO & ALEXANDER

Local News Record.

RECEIVED.—The Band have received the $100 won at Ingersoll.

FOOTBALL.—The annual meeting called for last Saturday was attended by one individual. This was owing to want of proper notice.

TORONTO EXHIBITION.—Quite a large number from Town have visited the exhibition. The majority went up to view the regatta and were disappointed in not seeing the single scull race.

LIGHT.—The town is putting up several gas posts in the northern part of the town. For years the people in that section have been complaining of the lack of lighting accomodation.

RETURNED.—Jack Frost has returned from his summer vacation, looking cool as a cucumber. He can be seen any morning. He intends to stay with us during the winter.

The Secretary of the Horticultural Society, Mr. J. I. Davidson, has announced that he is prepared to pay the prizes awarded to the exhibitors at the recent exhibition.

Boys Tweed Suits are being sold by I. Robinson & Co. for $3 and upwards, and men's good all wool suits for $8.00 and upwards. 10-tf

Mr. James F. Dennistoun is preparing a By-law in connection with the proposed Water Works. As soon as prepared a meeting of the Town Council will be called to consider it.

JUDICATURE ACT.—Our town lawyers do not wear their aforetime happy and contented looks. The new practice with its consequent confusion makes them appear worn and troubled. There are bright prospects ahead.

THE HARVEST.—The recently harvested grain, which has been in this section a most abundant yield is now coming rapidly to town. Saturday was a very lively one and numerous were the wagons loaded with the "Golden Grain.

One of the lady teachers of the Public School has suggested to one of the Trustees the advisability of securing a number of cradles for some of the children who are attending school. She thinks that it would enable her to give more attention to her more ancient pupils.

JUST RECEIVED. New Black Cashmeres, Black Bunting Prints, New Tapestry Carpets, and Lace Curtains, New Boots and Shoes, also a splendid lot of New Tweed Suits for men and boys. W. J. WALLACE, Lakefield. 20-tf

FOR SALE.—Mr. D. G. Henthorn announces that he will offer for sale the whole of his property in Peterborough including the Livery Stable as he is leaving for Winnipeg. This will be an excellent opportunity for purchasers with cash. See posters.

ROCK ISLAND BOOTS. Messrs. R. Stenson & Son have just received several cases of Rock Island Boots, which are marked down to bottom prices. Full stock in all other departments, selling extremely cheap. Call and see for yourself. 36-tf.

GOLDEN WEDDING. On Tuesday last Mr. and Mrs. James Edwards celebrated their golden wedding. A large number of their friends and well-wishers paid them a visit during the day and evening and numerous valuable gold articles were presented them.

CONFISCATED.—P. C. McGhee confiscated a quantity of whiskey at a booth near the Circus grounds on circus day. The liquor has since been emptied on the Market Square. The law passed by the Ontario Legislature at its last session gives the Police this power.

The Belleville Ontario has been enlarged and otherwise greatly improved. The Ontario is an excellent paper, ably edited and conducted and has justly earned the success that it is meeting with. It is one of our best exchanges, always neatly and well written up.

School was not largely attended last week. First the oppressive heat prevented a large assembling and latterly, the stupendous display of Cole's Circus threw the school boys large and small into an unnatural state of excitement. The opportunity to study natural history and watch the elephants ought not to be missed.

SHIPMENT OF CATTLE. Mr. Patrick Moher of Douro sold 46 head of excellent Butcher's cattle to Mr. R Wainwright on Tuesday. He also shipped on his own account a car load of first class cattle for the Montreal Market, via. the G. J. R. on the same day. Mr. Moher is one of Douro's most thrifty farmers.

LACROSSE MATCHES. A meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club, was held on Tuesday evening to consider challenges received from the Millbrook and Kingston clubs. The second eleven will play Millbrook at that place to-morrow and it was decided to play Kingston on the 21st of this month on the Peterborough ground.

CONFIRMATION SERVICES.—His Lordship the Bishop of the Toronto Diocese, confirmed thirty-one candidates in St. John's church on Sunday morning last. In the evening at St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, forty-five received the rite of confirmation. St. Luke's was so crowded that it was impossible for a large number to gain admittance.

CONSTABLE MCGHEE deserves credit for his promptness in confiscating the liquor which was being illegally disposed of on circus day, although strongly solicited to withdraw the case.

ON WEDNESDAY afternoon a special meeting of the Council was called for 7.30 p.m., to consider the water-works question, Mr. J. F. Dennistoun having prepared the By-Law, in accordance with the proposition of Mr. Gamble and the order of the Council.

SOOTHING SYRUPS SUPERSEDED. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the best remedy for infants teething, it is safe pleasant and reliable, and cures promply all forms of Bowel Complaints. For Canadian Cholera or Cholic and Dysentery of either children or adults there is no better remedy. 36-2t

A RIGHTEOUS PENALTY.—A leading hotel-keeper here telegraphed lately for twenty kegs of lager beer. The brewers sent him seventy, and now the conundrum is "what will he do with it?" The brewers say the telegraph company made a mistake.—Review.] They should compel the telegraph operators to drink the extra fifty kegs of lager.—Belleville Intelligencer.

FASHIONABLE.—Colds are now en regle. Blooming colds are preferred as they paint the nose a beautiful pink and contrast handsomely with the rest of the face. The ultra nobby sport "kerchu" colds but as they verge on a sneeze they are unpleasant and undignified. As a consolation, we would mention that coals have increased in price and accordingly only the wealthy can indulge in the luxury.

We are always pleased to see any of our business men prosper and we are glad to be able to announce that Mr. D. Bellighem has purchased from Mr. Cox the shop, dwelling, factory and machinery at present occupied by him in the manufacture of Furniture. Mr. B. is a pushing business man, prompt in everything, obliging to his patrons, and believes in using printer's ink judiciously. Hence his success.

On Sunday Drs. O'Sullivan and Harvey amputated the leg of Miss Henderson, of Cavan, who has been suffering for some time of Cancer in the knee. She had came to town for medical treatment and was under Dr. O'Sullivan's care for the past few weeks. It had progressed so far that amputation was found necessary, but she had been so debilitated from the disease that the operation was more than she could bear and she succumbed on Monday morning.

CARELESSNESS.—It is said that over three-quarters of the business men on George Street have all their money sunk in their business and that if they were burnt out, they would have nothing to start on except their insurance money. Yet in the face of these facts, half of them are carelessly negligent of their policies, many of which would 'run out,' unknown to their owners did not the Insurance Companies give notice. Men leave their whole future prospects depend on fate and the watchfulness of a soulless corp oration.

A LARGE PURCHASE.—Our readers should not fail to read the announcement made by Messrs. W. Fairweather & Co. in another page. With their usual enterprise they have made a very large purchase of Fall Dry Goods embracing all lines, and which, during the remainder of this month they will offer at three-fourths their regular retail price. Read the quotations announced, and when shopping don't forget to call and inspect the goods, and secure some of the genuine bargains which are being offered.

PROMPT PAYMENTS.—Mr. W. B. Kelly of Bridgenorth had a barn and contents destroyed by fire in Eanismore, on the 4th of September. They were insured with Mr. Geo. A. Cox in, the Canada Fire and Marine Company. He received a cheque for the insurance in full on the 10th inst. Mr. John Armstrong of Otonabee, had a barn and stable consumed by fire in Verulam on the 3rd inst. He received a cheque for the full insurance $375 on the 9th inst., through Mr. Cox from the Royal Insurance Co'y. These carry their own lesson.

PETERBORO' AT THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.—In the prize list published in the Globe of Monday last for the above exhibition we see that the Auburn Woollen Co. took first prize and Silver Medal for best cassimere assortment, 4 pieces, also first prize and silver medal for best tweed, medium finished, spring and fall, 6 pieces each. Mr. E. J. Hartley took first prize $4 for best ornamental Penmanship, and Miss McKibbon of Smith, received 2nd prize for best silk quilt. We congratulate the exhibitors on their success. The goods manufactured by the Auburn Woollen Co'y are of a superior make and quality.

Mr. H. P. Dwight, of Toronto, who for many years filled the position of General Manager of the Montreal Telegraph Company, has received notification of his appointment as General Manager of the Great North-West Company, which include, in its system the lines formerly operated by the Montreal, Dominion, and North-West Companies. Of course the notification is merely formal, and on the amalgamation of the old lines it was understood that Mr. Dwight should assume the management under the new order of things. He is looked upon as the father of Canadian telegraphy, and his name is almost a household word in that connection. The strides made by the Company and the success which has attended it financially are due in a large measure to his suggestions and the energy and practical common sense which has characterized his management.

ADVERTISING.—Seldom or never have we seen the same truths so pithily and so pointedly dealt with as in the stanzas subjoined. As a rule the non-advertising class of merchants are the ones to complain about "hard times," "town being killed," and all that sort of thing, while they overlook real causes of the loss of trade:

For towns must grow, and trade increase,
By nerve and enterprise,
And they who'd live must have the pluck
To risk and advertise.

But there are men in our town
Who do not advertise:
Good customers go past their doors,
The cheery, cash likewise.

And when they post their books at night,
They're the saddest men in town,
And ever and anon they moan;
"The place is going down."

THE RURAL CANADIAN. The first number of this really excellent agricultural paper is before us, and as a guarantee for its success all that is necessary to mention is that Mr. W. F. Clarke, one of the best authorities on agricultural matters, sits in the editorial chair. The publisher is the well-known house of C. Blackett Robinson, 5 Jordan street, Toronto. A glance through the first or September number will at once show that this fortnightly farmers' paper covers a wide range of topics, all of exceeding interest to the farmers, dairymen, livestock dealers, fruit growers, bee keepers, gardeners, etc. No farmer should be without a thorough, reliable and well edited agricultural paper like the Rural Canadian.

In these days, no matter what your means, there is no excuse for being out of the fashion.

D. CAMERON, has constantly in stock large assortment of Cloths Tweeds etc., and ranging from the cheapest to the best grades, from which the purchaser may select to suit his purse.

In every class of goods the best value and good material are guaranteed, and the cheapest suit is made up in good style and as fashionably cut, to suit the wearer's taste, as the most expensive.

Special attention is paid to the Order Department, which is under the advertiser's personal supervision. Satisfaction and perfect fit are guaranteed with every order.

Attention is directed to the extensive stock of Gents' Furnishings, comprising Shirts, Collars, Cuffs, Ties, Underclothing, Hosiery, Handkerchiefs, etc., in every variety, in which special value is given to customers.

Death of President Garfield.

THE STRUGGLE ENDED.

Peaceful Close of a Noble Life.

After a struggle with death, prolonged for eighty days and eighty nights, President Garfield peacefully passed away on Monday night last, at 10.35 p.m., to the intense regret of the whole world, who have been watching the daily reports with the expectation of his recovery, so warmly cherished for so long a time. Many a time during these ten weeks the reports from the patient's bedside have given good ground for the hope that he would ultimately win in the struggle, but for some time past the frequency and severity of the relapses have increased to such an extent that to look for a favorable ending was evidently to hope against hope. For this reason the President's death, though it will shock so many, will surprise none. His removal to Long Branch a few days ago was admittedly a last resort, but even if the step had been taken promptly after the shooting was done, it is not probable that it would have saved his life. His cheerfulness, his patience, his courage, his submission to the will of his physicians, his manly fortitude from the beginning, made a hero of him in the eyes of the world. He dies the victim of assassination by the hand of a miserable wretch. The late President was in the best sense of the term a self-made man. He learned when very young what it was to contend against difficulties, and every step from his western forest to the White House was marked by earnest and conscientious effort. He began life for himself as a driver on the tow-path of a canal. He acquired by dint of extraordinary effort a liberal education, which he at once put to practical use as a teacher. When the war of the secession broke out he threw himself into the struggle with impetuous ardour and marked ability, and as a non-professional soldier performed achievements which placed him ahead of very many of the Generals trained at West Point. In Congress he easily made his mark, not only as an incorruptible and fearless exposer of wrong, but also as an able administrator and a powerful debater. Altogether he was better deserving of the nomination to the Presidency than any of his rivals before the Republican Convention of 1880, if, indeed, a man can be said to have rivals who was not himself a candidate. Had it been his fate to fulfil his term he would in all probability have acquitted himself as honorably in the Presidential chair as he had done in the tented field or the halls of Congress. He began well, and the nation's warm sympathy during his illness shows a deep-seated confidence that he would have gone on as he had begun.

THE CAUSE OF DEATH.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 20, 1 a.m.—Previous to his death the only words spoken by the President were that he had a severe pain in his heart. It is supposed by the surgeons that death was occasioned by a clot of blood forming on the heart. Dr. Bliss was the first one notified of the President's expression of pain, and upon entering the room he at once saw the end was near. The members of the family were immediately summoned to the bedside. All arrived, and perfect quiet prevailed. Mrs. Garfield bore the trying ordeal with great fortitude, and exhibited unprecedented courage. She gave way to no paroxysms of grief, and after death became evident she quietly withdrew to her own room. At his bedside, holding his poor emaciated hand in her own, and watching with anguish unutterable the fast vanishing sands of life, sat the faithful and devoted wife and heart-stricken widow. She, of course, was labouring under a terrible strain, and despite her efforts tears flowed from her eyes, and her lips became drawn by her noble attempt to bear the burden with which she had been afflicted. Mollie Garfield was greatly affected, and bursts of tears flowed from the child's eyes, notwithstanding her effort to follow the example of her mother.

THE DEATH SCENE

was one never to be forgotten. Perfect quiet prevailed, and there was not a murmur heard while the President was sinking. After death had been pronounced the body was properly arranged by Dr. Boynton. Telegrams were immediately sent to the President's mother, in Ohio, and his sons, Harry and James, now at Williams College; also to Vice-President Arthur, and other prominent public men.

A WELL-EARNED PANEGYRIC.

The Tribune says: Worthier men than Lincoln and Garfield this country has never seen in high station, and each was taken in the early term of his power, and in the prime of manhood. Toil and poverty, hard life and iron fortune, had not put out the fire of genius; foul disease had spared them, the deadly bullets of many battles had missed the life of Garfield, but the shot of the assassin took each from a sorrowing nation, the goodness of the infinite Father to this nation being so great that even in speechless sorrow and wondering the people can only bow, submit, and faintly strive to learn the lesson which their great loss teaches, blessing meanwhile the power which has given to this nation so grand a specimen of true manhood to be an example for all time to its youth. The President's death will cause less shock, but far more sorrow, than if he had been shot dead on the 2nd of July. There has been time to learn that the Government cannot be shaken by the death of any man, however high, great, or good. But there has been time, too, to learn how great and good a man was lifted to the Presidency by the votes of last November. Eleven long weeks fifty millions of people have sat by him as he lay in the presence of death, watched each pulse and breath, and caught each word that fell from his lips. No man has ever been better known by the people than the President whom they have just lost, and none has ever been more loved. The President has shown himself so grand, so true, so patient, and living so brave and faithful, that the pain of losing him is infinitely greater to-day than it would have been when first he fell. A great nation holds him in its heart of hearts, and there he will live forever. The President held the helm only four months, but the work done in that short time will bless the land for ages. No other administration has ever done more for the good of the country than this which had just begun. The cold and passionless verdict of history, though it may find fault or flaw, will more than satisfy those who loved Garfield most, and will place his name far toward the highest in the list of human rulers.

THE GARFIELD FUND.

The death of the President has led to enquiries in regard to the fund raised for the benefit of Mrs. Garfield. The whole amount subscribed is $157,599, of which every dollar has been paid, except a single subscription of $5,000, which was made on the condition that $245,000 were first raised. There would seem to be reasons for expecting a considerable addition to the fund now that the President has gone. Individuals have made liberal promises of what they would do in the event of his death. Some even felt that there was an impropriety in the attempt to raise subscriptions while he was still alive, with the hope of recovery; their gift would create a feeling of personal obligation that might prove embarrassing hereafter. Some were restrained from giving lest their motives should be misunderstood. That objection is now removed. No one need fear the imputation of unworthy motives, for which there is no longer place.

ARRANGING FOR THE FUNERAL.

ELBERON, Sept. 20.—The following arrangements for the funeral services have been ordered by the Cabinet:—The remains of the late President of the United States will be removed to Washington by special train on Wednesday, Sept. 21st, leaving Elberon at 10 a.m. On reaching Washington at 4 p.m. detachments from the United States army, and from the marines of the navy will be in attendance to do escort duty. The remains will lie in state in the rotunda of the Capitol Thursday and Friday, and will be guarded by deputations from the Executive Departments and officers of the Senate and House of Representatives. Religious ceremonies will be observed in the Rotunda at three o'clock Friday afternoon. At five o'clock the remains will be transferred to the funeral car, and will be removed to Cleveland, Ohio, via the Pennsylvania Railroad, arriving there on Saturday at 5 p.m. In Cleveland the remains will lie in state until Monday, at 2 p.m., and will then be interred in Lakeview Cemetery. No ceremonies are expected in the cities and towns along the route of the funeral train beyond the tolling of bells. Detailed arrangements for the final sepulchre are committed to the municipal authorities of Cleveland under the direction of the Executive of the State of Ohio.

Secretary of State.

CANADA'S OFFICIAL MESSAGE.

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—There is universal sorrow here on account of President Garfield's untimely death. Citizens appear to feel it with all the force of personal bereavement. Flags at half-mast are shown from the Departmental buildings, hotels, and many private residences. By the request of the Premier the intended demonstration and presentation of the civic address of congratulation to him on his return to Canada in restored health, which was to have taken place this afternoon, is postponed till after the President's funeral. On receipt of the sad news Sir William Ritchie, as Deputy Governor-General, telegraphed the British Minister at Washington as follows:—

Be pleased to convey to the President, and through him to the people of the United States, the deep sympathy felt by the Government and people of the Dominion of Canada for the sad loss the United States have sustained in the melancholy death of their late President.

In view of the intimate and friendly relations subsisting between the two countries, the view is freely expressed that it would be fitting that a deputation representing the Canadian Government should attend President Garfield's funeral.

CANADIAN OFFICIAL FLAGS.

The following was telegraphed yesterday from Ottawa:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
OTTAWA, Sept. 20, 1881.

The flags at the Citadel, Quebec, Fort Henry, Kingston, and at all other military posts, and also on all Government buildings and vessels, will be hoisted to-day half-mast high, and be so maintained on each day from sunrise to sunset until after the funeral of the late President of the United States, General James Abram Garfield, and it is requested by His Excellency the Governor-General that the flags on all public municipal, and private buildings, and on all ships, be placed and maintained in like manner from sunrise to sunset during the same period, in token of the sorrow felt by Canada and its people for the calamity which has befallen the great nation with whom the Dominion is connected by so many ties of friendship and of kindred.

By command of His Excellency the Governor-General,

JOHN A. MACDONALD.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

The Governor General has set apart Thursday the 20th of October as the annual Thanksgiving Day. During the past year we have enjoyed almost every blessing which providence has to bestow on nations, and we trust that this day will be made an occasion among all worshippers of God as a general day of thanksgiving for all the blessings which we have received during the year.

ANDREWS' BAZAR FOR SEPTEMBER.—This number of this sterling journal surpasses anything in the line of fashion papers ever attempted in this country. In addition to its regular contents, with this number is presented a superb lithographic plate, representing Mrs. Garfield, the Empress of Austria, the Queen of Spain, the Princess of Wales, the Queen of Italy and the Princess Louise attired in the latest Parisian Fall costumes. This costly feature is an earnest of the expressed purpose of the publishers to so perfect ANDREWS' BAZAR as to make it emphatically the best paper of its class extant. We would advise our readers to examine the handsome premium offers also made in this number. Published by The Queen Publishing Company, W. R. Andrews, Manager, New York, to whom 10 cents can be sent for sample copy.

Ross has promised to cover Hanlan's deposit as soon as he reaches Portland. The following are Ross' earnings last season and up to date:—At Providence regatta, $3,000; in England, $2,000; at Ottawa, $900, and at Toronto, $1,500—total, $7,300.

LOCAL NEWS.

HIGH PRICES FOR GRAIN.—The market is beginning to show great activity. The fall season has commenced and the farmers, tempted by the extreme prices paid by our dealers, are rushing in their wheat and other produce at a lively rate. Our market is the best around and the extremely lively competition among the numerous buyers always ensure the farmers the highest price for everything they have. Prices ruled unusually high last week and the present week. On Thursday last as high as $1.31 was paid for an exceptionally good sample and yesterday afternoon the market closed at $1.29. A large quantity of grain found its way to town and a good market at present prices may be looked for while they continue.

"UP SALT CREEK."—The announcement that Messrs Baker and Farron, two comedians of world-wide fame will give one of their humorous and amusing entertainments in Bradburn's Hall on Monday evening next will, we feel certain, be sufficient to fill the house to overflowing. "Foreigners, or Up Salt Creek" is the title of the comedy, and is a social satire, illustrating in a humorous manner the various fortunes of successful immigrants. It is of a much higher order of merit than plays of this kind generally are and offers food for reflection as well as occasion for laughter. Mr. Baker assumes a German character throughout, while Mr. Farron gives a very amusing picture of a modern Irishman. The press everywhere speaks of them in the highest terms.

NEW GRAIN TESTERS.—The Inspector of Weights and Measures, Mr. Cahill has received a copy of the order-in-council of the 20th inst, respecting grain testers, and a description of the automatic apparatus for filling the same. The apparatus consists (1) of a substantial stand, so made as to carry without shaking the hopper when filled with grain, and to this end the foot of the stand is filled with lead; (2) of an arm swinging freely on the top of a stand and carrying the hopper on its outer end; (3) the hopper for holding a sample of the grain to be tested is an inverted frustrum of a hollow cone, 11 inches in height, 7 inches inside diameter at the large end, and 1.15 inches at the smaller end. The orifice at the small end of the cone is closed by a valve, which can be turned to one side so as to permit of the run of grain into the tester, and the standard must be of such height that the lower end of the cone shall be exactly 2½ inches above the top of the testing cup. The apparatus is calculated to have fair dealing between the buyer and seller of the grain. It should be well received

LACROSSE MATCH.—Considerable disappointment was caused among the members of the Lacrosse Club and the admirers of the game here upon the receipt, yesterday forenoon, of a telegram from the Kingston Club, stating that they would be unable to play the proposed match for the Gildersleeve Cup, which was announced to take place yesterday afternoon, owing to their inability to muster a team. The home team feel anything but pleased, as they had very complete arrangements made for the game and the reception of the visitors, and think that they have been treated rather shabbily, as but the previous evening a telegram was received from the Kingston Club assuring them they would arrive in town on the noon train. In order to make up, in a manner, for the disappointment, a scratch match between members of the home club was played during the afternoon, which was witnessed by a good number. A fuller explanation from the "Limestone City brethren of the sticks" is very desirable, and will be anxiously looked for by the Peterborough boys

Notes and Comments.

Toronto Tribune:—What amuses us is the zeal and enterprise displayed by the Mail in patting every religious body on the back, turn by turn, so that it may shine as a chosen light before them all. No doubt the N. P. must have something to do with this peculiar manifestation.

Sir Sidney Waterlow, now in Toronto, in an interview stated that he regarded the "Fair Trade" movement as a mere device to catch working-men's votes, and was convinced that the English Conservative party had no intention of restoring protection, which, so far as England was concerned, was an impossibility.

A young man named Hammond, a member of the London police force, his mother and sister, have all confessed to being guilty of procuring an abortion on the person of the latter. Much sympathy is expressed for Hammond, who has been led by a desire to shield his sister from disgrace to commit so serious a crime.

Toronto Telegram:—Messrs. Blake and Mackenzie set a good example to colonial politicians in respectfully declining ribbons and stars, believing them to be unadapted to this democratic country. But if Sir John thinks he can sleep more soundly by having an additional title hung on the bedpost with the rest of his clothes no one will have a word to say against him getting it.

The Montreal Star wants somebody to invent a means by which girls shall be able to take some other outdoor exercise than a formal, dressed-up walk, after the skipping-rope days are over. Many have not facilities for croquet, lawn tennis, or horseback rides, and they too often show the result in delicate constitutions, narrow chests and pinched waists. True, in this climate our winter sports give us some advantages, and the rush of the tobogganand the whirl of the skates make up for other deprivations. Girls are weak and delicate because they have few facilities for bodily exercise, and because custom chains them to a routine which is calculated to weaken them all the more.

The Toronto World thinks that the American praise of our Northwest is suggestive of an attempt to annex that territory to the United States. It says: "This praise of our Northwest is not lavished for naught. The Americans have an object in view, and the Prairie Farmer does not attempt to conceal what it is. The Farmer is urging Americans to settle in the Northwest and buy farms and occupy them, and when they are a majority let them vote the Northwest into the union. It is a bold scheme, and with fifty millions of people to take hold of it who knows that it might not succeed! Certainly the position of Canada is not strengthened by the policy of the Syndicate in promoting immigration from France, Germany and Scandinavia.

The Thousand Islands have increased enormously in value. Islands which eight years ago were purchased for $40 and $50 are to-day worth from $10,000 to $100,000. Hart's Island, upon which Tom Moore wrote a poem, was sold for $40, and to-day its estimated value is $25,000. Manhattan Island, upon which Seth Green resided for several years, was bought for $50, and was sold by him to Judge Spencer and Mr. Hasbrook, of New York city, and is now valued at $10,000. The four Islands occupied by the sons and relict of Asa L. Packer were bought for $50, and to-day they are appraised at $100,000, although it is not probable they could be bought for any reasonable price. The estimates include, of course, the improvements made upon the islands, but this manifold increase of value has been reached by the outlay of comparatively a few thousand dollars.

The Fort Hope Gleaner—the one who yesterday, with regard to the departure of our volunteers for the camp ground at Picton must have been convinced that it was full time that the people rose up in their might and once for all abolished this costly farce. It will take thousands of dollars to pay the expenses of the drill this year, and we would like some one to point out to us one single advantage that will accrue to the country for this lavish expenditure.

The sufferers by the Michigan fires must have help at once or hundreds and thousands will starve. If no grain or fruit had been grown for three years past the famine could be no worse. The bread for the winter is burned and the seed for the spring, and the desolated sections have no lumber to rebuild, or means to purchase elsewhere. Hundreds of homeless ones are Canadians, and these have an especial claim on our sympathies. Not that Canadians should only help Canadians, for such a calamity breaks down all barriers, but it brings us to a clearer realization of the suffering when an appeal is made to those who have friends and relatives here.

WATERWORKS.

PROPOSED BY-LAW AND RATES.

The following is the proposed Waterworks By-Law and schedule of rates to be charged, as laid before a special meeting of the Town Council on Wednesday evening of last week:—

A By-Law to authorize the Company, hereinafter mentioned, to lay down pipes or conduits for the conveyance of water under streets and public squares of the Town of Peterborough.

Whereas, under sub-section twenty-three of section four hundred and sixty-one of the Municipal Act, the Council of every town is empowered to pass a by-law "For authorizing any corporate Gas or "Water Company to lay down pipes or "conduits for the conveyance of water or "gas under streets or public squares, "subject to such regulations as the Coun"cil sees fit."

And whereas, ——— have, under the provisions of Chapter one hundred and fifty-seven of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, intituled "An Act "respecting Joint Stock Companies, for "supplying cities, towns and villages "with gas and water," taken the necessary preliminary steps for the formation of an incorporated company for the purpose of supplying the Town of Peterborough with pure water for public and private purposes, such company to be known by the name of "The Peterborough Water Company," and have, pursuant to the said Act, presented a petition to the Council of the Town of Peterborough asking the passage of a by-law granting authority to them, as such Company, to lay down pipes for the conveyance of water under the streets and squares and other public places of the said town of Peterborough. And whereas, in the opinion of the said Council, it is expedient and in the general interest of the said Town to grant the said petition, subject to the conditions or regulations hereinafter contained.

Now, therefore, the corporation of the Town of Peterborough, by the Council thereof, enacts as follows:—

(1) That the said intended Water Company shall have the power and authority, and are hereby empowered and authorized to lay down pipes and conduits for the conveyance of water under the streets and public squares of the Town of Peterborough, subject to the conditions or regulations hereinafter contained.

(2) The said authority shall be taken and considered to be subject to the regulations or conditions following, that is to say:—

(a.) The said Water Company shall not at any time break up any such streets or squares in such manner as to cause any unnecessary danger to the public or private property, nor in any way prosecute or perform the work aforesaid so as to render any inconvenience to the inhabitants, but shall use all due and proper care and diligence in the prosecution of said work, and in such manner as to cause as little inconvenience as possible, and that all openings and excavations shall be made under the supervision of a competent superintendent to be appointed by the said Water Company, and approved of by the Council of the Town of Peterborough, and that all proper precautions be taked, and lights placed at night by the said Water Company at all openings or excavations, as a protection to the public from accidents, and that after the breaking up or opening of such streets or public squares and sidewalks respectively from time to time, the said Water Company shall, as soon as possible, consistent with a due and proper performance of their work, relay, replace and level such streets, public squares and sidewalks, and leave them in as good a condition as they were before such openings, breakings, or excavations were made.

(b.) That the mains to be laid by such Water Company, from the source of supply, shall be laid down George street, and as far as Brock street shall be of at least twelve inches in diameter, from thence to King street shall be of at least ten inches in diameter and from thence to Wolf street of at least eight inches in diameter, and shall be provided at all street crossings with the proper description of joints for connecting with pipes of suitable size, for the supplying of water to all such cross streets for public and domestic purposes, and for providing proper circuits of sufficient size to insure as nearly as possible an uninterrupted supply of water at all points served with sufficient pressure thereby.

(c.) That if the supply be provided by pumping directly into the pipes, the pumping machinery and power to drive the same, shall be in duplicate and each set of pumps and power shall be sufficient to throw four separate streams each, through two hundred and fifty feet of hose, each with a one inch nozzle to the height of sixty-five feet, on George street between Hunter street and Charlotte street.

(d.) That should the supply be from a reservoir or by gravitation, the pressure shall be sufficient to throw four such streams, as last mentioned, to the said height on the said part of George street.

(e.) That the system of water pipes shall from time to time be extended by the said Water Company to such portion of the town as the Town Council may from time to time require, the Council making such request on the petition of at least one-half of the property holders interested in any such extension and agreeing to take water for domestic or private purposes at such request, the said Water Company shall forthwith make such extension, provided, however, that the Water Company shall not be required to make any such extension between the fifteenth day of November and the first day of April following, in any year.

(f.) That the annual rate to be charged for water service by the said company shall not exceed the rates set out in the schedule hereto attached, and which is declared to be and form a part of this By-law.

(2.) That before commencing operations under this By-law the said company shall execute and deliver to the Town Clerk, in form to be approved of by the Council, a covenant binding the said Water Company to the full observance of all the regulations and conditions in this By-law contained, and further covenanting to sell out at a valuation to the said Town of Peterborough at any time after ten years from the 31st day of October, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-two, their entire works and appurtenances, and in such valuation nothing to be estimated for good will or monopoly, if any, of the said Water Company, such valuation if not agreed upon, to be fixed and determined by arbitration, the said Water Company choosing one arbitrator, the Town Council by by-law another, and the two so chosen naming a third; but should the said Water Company make default in the appointment of an arbitrator, and of notifying the Town Clerk thereof for thirty days after being requested to name an arbitrator, then the County Judge may, upon the application of the Council of the said Town, or whoever may be then doing the duties now devolving on the County Judge, appoint an arbitrator on behalf of the said Water Company, and should default be made in the appointment of a third arbitrator for fifteen days after the appointment of the arbitrators for the said parties, then the said Judge, or whosoever may at the time discharge the duties now devolving upon him, may appoint such third arbitrator, after notice of the application to make such appointment has been given to the said Water Company, the award of any two in writing to be final, but the town, if not desirous of purchasing at such valuation not to be bound so to do, but in such case they shall pay all costs and expenses of the said Water Company, and others in connection with such arbitration.

(3) It is also further enacted that in any arrangement that may be made with the said Water Company for supplying of hydrants for fire protection, it shall be and form part of such arrangement, that without any further charge all such hydrants shall be used for all such public purposes as the Council of the said town may from time to time direct.

4. It is also further enacted that the said Water Company shall bona fide commence the construction of the said works within two months from the passage of this by-law, and shall have the mains laid down and completed on George street from the source of supply as far south as Wolfe street and as far north as Smith street by the thirty first day of October, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and in the event of default being made by the said Water Company in either of these respects all the power and authority conferred or intended to be conferred by this by-law shall cease and be at an end, and the materials actually laid in the streets forfeited to the Town of Peterborough.

5. And further that should the said Water Company make default in respect of any of the provisions herein contained after the due completion of their mains from Smith street to Wolfe street on George street as aforesaid, and a request in writing shall have been made upon them by direction of the Town Council to make good such default and the same shall remain in default for the period of thirty days, then and in such an event the Town of Peterborough shall forthwith have the right to purchase and acquire the said property of the said Water Company at a valuation to be arrived at and determined in the same manner as if ten years from the passage of this by-law had elapsed.

And further that all the materials, things, articles and appliances of all and every kind used by the said Water Company in and about their works shall be of the best and most approved sorts or description with single or double heads for fire protection, shall be placed properly at all such places as the Council of the said Town may require, on provision being made for the annual payment to the said Water Company of the proper rate therefor either by the undertaking of private persons interested or by local tax on the locality affected by such hydrants.

Midland District Notes.

Compiled, Compiled and Condensed from County and other Convenient Contemporaries.

The Hon. S. H. Blake will lecture in Omemee about the 3rd of October.

The glass works at Napanee are progressing slowly.

Fourteen of Mr. Haslitt's men left Peterborough on Tuesday morning last for the shanties near Minden.

Mr. Shuttford Hewitt, 1st con. of Hope, raised this season seventy-five bushels of beans from three acres of land.

Mr. Samuel J. Wood, Collector of Customs, at Ottawa, died on Tuesday evening last, after a very painful illness.

Upwards of one hundred fine lots were sold at the Midland Land Co.'s sale recently, at prices ranging from $70 to $300.

TORONTO OIL COMPANY are sole manufacturers of Casterine Machine Oil. Infringements will be prosecuted. 1-1y.

There are 240 pupils now attending the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Belleville; 200 of whom came from the western part of the Province.

A son of Mr. Elliott, Reeve of Hope, was run over on Friday. Several ribs were broken, and there is evidence of other serious internal injuries.

Lewis & Boyd's new store at Minden is now filled to its utmost capacity, from cellar to attic, and Mr. Robt. Thompson is placed there as manager.

Some days since a train coming to Peterborough ran over and instantly killed a valuable horse owned by Mr. Wm. Dawson, of Millbrook, and injured two others. The loss is about $400.

Mr. James Eakins has six hundred lambs waiting to go over by the Norseman as soon as she leaves. They are for the New York market. A further shipment of six hundred is be made shortly by the same party.

A Chatham paper says that men are going through this section wishing to purchase corn standing in the field, and offer good figures. One lot of 25 acres is said to have been sold for $220 as it stood.

On Wednesday of last week a barn and the contents, also a stock of stocks, belonging to Mr. John Crosbean, residing near Grafton, were burned to ashes. It was the work of an incendiary. Loss about $2,400, insured for $1,000.

A match was to have been played at Millbrook on Friday, between the second twelve of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club and the first twelve of Millbrook, but, owing to the absence of some of the Millbrook players, the game did not take place.

The population of Omemee is 692, divided as follows:—Methodist, 320; Anglican, 241; Presbyterian, 118; Baptist, 7; Catholic, 4; No Denomination, 1. The total assessment is $135,705.00. The Herald thinks that the census will give them about 750.

At the Belleville Assizes on Tuesday last Wm. and John Ross were convicted of stealing a team of horses and a buggy from a livery man in Trenton and sentenced to to six and three months imprisonment respectively.

Mr. Jas. Hogworthy has 400 car-loads of ties in a boom near the Moira Bridge, waiting to be delivered on contract to the G. T. R. Company. This is equivalent to 40,000 ties. This immense number of ties in a boom reminds a boom in ties.

The bush fires to the North have been very disastrous. A bridge on the Victoria Railway near Kinmount was burned, also the saw mill and a large quantity of lumber belonging to Mr. Ashman, of Lindon. The barns of J. Burmingham and A. Jamieson in the same township were destroyed with contents.

Capt. Malcolmson, who was last with his son on the ill-fated Emma Augusta, Lake Michigan, during the month of July, was well known about Hutcher's Corners.

Hon. Messrs. Aikins and Rowell, now in Manitoba, have referred the matters relating to settlers' rights and the sale of school lands, brought under their notice, to the visiting Ministry of the Interior.

The first lot of through grain—75,000 bushels of wheat from Duluth—is expected at Midland somewhere about the middle of this month, by which time it is expected the elevator there will be in running order.

John Andrew, of the 8th Concession of Dummer, died very suddenly on Wednesday morning. He worked the previous day, and while engaged in unloading buckwheat he turned to his companions and said he felt sick. He was carried to the house, and death resulted at about five o'clock.

Mr. Thomas Stillman, of Seymour west, has a small quantity of sugar cane growing on his premises, from seed which he purchased from the Farmers' Advocate office. The cane has flourished well in its new soil, as shown by one of the stalks which has grown to the height of 9½ feet.

John J. Tilley, the Port Hope Inspector of schools, says that he has made the trip from Collingwood to Chicago three times, and each and every time the passenger he sailed on has been burned to the water's edge. The last one he sailed on was the Columbia, and the first one that Mr. Tilley sailed on. Is it not a singular coincidence?

A Whitby girl, not over twenty years of age, named Mary Caffey, found death and dishonor in Chicago on Friday last, through abortion. She was a beautiful girl, and went to that city to assist in the support of a widowed mother and sister. Before entering full particulars as to cause of death her fond mother followed her to the tomb.

The initial steps have been taken for the formation of a Gas Company in Lindsay, to be known as the "Consumers' Gas Company of Lindsay," composed of the following gentlemen:—Messrs. James Austin, Toronto; Hon. S. C. Wood, J. K. Dundas, J. C. Taylor, S. Armstrong, John A. Barron and Edward Hoodless all of Lindsay. The capital stock of the company has been placed at $50,000, divided into 2,000 shares of $25 each.

On Thursday evening of last week Dr. Ormiston and his nephew, Thomas Green, were driving in the vicinity of Tanner's barn, Whitby, at the time the building was struck by lightning. The Doctor descended within a few feet of the carriage, knocking Mr. Green out and stunning him, and for the moment paralyzing the Doctor. Mr. Green soon recovered consciousness, and though feeling the effects of the shock for some hours, fortunately suffered no other harm. Had the carriage been a few feet further on all would have no doubt perished.

The Reformers of West York will gather at Richmond Hill station to-day and have a grand demonstration in honour of the Liberal leaders and Liberal principles. The Association have made arrangements for a monster pic-nic in the grove near the depot. Addresses are expected from the Hon. Edward Blake, Hon. Alex. Mackenzie, G. W. Ross, M. P., Hon. O. Mowat, Hon. C. F. Fraser, Hon. A. S. Hardy, Hon. S. C. Wood, Hon. T. P. Pardee, Hon. Adam Crooks, P. Patterson, M. P. P., Dr. Widdifield, M. P. P., and G. W. Badgerow, M. P. P. Such an array of oratorical talent ought to bring out a very large assemblage of the tax-payers of York, and others who are interested in the just administration of the affairs of the country.

CANADIAN.

A Western paper says:—Some of the farmers around here who have sown their fall wheat think they will have to sow it a second time, as the ground is so dry and warm; they fear that it has roasted the wheat and that it won't grow.

The tide of emigration from Germany is increasing so as to again excite the minds of the authorities, and it is announced that the Minister of the Interior is preparing a law to regulate it, having special reference to emigration agencies.

E. Herbert, of Brantford, who it will be remembered cleared off with Miss Weatbrook about the end of August and was married in Paris, has been tried for perjury and abduction and was sent up for trial.

Mr. James Young, M. P. P., of Galt, who has been elected President of the Provincial Mechanics' Institute Association for eleven successive years, announces that he will not be a candidate at the approaching meeting in London. Mr. Young has done good service, and his retirement will be regretted.

The busy bee has become a regular nuisance in Woodstock. It is said there are over five hundred hives within the limits of the corporation.

A few of the best class of farmers have been moving through the country purchasing steers and young cattle for fattening purposes during the coming winter. These native buyers, though paying good figures, are very careful in their choice of animals, buying nothing of an inferior grade. This system of home-buying operates against the interests of buyers from a distance, and is equally profitable to the farmer who sells.

RURAL NEW YORKER.—The fair number of this sterling agricultural journal is just issued and should be seen to be appreciated, containing as it does a wealth of information on every agricultural topic. The current number contains the announcement of the free seed distribution for 1881-82, which includes several novelties, whose value has been thoroughly tested. Apart from being the best agricultural periodical on the continent, which is too generally acknowleged to admit of contradiction, the farming community owes a debt to the Rural for maintaining in the interest of its subscribers, an experimental farm, where all the most approved methods of cultivation are practiced, and the results published from time to time. Many of the most valuable fruits, grain and vegetables now in general cultivation, were originally sent out by the Rural—such for instance as the Clawson wheat, Beauty of Hebron and White Elephant potato, Cuthbert raspberry, &c., and plenty of other good things are promised to follow.

Agricultural Department.

IMPORTANCE OF DRAINAGE.

THE SUBJECT DISCUSSED BY THE AVONBANK FARMER'S CLUB.

Mr. Thos. Steele, sen., introduced this subject, taking up the different points in detail. We will briefly notice what he claimed as the benefits derived from draining. Drained lands can be sown earlier in the spring, allowing the crops a longer time to mature. There is less labor needed in the cultivation. The tillage is invariably better than it is on land where portions are wet, soured, and springy. Clover and fall wheat are not so liable to heave out and winter-kill on warm, drained land. Undrained land of a clayey nature becomes saturated with water which sours, and is dry weather packs, and runs together, scarcely allowing the rains to penetrate. Drained land is open and porous, the water being drawn off, air takes its place, making the earth mellow and friable. Rains in falling penetrate through the drains, warming the land, and in filtering through leave the plant food where a great benefit is derived; instead of rushing off over a surface hard as a road, and in many cases washing the top soil. The power of a fallow to retain moisture in comparison with sod or stubble lands is a good example of the difference in hard or mellow, or what is equivalent, drained or undrained lands. Mr. Steele entered very minutely into the proper mode to underdrain a field. He thought that in Dewars, in the majority of cases, drains four rods apart would be sufficient, and advised digging them three feet deep, as they draw a greater distance and are cheaper than shallow ones, as a less number is required. The main or leading drain should be six inches deeper and a slight turn made in the ends of the drains leading into it, allowing the currents of water to mingle gradually. Draining should be done in dry weather but it is better to utilize odd times than to neglect it altogether. The speaker then described the many different kinds of material used. In regard to tile or lumber he thought the cost about equal and if the tile were laid as solid even bottom was found, but where land varied and was intersected by spots of quicksand lumber would prove more satisfactory. His estimate of the cost of draining was twenty dollars per acre. The first ten acres thoroughly underdrained, the increased productiveness would in a short term of years drain the whole farm.

A good discussion followed, the speaker generally endorsing and agreeing with the views of Mr. Steele, who is an enthusiast on draining, and claims to have originated the agitation resulting in the present Drainage Act, but says the rates of interest charged are too high to have it largely utilized.

SAID TO PREVENT SCABBY POTATOES.

In an exchange the writer recommends the use of leaves as assistance in the growing of smooth-skinned potatoes. The result of experiments on one acre of land, three-quarters of which was manured in the usual way, and one-quarter with forest leaves, which had been used for banking his house the previous winter, and which had been drawn into his barnyard as an absorbent for his cow-stable. The last quarter of an acre had three times as many flowers as the rest of the piece, and the seed-balls formed and grew after the fashion of years ago. When he dug the potatoes a more striking difference was apparent. While three-quarters of the piece yielded scabby, rough potatoes of all sizes, the last quarter gave out nice, smooth potatoes of much more than usual size.

FALL SEED WHEAT.

Hon. T. N. Gibbs writes to the Oshawa Vindicator:—As farmers have been pretty successful in growing winter wheat this season along the front townships of Lake Ontario, I would suggest that wherever practicable that the Red Winter wheat should be tried. It is a quality of wheat extensively grown in Western Ontario, and gives general satisfaction to miller, baker and consumer. As far as I can learn, it comes nearest to filling the gap caused by the absence of Fife wheat, that can now be grown in that section. It will be found a harder wheat than the Clawson, or other grades of white wheat now being sown. The flour made from it pleases bakers much better, being very much stronger. The quality that comes into market this year is excellent, and I hope will be extensively sown this fall. I have received two cars of Red Winter this week from Park Hill, and have no doubt seed of the finest kind could be obtained from that section."

GROW MAIZE.

A writer to the London Times recommends British farmers to grow maize as fodder for horses and cattle. He says he finds the corn an excellent substitute for hay, and the climate makes no difficulty in raising it so far that the leaves may be cut off and dried, as is done in parts of the United States. The unsatisfactory nature of the hay crop lately will give some importance to the suggestion in the eyes of British agriculturists. It is said that straw is actually being imported from Canada into Scotland for use as fodder.

FLESH AND FAT PRODUCERS.

The American Agriculturist makes up from the published analyses of the most eminent agricultural chemists the following table, exhibiting the relative nutritive value of different feeds. It corresponds strictly with the experience of many noted English feeders, and is probably the most trustworthy information yet collected in so compact a form:—

	Flesh.	Fat.
Turnips	1	0
Rutabagas	1	7
Carrots	1	7
Mangolds and Kohlrabi	2	8
Straw	3	16
Potatoes	2	17
Brewers' grain	5½	13
Wheat and barley	12	64
Dried brewers' grain	16	70
Earth nut cake	20	40
Beans (English field)	21	66
Linseed	23	92
Bran meal	61	77
Locust beans	7	72
Hay (early cut)	8	50
Millet (seed)	8	76
Buck wheat	9	60
Malt	9	76
Rye	11	72
Oats	12	63
Corn	12	66
Pulse nut meal	18	66
Tares (seed)	27½	70
Linseed cake	28	56
Bran and coarse mill stuff	31	54
Rape cake	31	58
Decorticated earth nut cake	39	45
Decorticated cotton seed cake	41	77

It will be seen from the above, that cotton-seed meal has no superior as a flesh-former and that for fattening it is better than every other article of stock feed. In a very short time it has established itself, both in this country and in Europe, as the food for beef cattle and for dairy purposes.

IT is a source of health because it keeps the organs in a natural healty tone. It acts as a relish, promotes perfect digestion, and purifies the blood, thereby keeping the animal in a free and glossy condition. TRY IT! BUY IT!

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks reducing our oats one-quarter and using bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen.—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Yours etc., GEO. LARATT,
Manager P. B. & M. Co.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents.—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you praised of for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

The Credit Valley Railway has been completed to St. Thomas. This gives Toronto direct access to one of the richest agricultural sections of Canada, and also opens a new leading thoroughfare toward the great west.

The Manitoba Law Society is going to keep down the number of lawyers if big fees willl do it. For primary examination, $50; call as barrister, $100; for all barristers in other provinces of the Dominion, $158.—Toronto World.

Mr. W. H. Fuller, Clerk of the Crown at Kingston, died suddenly on Wednesday. He was a brilliant student of Queen's University, and received the degrees of B.A. and M.A. He was called to the Bar in 1871, but soon after gave his chief attention to newspaper work, and was for some years previous to his appointment as Clerk of the Crown connected with the British Whig.

The Boston Post says:—"The British flag waves over the President's cottage at Long Branch. The cottage is owned by an Englishman, but as he was kind enough to offer it to the President, free of charge, let us not growl because the red cross of St. George disputes title with the stars and stripes. The two greatest nations of the world pray earnestly for the President's recovery, and the flags of the two wave over his head. It is something to be proud of, not to resent."

The bush fires in the Parry Sound district have done immense damage. There has been no rain of any account since June, and many of the streams have dried up. One of these fires has been traversing the townships of Macdougall, Ferguson and Cutling for the past three months, destroying upwards of 15,000 acres of fine timber in its progress.—St. Thomas Journal.

The Fair Trade Doctrine does not seem to be making rapid progress in England. Two of those supporting the new departure in favor of following the example of Canada in the ideas propounded here, and apparently ratified at the last general Dominion election, were expelled from the Trades Union Congress because they represented bogus unions.

It is finally settled that the Princess Louise will sail on the 20th of October in the Parisian, and that her departure has been timed that she will not reach Quebec before the Governor-General will return from his North-West tour. Even more elaborate arrangements are being made than heretofore for the comfort of H. R. H. by the Montreal steamship company. A suite of rooms will be magnificently fitted up for the accommodation of the Princess and those persons who accompany and attend her.

Mr. Duncan McIntyre, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, while in Toronto a few days ago was interviewed by a Mail reporter. Mr. McIntyre said that track-laying across the prairie is proceeding at the rate of a mile and a half per day, and that he expects the railway will reach the Rocky Mountains in two years from now. The Thunder Bay branch he believes will be ready for use in July next year, so that in twelve-month's time there will be a railway connection through Canadian Territory with Manitoba and the prairie region.

The committee who have the memorial to the late Hon. George Brown in charge find themselves in possession of sufficient funds to proceed to the immediate execution of the work. They have resolved to construct a bronze statue, twelve feet in height, and it is expected that the work will be finished about a year from the present time. In addition to the $5,000, which is the price of the statue, the Committee are in possession of a further sum which will assist in the construction of the pedestal.

At a conference between Sir Charles Tupper and the Local Executive of British Columbia on Friday, the latter agreed to convey all the coal lands of Vancouver Island, including agricultural land, length and breadth east and west, to the Dominion, in consideration of the construction of the Island Railway at an early date. The late government previously contended that they were only obliged to convey lands sixty-five miles long and twenty miles broad between Nanaimo and Esquimault. The new arrangement increases the tract to 144 miles long and 40 wide.

Wooden sidewalks are, says the Hamilton Times, becoming very expensive, and as every few years they have to be relaid, municipal authorities are looking around for some less expensive material than timber. The people of London believe they have solved the problem, and are gradually replacing the board sidewalks with asphalt. It is claimed that these sidewalks can be laid for 40 cents per square yard, and that they will last twenty years or more, whereas the plank walks cost more and gets out of repair in less than half the time. The delegation of the Dundas Town Council, which went to London to investigate the matter, are said to be convinced of the merits of asphalt, and will recommend that $1,000 a year be spent in putting down footpaths of that material in place of the gravel walks now in existence.

Chatham Tribune:—By a telegram to the Toronto Globe, we are informed that the Dominion Government do not intend to appear in behalf of the Canada Temperance Act, in the appeal against it by the Licensed Victuallers in New Brunswick. This decision on the part of the Government, if it does nothing else, places it most emphatically on the side of the liquor traffic and against the temperance people. What could they do which would be more consistent, than defend an Act which was and is the legislation of the Dominion, when that law is questioned, and its fitness, its right to exist, seriously discussed. The Dominion Government know that a large proportion of the Canadian electorate is strongly in favour of prohibitory legislation, and it could do nothing with a better grace than put in a retainer, that the question might not have been an ex parte representation. We feel very much impressed with the idea that the present Dominion Government is not in favour with prohibitory legislation, as set forth in the Canada Temperance Act.

SAD ACCIDENT.

There have been more accidents this season on the Grand Junction Railway than any other road in Canada. On Monday another name was added to the list of those who have died a victim to Railway negligence and want of forethought. Martyn Huston a young man, well known in Peterborough about 19 years of age, in all the strength and brightness of youth, in less than twenty seconds was sent home to his last resting place. While connecting the bell rope, which ought to have been adjusted at the station, he slipped from the last freight car, from which he was about to descend and falling across the rail was severed in two and died almost without a moan. His parents had tried to persuade him to stay at home that morning as he felt unwell and unsteady but not wishing to lose time and disappoint his employers he went to work never to return again. At the time of the accident a thick fog was hanging in the air and this perhaps caused him to loose his footing. What is more, the road is not of the most level, and to this fact taken with other causes, can be ascribed his unfortunate death. His remains were brought home to his disconsolate and almost distracted parents about 9 o'clock. He was well liked by Railway men and others, being a smart young fellow, a good worker and of an obliging character. His parents have the sympathy of all in their heart-rending bereavement. An inquest was held on Tuesday when a verdict, setting forth the facts as above was brought in. His funeral was attended by a large number of business men and others.

The contract to build the breakwater at Cobourg has been let, price $40,000. Pier to be 200 feet long, 324 feet wide, and built in 14 feet water. 28,000 thousand feet of timber will be required.

BIBLE SOCIETY.

The Committee of the Peterborough Branch of the Bible Society met in the Baptist Church, on Monday evening, at 7 o'clock. Present,—Rev. E. J. Stobo and Messrs Kingan, Nicholls, Ford, Aldridge, Dr. Bell and Dr. Taylor. The Ministers of the Presbyterian churches being at Presbytery, and those of the Methodist and Bible Christian churches holding important business meetings, were unable to be present.

Mr. Nicholls was requested to preside, and after reading a portion of the 119th Psalm, Mr. Kingan lead in prayer.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The Committee, in harmony with a desire of the Directors of the Provincial Societies, agreed to co-operate with its Directors in arranging for a mass meeting of children, sometime previous to the annual meeting, to be addressed by a provisional agent, so as to interest children in the work of the Society.

An account for printing, of $4.50, was ordered to be paid.

It was agreed to divide the town into sections, and to solicit members of the Society to canvas the sections instead of employing and paying an agent, as was done previous to last year. The following divisions were agreed to, and the gentlemen whose names are thereto attached are to be requested to canvas the respective divisions, viz:—

Ward No. 1.—All east of Bethune street, Mr. Greenhow; from Bethune to Park street, Mr. Kingan; all west of Park or Drain street, Col. Haultain.

Ward No. 2.—All east of Park street, Messrs. W. Eastland and John Walton; all west of Park street, W. Aldridge.

Ward No. 3.—The whole of it, Messrs. Nicholls and Ford.

Ward No. 4.—North of Smith street, Dr. Bell; south of Smith street, Dr. Fife; Auburn Section, Mr. Erskine.

Ashburnham.—Mr. Stratton.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of so many ministers it was agreed to call a special meeting on the 29th instant, at 4 o'clock p.m., in the same place, to make arrangements for holding meetings in several rural districts previous to the annual meeting, if possible.

The meeting was closed with prayer by Rev. Mr. Stobo.

THE MODEL FARM.

FIFTH ANNUAL SALE OF CATTLE, SHEEP AND SWINE.

Some 800 or 1,000 people from different parts of Canada and the United States bore testimony to their appreciation of the Experimental Farm stock by their presence at the fifth annual sale which took place on the agricultural college grounds at Guelph on Thursday of last week. The sale may be safely pronounced the greatest success yet held at the Farm, for two very important reasons. First in point of attendance, which almost doubled that of any previous one; and second because of the price obtained. The main object sought for through these sales is not to obtain extravagant figures but to secure a distribution of well-bred animals among Ontario farmers, and to sell at figures which will place the stock within the reach of all. These objects were gained, and while in some cases, and perhaps on the whole, the figures of last year were not obtained, still the sale realized good paying prices. To account for a slight falling off in prices it may be said that the stock did not appear to such advantage as last year, owing to the severe drought, which must have been in no small degree retarding to their development. No excuse however, is necessary as the animals, without exception, would compare favourably with the best herds in the Province. The stock offered included a greater variety and number of cattle and sheep than at any previous sale, and among the number were some of the old stock bulls and rams of the Farm.

The highest price paid for any individual animal among the cattle was that for Eye-bright, an Aberdeen polled heifer, which sold for $306. In sheep the black-faced seemed to have the preference and brought something like 30 per cent better prices than the long wools. There is no doubt that Southdowns are coming forward in the estimation of breeders, and the fact may principally be accounted for because of the demand they have recently had for shipment to the old country. The Southdown, four shear ram, Walsingham brought the highest figure, being $80.

At the close of the sale the recently imported stock were exhibited in the ring and were greatly admired by those present.

BIRTHS.

ENGLISH.—At Peterborough, on the 19th instant, the wife of Mr. Wm. English, of a daughter.

EASTLAND.—At Apsley, on the 16th of September, the wife of Mr. T. G. Eastland, of a daughter.

HUSTON.—Accidentally killed on the Grand Junction Railway, on the morning of the 19th instant, Martin R. Huston, son of Mr. Joseph G. Huston, aged 18 years.

WATER-WORKS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—That a question of so much importance to the town should find so very few taking an interest in it is to be regretted. I have, in a former issue of the EXAMINER, expressed my views on the question, showing that the town should construct and own the water-works, it being the safest and cheapest plan. The opinions of some, that large property holders are alone benefitted, while the smaller ones would have to help bear the burden, is a very silly conclusion. Suppose a fire at an unfortunate moment should take place, with a high wind, such as we have lately had, with everything as dry as tinder, nothing would be left of Peterborough but a mass of smoking ruins. Large property holders could find means of drawing on their accumulated resources to rebuild; but what of the smaller ones? Many would be so crippled as never to rebuild again, and therefore water-works are to them as important as, and more so, than to the former. I do not in any way present the case as being interested, but for the common welfare of the town, as my property, on account of location and construction, pays the minimum rate of insurance charged; nor am I one of the large property holders. I have seen several letters expressing different opinions, but regret the writers have refused to have their names made public, and I fear that out of pure selfishness they try to hinder a project which is as much a necessity as the air we breathe. My views for the building of water-works by the town have all of a sudden taken a turn in the shape to have them constructed by a company, of which Mr. Gamble, of New York, is the principal mover. By this scheme our Municipal Council is bound to force a water-works system on the ratepayers by powers in an Act of Parliament has placed in their hands, and no protest will save us. Mr. Gamble has told us that he will construct the water-works, and it will not cost the town a cent. Peterborough is a fortunate place indeed, to get everything for nothing. The low rate of taxes is therefore no matter for exultation, but regret that they are not lower. How very disinterested Mr. Gamble's proposals to build the water-works are! He makes no stipulations from whence the supply of water has to come, nor does he force us to place a certain number of hydrants. This is an immaterial point. But he tells us that the rate charged will be at the maximum price of $50 per hydrant. He leaves it even at our option to place the hydrants 200, 400 or 800 feet apart, as it suits us. No doubt we will find out later to what distance they have to be placed. A question being raised if we would get pure water brought almost a grin to his face, and very properly, as no one can expect pure water drawn from a filthy source. As a hundred hydrants was mentioned to be required for fire purposes to protect the town, it will be found insufficient according to the By-Law, which provides for 250 feet of hose; but suppose 160 hydrants are all that is required, the town will have to pay $5,000 a year, which represents a capital at 7% of something over $70,000. A look at the rates charged for domestic purposes would secure to the company such a revenue that I have no hesitation in saying that Mr. Gamble will have no difficulty in forming a company, as the undertaking will prove to them to be a bonanza.

Having read over the proposed By-Law I find no mention made about taxing the water-works. As Mr. Gamble distinctly asked that the water-works be exempted from taxation, and as this would be a difference of great importance to the town, I cannot see how this has been overlooked in the By-Law, of which the public should know. There are two more objectional features in the By-Law, and of the greatest importance to the town. Section C. provides for a sufficient force to throw four separate streams of water through 250 feet of hose to a height of 65 feet on George street, between Hunter and Charlotte streets. Would this be of sufficient force to protect the Catholic Church, or any buildings around that elevation? Would it protect the property on London street at its highest elevation? And what about the Court House, which is the most elevated of all? Section 5 stipulates that if the company should make default in any stipulations aforesaid, then the town shall have the right to purchase and acquire such water-works at a valuation. Now, Sir, if such are the stipulations, if the water-works are not constructed as provided for by By-Law, they are useless to the town and the town does not want them. A better clause should be inserted, compelling the company to remove such works as worthless to the town. Such in my opinion is the proper course to pursue, and that duty is incumbent for the Council to reconsider.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your kindness, I remain,

Yours truly,
W. LECH.

Peterborough, Sept. 19, 1881.

NORWOOD SCHOOL TROUBLE.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—William Sargent and his promising shoot have been regaling the public for such a length of time lately, that people thought, and naturally enough, both ought to have been fully satisfied with their previous performances, but the "old'un" has not got to the end of his tether yet, and we may safely conclude nor the "young'un" either.

The "old'un" in your issue of the 15th has been dishing some more savoury meat for us, and among it is found a small sample of the conduct of his glorious son towards his teacher. This insubordinate lad by his own shewing gives the public a small insight—here is his sworn testimony. "I pinched Hetherington." This hopeful started the trouble by "pinching Hetherington." "The master asked me what I was doing; I did not like to tell." Here we have the insubordinate's disobedience. "He, the master, asked me again what I was doing; I made no answer." The innocent insists in his disobedience.

We find this lad would not give his teacher any satisfaction during school hours; a good example for the other scholars. So he had to be kept in after school, and asked again by his teacher what he had been doing in the forenoon. "I told him then what I had been doing. He asked me if it would not have been as easy to have told him this in the forenoon; my answer was I did not know, but supposed it would, but that I did not like to stand up before the scholars and tell what happened." This lad, although he liked misconduct, "pinched Hetherington" and did not like obedience to his teacher. Now, disobedience in school to teachers, above all other things, merits dismissal, and strongly it merited it in this case, but the master erring on the side of leniency, manly decided only to slap this lad.

And now this hopeful resorts to mean and false subterfuge, thus, "I said I did not deserve a whipping any more than Hetherington." "He, the master, then told me to hold out my hands; I put them in my pockets. He then tried to unbutton my coat; I kept buttoning it up as fast as I could." We can have no more damnatory evidence of the insubordination and character of this lad than from the above, his own sworn testimony—but enough. I would direct the attention of William Sargent to the following appearing in the same issue. The school here mentioned is the best place for lads of the stamp of his insubordinate:—"It appears that the new school for truants and expellants from Toronto schools is a work of private beneficence. W. H. Howland is prominently connected with the scheme, and in a letter to the Toronto press he states that there are hundreds of boys in the city who are as much outside of our present school system as if they lived in Kamschatka." In mercy now to the readers of the EXAMINER it is to be hoped we have heard the last of Sargent and his disobedient son.

THE GRANGERS IN COUNCIL.

INTERESTING MEETING IN TORONTO.

The Grangers held a meeting on Monday night of last week, in the St. Lawrence Hall, Toronto, the chair being occupied by Mr. W. M. Blair, M. P. P., Nova Scotia. On the platform were Prof. Mills, Ontario Agricultural College; Mr. W. Johnson, M. A., ex-President of the Agricultural College; Mayor McMurrich; C. L. Whitney, Lecturer of the State Grange Mich.; Rev. W. F. Clark, W. P. Page, E. L. Hilborne, ex-Master of Dominion Grange, Ald. Hallam, A. J. Hughes, Sharon, and others.

The Chairman made a few observations on the character of the subject which would naturally come up for discussion. Interesting addresses were then given by Mayor McMurrich, Mr. Mills, Mr. C. L. Whitney, Lecturer of the Michigan State Grange, Mr. F. W. Clark, and others.

Among the resolutions passed were the following:—

That farmers should give their sympathy to the movement for social and educational advancement of the farming classes; and further, that the hostility shown to the Grange by commercial men and others is uncalled for, and that, on the contrary, the heartiest encouragement should be given to it by all business men.

That agriculture being an important branch of national labour, a course of agricultural study in schools should be promoted, and that an agricultural school should be established in each of the thirteen agricultural districts.

A resolution was also carried recommending that the Dominion Exhibition of 1882 should be held in Toronto, which offers so many facilities for the successful carrying on of such an undertaking, and asking that the Dominion and Provincial Legislatures be asked to assist the Dominion Exhibition next year.

During the day a considerable number of Grangers and their friends thronged the grounds, and in the afternoon many having assembled on the grand stand and in the horse ring, a few moments were occupied in delivering addresses.

The first was an address by His Worship the Mayor, who in a brief and pithy speech welcomed the members of the Grange and their friends to the Exhibition and to Toronto.

Wm Blair, M. P. P., for Colchester, Nova Scotia, Master of the Dominion Grange, followed with a few well chosen words on the position of the farmer and the advantage of united action.

Mr. S. W. Hill, of Ridgeville, past Master of the Dominion Grange, acted as Chairman, and also briefly addressed the gathering.

W. SARGENT VS. NORWOOD SCHOOL BOARD.

(Concluded from last week.)

THE DECISION OF THE BOARD.

Moved by Thomas Beath, seconded by P. M. Grouger,—That whereas Wesley Sargent, a pupil in the senior department of the Public School, has manifested for some time past disrespect to the teacher and insubordination to his authority, and such conduct is prejudicial to the interests and good government of the school, that the Board suspend the said boy (Sargent) until such time as he appears before the teacher, in the presence of the school, and apologizes for his conduct and promises good behaviour for the future, and that he further apologize to the Board, in person, when the gentlemen be present in person before the Board when he so applies.—Carried.

The following letter was handed to W. E. Roxburgh, the Chairman of the Board, which he never answered:

"W. E. Roxburgh, Esq., Chairman of the H. and P. School Board:

"DEAR SIR,—I beg to ask you as Chairman of the Board—having, I believe, the power to do so—to relieve my boy from the penalty laid on him. If you have not the power to do so, I request you to call a meeting of the Board, at the earliest date, to reconsider the matter regarding my boy's suspension.

"I do so on the ground of having received no official notice of the charge in time to prepare evidence; further, I claim that the case was prejudiced by outside influence, several of the members having further expressed strong feelings in the matter before the case was heard.

"I also consider that my own case, Septimus Dutton, which seems to have rendered the second charge necessary, should have had the prior right for consideration, and settled before the latter before the counter charge was made. To these reasons only you will attribute my non-appearance at the Board meeting.

"Be good enough to give me your address in writing and oblige,

"Yours truly,

"WILLIAM SARGENT.

"Norwood, May 6th, 1881."

On the 7th May I received the following notice:—

"A meeting of the Trustees of the Norwood H. and P. School Board will be held in the Town Hall on Friday next, the 14th instant, at 10 o'clock a.m., for all general business.

"W. H. STEVENSON,

"Secretary."

I attended this meeting and was requested to be heard by the Chair, and the meeting broke up, refusing to take any action in the matter.

On the 18th instant I saw Mr. Brown, P. S. Inspector, and placed all the papers in his hands, and personally requested him to investigate the matter, and on the 20th instant received the following letter from Mr. Brown:—

"PETERBOROUGH, May 25th, 1881.

"To William Sargent, Esq., Norwood:

"MY DEAR SIR,—I enclose in another envelope the various documents with which you entrusted me relative to your difficulty with the Norwood School Board. Among them there is no request that I should investigate the matter, although from the conversation we had I gathered that such was your intention. I may state, however, that I have read the documents over with great care, and that were a formal appeal made to me I should feel unable to interfere with the action of the Board, inasmuch as it is apparent that the conduct of the boy was such as to be injurious to the school, and that the Board merely suspended him until he made a suitable apology.

"I have the honor to be, my dear Sir,

"Your obedient servant,

"JAMES COYLE BROWN,

"P. S. I. Co. Peterboro'."

On the 30th instant I mailed Mr. Brown the following letter:—

"NORWOOD, May 30th, 1881.

"James C. Brown, Esq., P. S. Inspector:

"DEAR SIR,—I enclose a copy of resolution of the School Board of the village of Norwood, by which my son is debarred from the right of attending the school, and inasmuch as the School Board acted on ex parte evidence, without my having reasonable notice of the meeting of the Board, and the action of the Board appearing, as if designed, to anticipate a charge of assault, then pending against the teacher, arising out of the same matter, I think it is a case in which a fuller investigation should be made, and I bring it formally before you by way of appeal from the finding of the Board, and desire a full investigation into the matter, so that my child may not be deprived of the right of attending school, except he is found, after a full investigation, to have forfeited that right. I do not forget that he has the right to return to school upon making certain apologies, but from what I learned at the investigation before the Magistrates' Court, when the teacher was fined for ill-treating the lad, I could not ask him, without something to satisfy me that he, too, was in the fault, to apologize to the man who was so judged by a Bench of Magistrates for so ill-treating him. I would request that you give all parties due notice of the time and place where you hear the case.

"Yours truly,

"WILLIAM SARGENT."

To the above letter I received no answer. At the end of two weeks I went to see him (Mr. B.), and on the 13th of June I received the following letter:—

"PETERBOROUGH, June 13th, 1881.

"Wm. Sargent, Esq., Norwood:

"SIR,—I have the honor to state that your appeal from the action of the Norwood School Board will be heard in the School House, Norwood, on Wednesday, the 15th instant, commencing at 4.15 p.m.

"Your obedient servant,

"JAMES COYLE BROWN,

"P. S. I. Co. Peterboro'."

Mr. B. came to the village on the said date, between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock; consulted with one or two of the Board and the teachers until the hour arrived to investigate, when none were present but himself. He took a few notes, and stated that he would give all parties due notice, took the names of those I wished to be witnesses, and left.

On the 21st June I received the following letter from Mr. B., and on the following day I forwarded the papers he requested:—

"PETERBOROUGH, June 21st, 1881.

"To William Sargent, Esq., Norwood:

"MY DEAR SIR,—I want a copy of the evidence and proceedings at the Magistrates' Court to forward to the Minister of Education. Please send it to me as early as possible.

"Yours truly,

"JAMES COYLE BROWN,

"P. S. I. Co. Peterboro'."

On the 2nd July I received the following letter:—

"P. S. INSPECTOR'S OFFICE,
Peterborough, July 2nd, 1881.

"To William Sargent, Esq., Norwood:

"MY DEAR SIR,—After laying your case somewhat fully before the Minister of Education, the following occurs in a communication from him, dated June 28:

—'There does not appear to be any case for your action, and in such cases I do not think it desirable to give the Examiner discretionary power in dealing with cases of suspension.'

"Your obedient servant,

"JAMES COYLE BROWN."

I saw Mr. B. in Norwood at the close of the school meeting on the 15th July, and he told me to have the case ready to go with the [illegible] 26th July I was [illegible] the Minister of Education, inquiring [illegible] giving the papers a careful examination he advised me to see the School Board in the Division Court. I did so, as directed, and it was to be heard on the 24th August. When the Jury was sworn in, His Honor, R. Denstedean, Junior Judge for the County, [illegible] me, and gave me his opinion [illegible] doing that he was not right in the [illegible] County, [illegible] to the Public [illegible] unless I want to get non-suited again.

Had the Judge allowed the Jury to decide according to the evidence brought forward I would have been satisfied, no matter which way they decided; but from the School Board to the Inspector, from the Inspector to the Judge, investigation has been applied. And this in Ontario, which boasts of her educational institutions, her Court of Equity, another Judge of undoubted reputation refusing to visit from the Teacher to the Judge, would all [illegible] you in the language of the Great Chieftain who stands at the head of the Dominion,—"These hands are clean."

Yours truly,

W. SARGENT.

Norwood, Sept. 19, 1881.

THE LINDSAY CENTRAL.

From the entries coming in and the interest manifested [illegible] we have little doubt that the forthcoming Lindsay Central will be the most successful of the series in every respect. Such railway arrangement will be made as will afford every facility for visitors during the Whitby, Nipissing (north and south), Midland, Grand Junction and Grand Trunk railways to attend, and they may depend upon it that expenses here will be moderate. A large attendance may be expected as the exhibition will be well worth attending.—Lindsay Post.

A TENANTS' ROUND ROBIN.

The tenants of the Duke of Cleveland are said to intend to present him with a round robin for a reduction of twenty-five per cent. in their rents, and if refused will all give up their farms in October. The Duke is worth about $750,000 a year, and owns about the fifth largest land estate in England. He is childless, and his wife (Lord Rosebery's mother) has an income from her first husband. At his seat, Raby, carriages drive right into the vast baronial hall. The Duke is the direct descendant of the renowned Sir Henry Vane.

THE LARGEST LANDOWNER IN AMERICA.

Col. Dan. Murphy, who went to California in 1844, is now probably the largest private landowner on this continent. He has 4,000,000 acres of land in one body in Mexico, 60,000 in Nevada and 23,000 in California. His Mexican grant he bought four years ago for $200,000, or five cents an acre. It is 60 miles long, and covers a beautiful country of hill and valley, pine timber and meadow land.

ENNISMORE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BARNS BURNT.—Bush fires are still raging to a fearful extent in this township. During the gale on Thursday night Maurice Brick had his second barn burnt with all its contents, only partly insured. He has the heart-felt sympathy of all the neighbors. From the 4th to the 10th concession on the range where Mr. Brick has suffered so severely, on Thursday night was mostly one sheet of fire and only by determined perseverance has other barns been saved from the destroying elements. The west of the township has so far escaped any serious consequence, but a change of wind, it is feared, would only repeat what other parts of the township has recently gone through.

DEATH IN THE OLEANDER.

Prof. James Law writes: "A case that occurred recently under my notice may be recorded as a warning of the dangerous qualities of a favorite house plant. A fine, healthy mare ate a single tuft of leaves from a branch of an oleander temporarily set by the door, then went on a journey of six miles, appearing playful and well, but on returning refused her feed. Next morning she still refused to eat, looked dull and haggard and had partially lost control of her hind limbs. The mare died before assistance could be obtained, and on opening the body the dark-red congested stomach showed the action of an acrid poison, and enquiry brought the account of the cropping of the oleander, of the injurious qualities of which the owner was entirely ignorant. As this ignorance is very widespread, it may be well to say that all parts of the plant are deadly. A very small quantity of the leaves is fatal to the horse, as we have just seen. The flowers have produced death in those who carelessly picked and ate them. The branches, divested of their bark and used as skewers, have poisoned the meat roasted on them, and killed seven of the twelve people who partook of it."

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrized

THE ALEMBIC OF THE BODY.—The stomach is the alembic of the human system. In it those wonderful chemical changes take place which result in the transmutation of food into blood. When it performs the necessary processes of digestion and assimilation no disease can exist, but the system is suitably nourished. When it is feeble or disordered, they are obstructed, and being in consequence ill supplied with blood of a vitalizing quality, the physical organisms become weak and feeble, the nerves suffer, the liver and bowels are semi-paralyzed, and appetite and sleep fail. These disastrous consequences may, however, be prevented, or remedied with the superb tonic alterative and spirituel. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE, a medicine of rare purity and efficacy, which restores a disordered and repairs a weakened state of the digestive organs, overcomes biliousness, relieves the bowels when obstructed without straining or weakening them, and promotes the exit from the system of impurities which infect the blood, which cause serious organic maladies. No objectionable mineral contaminates it, and its value is not marred by a subsequent reaction prejudicial to the general health. When she longer see the outlines of the , and even the thin smoke wreaths st in the distance and hem of the g, she flings herself down upon the f and, burying her face in her , sobs passionately. Not yet how-despite the pain and bitterness that all her future seem nothing but an blank, will she own the depth strength of her love for Robert Con-. Had Rob really loved her, how-ent all things might have been! she cannot hide from herself she that he has failed her under a very much as Garth had done, ering itself, when called to a sacrifice, no love at all. CHAPTER VII.

e interior of the British Museum is fashionable, nor is it an enlivening on a wet day, especially when the accompanied by a heavy fog, the y alike of the student and the anti-. Yet upon a rainy afternoon, rly the end of April, two people t have been seen pacing up and the sculpture-gallery of this nal treasure-house, as indifferent rently to the weather as they are to reat and mighty Past, among the of which their present is laid. have commented from time to time commonplace manner upon the ery of the winged bulls and Etruscan , have concluded that the Roman rors look a poor depressed race in a en fog, and the gods and goddesses inly not worth the fuss generally about them. Beyond these very ed remarks, the wonders of the past elicited little interest.

e man is Garth Calderon and the with him Fancy Carlyon. Six s have made a great change in her. me grown taller, fairer, slenderer, more incomparably beautiful than r wild state, or the rich furs she may be responsible for that in-ef loveliness. The brilliant colour s lent such a charm to her beauty appears now and then as the sign of ral disquietude or unusual excite-and the large brown eyes have ll their merry archness, as though wept too often.

and is this all you have to say to me a week's waiting?" asks Garth, as pauses for the twentieth time near pedestals of imperial greatness. "Of are you afraid, that you cannot me?" Why do you fear to give self to me?"

am very happy as I am, at least as ever hope to be. Why should we ge things yet? Besides, I am not p and Laura would have to ask permission for you to marry me."

[illegible] he would not refuse."

You do not know that," she retorts ot angrily.

"There would be no need to ask any one's permission," says Garth quickly, "if you trusted me as you ought to."

"I do not understand you," she returns coldly.

"It is not long ago since you confessed to rather enjoying the fact that we had one here to ourselves; and no one knew of it."

"It is not so long ago since I was capable of doing any absurd thing without giving it a second thought. I am wiser to-day."

"How you have changed!" says Garth sadly. "And yet, I think, you are not quite genuine sometimes. You hide yourself very well as a rule; but now and then one catches sight of the old true Fancy under the pretence, and then one grows a little impatient, longing for that nobler self to return for good."

"You do not, Garth; it is all imagination. That second self is mine never leaves Langley; so all my life, I suppose, I shall live a double existence."

"A pleasant prospect for me, I must say," remarks her companion gloomily.

"Very; but fortunately not without a remedy."

"So you think, Fancy. But, suppose the remedy were the worse of the two?"

"Then make your choice, and don't grumble at the result."

"Is the result to be a total loss of your love? How is it possible that in so short a time everything can have changed? I left you loving, kind, and promising to be faithful to me. I return, and my little sweetheart, whom I so madly loved, is gone for ever."

"You might say all that in a few words. You left a child and found a woman."

Her voice trembles, despite herself; and there is a latent bitterness in it that does not escape her companion's notice.

"Why may I not be to the woman all I was to the child?" he asks tenderly. "The child trusted me; why will not you?"

She smiles, but, without looking at him, moves her silver bracelets up and down her wrists.

"We are talking silly—worse still, foolishly," she says at last; "and in reality, I have not a minute to spare. I promised Lady Winton to be home early. She and Vaux are going to a ball to-night after the Opera; and she has something especially to tell me before she leaves home."

"Perhaps you had better return at once."

She takes his arm and answers with a coldness that bitterly belies her heart.

"Thank you. Perhaps it might be as well to do so."

"Love in idleness!" he says bitterly. "For what fantasy will not a man risk a life's happiness?"

"What if the very idea were to prove a life's happiness?" she answers, with quiet indifference. "And, all love I think, is pretty much alike."

While she speaks, every particle of colour leaves her face. For a moment the second self she had spoken of carries her away to the quaintly-cut garden bed at Langley, where twenty little velvet pansies with bright eyes look up at her and seem to smile a morning's greeting. Along the high-hedged path, Rob comes to meet her; and together they pace and repass just that one sunny strip of flowering garden ground. She can see his face bent down to her, can almost hear his words; and then, with a start and shiver, she comes out of her dream into the actual world about her, and knows that he will never speak of love again to her.

In the first bitterness of her wounded pride and repulsed love, she had been quite willing that Garth should assume his old relationship to her. Without troubling herself to protest or inquire, she accepted a lifelong burthen and responsibility; but, until the last few months, she had never actually realised what her promise and position to her lover really implied. In the meantime Garth persuaded himself that, whatever might happen in the future, the love and devotion of his life would always be hers. She certainly had fixed his blue intaglio with the first genuine passion he had ever experienced; and in his way he had striven at one time to be true to it. Other better impulses lost with his love, had suddenly awakened within him, and grown into a brief existence. But, as [illegible] is an impossibility to natures [illegible] selfish and trained to regard [illegible] as essential that interferes with their own pleasures.

It was not Garth's fault that he failed, and forgot his scruples and the short struggle of a half-awakened conscience in the loveliness and fascination that dawned afresh upon him when the Wintons took up their residence in town. He had once consoled himself by thinking that, if she loved him as he believed, she would gladly share the trouble and disgrace that his love demanded; but he knew now that this early hope was a delusive one. The impulse that had once prompted him to confess the history of his past life and throw himself upon her generosity never by any chance presented itself now; and, the farther her coldness and unhappiness put him from her, the more passionately and despairingly he loved her.

When he asked her to crown a secret engagement by a secret marriage, she indignantly refused; when he proposed to ask her hand from Lady Winton, she reminded him of the necessity which he had so often pleaded—of keeping their engagement secret, and refused to even entertain the idea of marriage until this mystery was cleared away. She knew by experience that this was the one thing Garth could not, or would not, do; but, within the last week, Garth had declared that the time had come for a public acknowledgment of their engagement, and daily, nay, almost hourly, entreated for permission to become openly her suitor; and it was she now who absolutely refused to allow this.

Of Marion he scarcely ever thinks; fortunately for him her blow, dealt in a paroxysm of madness, had been warded from his breast by the sudden uplifting of his arm. He had fainted at the same time from loss of blood; but the wound itself had proved to be slight, and, beyond the inconvenience of having his arm in a sling, had not greatly troubled him. Marion herself had disappeared; and he felt convinced that in the circumstances she would not be likely to seek him again. His efforts to find her by applying to the Sisters of Charity had altogether failed; so, that, if she had taken the veil, it was not in their convent.

"Of what are you thinking, Fancy?" he asks, after the long pause that ensues upon her last little speech. "I wish you would let me know what thoughts are passing through your mind."

"[illegible] myself for the [illegible] mood [illegible] with a heavy [illegible] even [illegible] as well as [illegible] its [illegible]."

"Of what bitterness can you know?" he asks, smiling at her earnestness. "Why, your life has not been long enough to chronicle such an experience!"

"[illegible] sure, Garth. It would [illegible] you would it not, to know that I [illegible] dwelling day [illegible] about [illegible] one?"

"No," he says, "it would surprise me very much."

"You would not believe it, of course?"

"No, Fancy, I should not; I am almost inclined to think"—with bitter emphasis—"that you have no heart to break."

"Well, surely that is a condition of things worthy of all congratulation and admiration—to have no heart! I wonder what it is like?"

Her last words are not spoken to him; they are more of a thought than a speech; but her eyes grow very misty, with a far-away look in them.

"You are tired; we will go home."

"Yes, I confess it; I did not sleep last night, and I have felt tired all day."

"If you will sit here for a few moments, I will order the carriage."

"Thank you, Garth; you are very kind to me."

His face flushes hotly, but he does not speak; he only walks rapidly away. That there is the least truth in her light words Garth would have been the last to believe; but that she is unhappy and sadly changed he knows well enough. He attributes it partly to her dislike to London and London habits, and partly also to her health, which has gradually declined since she left Langley. Once away from the noise and excitement of town, he is convinced she will rapidly recover health and spirits; and the future holds enough happiness to compensate for the disappointment of the present.

Meanwhile she sits quite still, absorbed in thought; then by some sudden impulse she raises her eyes and sees opposite to her, but not in the least aware of her presence, Robert Constant. For a moment she is too much astonished to move; the next moment she is aware that Rob is not alone; a lady, young, closely veiled, and elegantly dressed, is with him, and Rob's attention is concentrated upon her. Fancy's breath comes fast and thick, for a moment everything swims around her; then a horrible suspicion that he is married, that the lady is his wife, that this was Laura's news, flashes into her mind. Rob has a "button-hole" of white lilies in his coat, and the lady's dress is a pale gray. They pass into the next room almost as soon as she sees them; and then she falls back on her seat almost senseless with despair and misery.

When Garth returns, he finds her impatient indeed at his delay, but no longer cold or indifferent to him; her cheeks have a little flush on them, her eyes are soft and brilliant.

"I am so sorry I kept you waiting," he says gaily; "but the truth is I met an friend of mine, a fellow-student at Cambridge, who has just returned from the Cape and taken unto himself a wife. He insisted upon introducing me, and I was obliged to offer congratulations, et-cetera. Such a pretty girl [illegible] the bride, I [illegible]."

In some unaccountable way, Fancy connects this friend with Rob; her heart almost ceases to beat, then is rent by the pangs of a jealous misery that no power or will can control.

"It is all true then," she thinks; "it must be true! What indeed but such an occasion should bring Rob to London at this time of year! And who, if not his wife, is the charmingly-dressed lady who leant upon his arm?"

"There is no greater folly in the world than getting married!" she cries bitterly. "Every one repents of it, and every one does it. Is that a good reason—reason enough, I mean, for us to follow the general example?"

"I think so, Fancy."

"Really? Upon your honour?"

"Yes. Why, Fancy"—a sudden fierce joy leaping into his face—"do you mean that you will marry me?"

"We have waited long enough, have we not?" she answers gaily. "If you do not intend to let me off, we may as well get married."

"I shall not let you off, that is very certain."

He is deeply moved; his hand trembles on hers, his face is as a white heat.

"I didn't suppose you would," she answers ungraciously, "or I shouldn't have proposed the other alternative."

"You are not jesting, Fancy?"

"No; I [illegible] earnest [illegible] Garth, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] I [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] you [illegible]. You won't object to go abroad somewhere for a year or two at least?"—she is about to add, "till I am dead," but checks herself in time.

"Wherever you please, Fancy; but until then I grow afraid of shadows."

"Am I so very precious?" she says, smiling.

"You are my world," he answers; "that is all."

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand, yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have produced so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst importers and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and variations. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grades, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

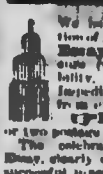
A Great Cause of Human Misery

Is the Loss of

MANHOOD



We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from indiscretion.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Address,

WHAT TO WEAR!

Encouraged by the warm approval hitherto attending our efforts to make our DRESS DEPARTMENT one of the most prominent features in our business, we again venture to present our lady friends with our views for the ensuing FALL and WINTER.

Dress Goods bring, perhaps, the most anxious item in the economy of every properly constituted Dry Goods Establishment, we have this season devoted more than our ordinary attention to that department. During last fall the demand for SELF-COLORED CLOTH EFFECTS was very great, and it is the general feeling that this year the demand for these will be still greater. The materials are soft, pliable and elastic, and in fact possess all the qualities that go to make up the tout ensemble of a lady.

We will show these goods in different makes, such as Fouke, Croises, Foule Cashmere, &c., &c.

Fancy Dress Goods. In Fancies, the most effective will be the new OMBRE STRIPES. These stripes will be much worn in combination with plain materials, and look exceeding well.

Velveteens. Great as was the demand for these goods last year, the demand this season promises to be still greater. The MAKE of VELVETEENS has attained to greater perfection in finish and colour than ever before. The nap is shorter and firmer and the general appearance more silky. We call SPECIAL ATTENTION to our velveteens in plain and coloured.

Girdles are still greatly in demand. We have them in several styles and in every shade, to match our dress materials.

Our Stock will be complete this week, and will be the largest we have ever shown in every department.

MUNRO & ALEXANDER

Local News Record.

Autumnal tints are appearing on the trees.

A YOUNG MAN name Wall was fined on Tuesday $14.74 for unbecoming conduct.

OUR THANKS are due Mr. R. O. Helm, formerly of Peterborough, for copies of Colorado papers received regularly.

The town clock, on Monday, was out of order. It is being repaired by the care-taker, Mr. McClelland.

THE SOUTH MONAGHAN fall show takes place at Centreville on Tuesday, the 18th of October.

CHANCERY.—Chancellor Boyd will open on Friday, October 7th, the Autumn Chancery Court in Peterborough.

THE FALL ASSIZES will open here on Monday, October 3rd, before Mr. Justice Armour.

THE FARMER who subscribes for a good local newspaper seldom gets swindled by sharpers.

When corn bursts out of the husk as it is doing at present, the knowing ones say we are to have an open, mild winter.

The West Riding of Peterborough Fall show will be held October 11th and 12th

THE MARKET.—The market on Saturday was largely attended by buyers and sellers, and prices were reasonable.

FALL SEEDING.—Farmers have got tired waiting for rain, and many are engaged this week in sowing their fall wheat.

NEW BILLIARD ROOM.—Mr. William Chamberlain is fitting up a new billiard saloon. The tables are ordered from Riley & May, of Toronto.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC pic-nic at Keene on Thursday afternoon last was very successful. The Rev. Father O'Connell, of Douro, presided.

ANY PERSON desiring a copy of the Central Exhibition prize list can be accommodated by calling at the EXAMINER Office.

Boys Tweed Suits are being sold by I. Robinson & Co. for $3 and upwards, and men's good all wool suits for $8.00 and upwards. 10-tf

ANNIVERSARY TEA.—The anniversary tea meeting in connection with the Bensford Union Sabbath School, will be held on Wednesday next, 28th instant, at the Methodist Frame Church, South Monaghan. The affair will give occasion both for a pleasant and profitable afternoon.

JUST RECEIVED.—New Black Cashmeres, Black Bunting Prints, New Tapestry Carpets, and Lace Curtains, New Boots and Shoes, also a splendid lot of New Tweed Suits for men and boys. W. J. WALLACE, Lakefield. 20-tf

COAL.—Competition is the life of trade. Messrs. A. Wilson & Co. having entered the market, are prepared to sell coal to consumers at the lowest paying price. Owing to shipping it here in large quantities they are enabled to cut prices and yet sell a solid article, and on each occasion give full and square weight.

FOOTBALL.—The first practice of the season was held last Saturday and a lively Rugby game was the consequence. Matches with Trinity College School, Port Hope and other places are about to be arranged. Football, although occasionally rough and dangerous, is manly and healthful and receives a sort of charm from its more perilous qualities.

MR. A. H. COBB and wife arrived in town this morning from Ottawa on his wedding tour. He will stay in this town, where he has numerous friends for about a week.—Review. This is all correct, with the exception that Mr. Cobb is not married, has no wife with him, and will remain in town about two weeks.

ANNOUNCEMENT.—Mr. R. W. Muncaster has opened out his new store in Cluxton's Block and has a neat and costly collection of gold and silver ornaments, jewellry, watches, clocks, etc. Everything is new and elegant. A visit from all is requested. No trouble to show the goods.

QUICK WORK.—As an instance of the despatch with which goods are shipped from Europe to Canada now-a-days it is worthy of mention that in the forwarding of a portion of Messrs. Hall, Innes and Co's fall importations but fifteen days elapsed between the time of shipping from London, Eng., until they were received in this town, opened, marked and placed on the shelves for sale.

REV. B. L. QUINN, late priest of the Church of Rome, will preach in St. Paul's Church on Sabbath 25th inst., morning and evening, also will deliver a lecture on Monday evening at the same church, at 8 o'clock, p. m. All are invited to attend, and any free will offerings on those occasions will be thankfully received to aid him in the prosecution of his work.

GOOD TEMPLARS.—At the annual meeting of the Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T. held at Barrie, the reports presented indicated the continued prosperity of the Order. There are 267 lodges, with a membership of 11,053. The receipts for the year were $3,505.72, and the expenditure $3,488.15. The Mayor of Mitchell, Mr. J. H. Flogg, has been elected G. W. C. T.

AUCTION SALE.—Remember the auction sale of household furniture, etc., at the residence of Mr. J. H. Brock, Johnston's Terrace, opposite the residence of Thos. Menzies, Esq., to-day, at 1.30 p.m. sharp. Furniture all new and in good order. C. Stapleton, Auctioneer.

EASY ENOUGH.—How natural it is for housekeepers to occasionally intrust front door keys to servants! How easy it is for servants to have duplicate keys made, if they want to, and how natural it is that burglars should gain entrance to a house in some unaccountable way after such servant has been discharged!

THE EXHIBITION.—There has been no great rush to the Toronto Industrial Exhibition from these quarters, the number of Grangers that took advantage of the excursion on Wednesday of last week being considerably short of what was expected.

A contemporary, noticing the re-opening of the schools after the holidays, asks this pertinent question: Why should every man whose child goes to school and uses a slate be heavily taxed on that slate under the tariff maintained to benefit eight owners of slate quarries in Vermont? He will have to ask Sir Tilley.

The Industrial Exhibition at Toronto has so far been, says the World, a splendid success, creditable alike to the numerous exhibitors and the city under whose auspices it is held. The attendance has been large. Peterborough, Town and County, have not been as largely represented this year owing to the Excursion rates being higher.

THE FIREMEN'S BAND gave its usual concert in the Drill Shed on Friday evening last. The attendance was not large. These popular concerts will be continued every Friday evening until the cold weather sets in. We trust that the townspeople will appreciate the efforts of the Band to please, and turn out and assist them in paying the expenses of the Drill Shed.

SHORT HORNS.—Mr. James Elliott, of Smith, purchased and brought to his farm in Smith, from Mr. John Fothergail, Burlington, Ont., an excellent Short Horn Bull, nine months old, and a superior Duchess Short Horn Heifer, rising two years, bought from H. Snell & Sons, Guelph. They arrived in Peterborough by the noon train on Saturday, and were much admired. Mr. Elliott is one of the most enterprising farmers in the Province.

MR. DANIEL BROOK formerly of Peterborough, but latterly of Plattsville, Ont., died on Sunday last at the age of 60 years. The body was brought to Peterborough to be interred in the family lot, and the funeral took place from the Midland Station on Tuesday on the arrival of the morning train. Mr. Brook had been ailing with dropsy for five weeks previous to his death. The family have the heartfelt sympathy of their numerous friends in Peterborough.

A CAMPING PARTY from Rochester secured over five hundred pounds of fish and nine hundred ducks while camping on Stoney Lake during the past three weeks.—Review. We are informed on reliable authority that the five hundred pounds of fish turn out to be three or four small maskinonge, and the nine hundred ducks by actual count number 29. Reliable news in the Review seems to be out of the question. A pocket arithmetic to the editor of the Review would no doubt be of considerable advantage.

ACCIDENT.—On Friday last Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford of Otonabee were thrown from their buggy in Peterborough and Mrs. Rutherford sustained several severe cuts and bruises on the head. Mr. Rutherford was not seriously injured. It appears that they were driving along Bethune street and had entered the creek to give the horse water when the animal becoming frightened, upset the buggy with the above results. Mrs. Rutherford is 77 years of age and the severe injuries that she has sustained is alarming to her friends. Dr. Clarke dressed the wounds.

FOOTBALL.—At a meeting of the Football club held at the Huffman House on Wednesday evening last. The following officers were elected:—

PRESIDENT.—F. J. Lewis.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—G. C. Rogers.
SECRETARY-TREASURER.—A. St. A. Smith.
COMMITTEE.—R. B. Rogers, G. W. Hatton, W. A. Stratton, and F. Birney.

Practice days are Monday, Wednesday' Friday and Saturday afternoons. They have accepted the Rugby rules to play under.

BREWERY PIC-NIC.—Owing to the engineer of the King-Mather having to return to his engagement with Messrs. Deane & Sperry, immediately, caused by his substitute for the summer months having received word to return to Europe without delay, the proposed pic-nic of Mr. Calcutt's employers, announced to take place on Tuesday, did not come off. Another engineer was expected yesterday to take Captain Jacobs place, when the steamer will be able to resume her regular trips. Should the engineer expected arrive in time the pic-nic will take place on Thursday.

HEAPED MEASURES.—There appears to be a general impression among buyers and sellers that measures of apples, potatoes etc., should be heaped. As one of our exchanges points out, the law is clearly against it. Section 18 of the Weights and Measures Act of 1879 says: "In using a Dominion measure of capacity the same shall not be heaped, but either shall be stricken with a round stick or roller, straight and of the same diameter from end to end, or if the article sold cannot from its size or shape be conveniently stricken, shall be filled in all parts as nearly the level of the brim as the size and shape of the article admits."

LAKEFIELD SHOW.—The Committee of Management of the Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield Agricultural Society are making every effort possible to make this year's exhibition even more successful than previous ones, and to this end they have secured the services of the Peterborough Fire Brigade Band to play at the exhibition on the evening of Thursday, the 29th instant, and also during the day on Friday, the 30th instant. It is to be hoped that the Committee will be relieved of the responsibility of the extra expense by the good people of these places turning out and assisting them by attending the show. Much benefit is derived from attending these exhibitions.

TELEGRAPH CHANGES.—As a result of the telegraph amalgamation the Manager of the Montreal Telegraph Company, on Friday last, took possession of the Dominion Telegraph Company's office in the name of the Great Northwestern Company, and the work of removal was begun on Saturday, and the instruments and apparatus of the Dominion office have been transferred to the Montreal office, under the management of Mr. Geo. A. Cox. Mr. Dwight says that all those who lose their situations will find places in the States, and that there is an agent of the Western Union Company at present in Canada picking up those operators who are thrown out of employment.

WATER-WORKS AGAIN.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Having read the letter of Mr. Hatton in the Peterborough Review, of last week, I beg your consideration for making a few remarks thereon. I am glad of Mr. Hatton agreeing with me on the main point I am contending for, that the construction of water-works by the town would prove in time to be a source of revenue. Mr. Hatton points out that in former years, when water-works were under consideration, Mr. H. dropped his views on account of the late Mr. Scott giving as his opinion that the vote of the people would not carry the construction of water-works by the town, but strange to say that a vote on such a scheme was never tried by any Peterborough Council. And what is the reason of this? Peterborough has always been represented by a majority of men in the Council who have been willing tools in the hands of men seeking their personal interest, and this is the reason the town shall not build the water-works, that a few greedy men may make a good investment for their money. The admittance of Mr. Hatton, acting for Mr. Gamble, and Mr. Denistoun, acting as legal adviser to the town, the latter would see that the town's interests should be protected, must fill the public mind more with distrust, as Mr Denistoun plainly stated in the Council room that he had no interest in the construction of water-works, as his property needed no protection by such works. Mr. Hatton is in a similar situation, as the public must be aware of, and the public would no doubt like to see men moving in the matter who have more than professionally an interest in the town, which would go far to inspire the public with confidence. Mr. Hatton tells us further that the people should not impose too many conditions which Mr. Gamble and his associates could not comply with, as some points have been objected to by them already and they may withdraw from the enterprise, and we would be left without water-works for another ten years. The best thing that could happen to Peterborough would be if Mr. Gamble and his associates would not show us their faces again; but I fear they cannot lose sight of such an enterprise, they will cling to it like leeches. I would like to know who the fortunates are who form the company, as, by the admittance of Mr. Hatton, a company has been formed. Is it the same company as in Mr. Romaine's time? And is Mr. Gamble only the figure-head of the concern? I cannot see how the Council can act with such utter disregard for the interests of the town, with so many striking illustrations before them of how other corporations have been served by water and gas-work companies. Look at Toronto at the present moment; how utterly helpless she is in the hands of the Water-works Company. Should this not serve as a lesson for Peterborough not falling into the same trap of error? The talk that the town cannot build water-works, fearing a defeat by a vote, is carried on by the very men who want to build water-works themselves, and who would try their best to defeat any other scheme, as it would not be to their interests. Was the Council ever asked to come with a measure before the people that they knew beforehand would be defeated? As I have alluded to in my former letter, that all who have anything at stake are interested in the construction of water-works, the greater interests for such works are no doubt centred on George street, and I believe if a measure was brought forward whereby George street would contribute three-fourths of the cost, the outside would not object to contributing one-fourth as a share of their part, if built by the town. If the Council claims the right to pass a By-Law for a company to construct water-works, why not adopt a plan and ask for tenders and have a vote taken, and if defeated then such evidences are plain proof that the people don't want them. I for one, being in favor of water-works, would rather see the question shifted into the future for ten years than to see a gambling operation performed on Peterborough. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours truly,
WM. LECH.

WATER-WORKS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—Public opinion should be more generally directed to the water-works question than it appears to be at present. This matter must not be left to the manipulation of the few individuals who are so interested upon getting these works into their own hands. It is altogether premature to talk about constructing a huge system of water-works for domestic purposes in a town like this, where water is so abundant, so easily obtained, and so good. And it would be a piece of folly to give up our own judgment merely because a few private persons tell us they will do for us that which we do not require. It seems all very well to hear it said that we will get water-works for nothing, but it is a mere sound, and time will prove the want of wisdom in giving such a privilege into the hands of any set of men, and for all we know, strangers also. All the town wants for the present time is a simple, cheap system of water for fire purposes, placed in the most central and populous streets, with a capacity of being ultimately extended as may be required, even for the purpose of domestic use, should the necessities of the people ever demand it. A system like this can be carried out at a cost not exceeding $15,000, and an Act of Parliament might be procured to legalize such an undertaking, and making the streets thus benefitted pay for the same. If we have any money to spare we can put it to better use. Our first duty should be to build up the town by means which, while they cost money, will at the same time bring to us more trade and more prosperity. The time cannot be very far distant when a system of free gravel roads must come before the people of this county, but more especially before the people of this town. We are now becoming more and more dependent upon agriculture for our prosperity and growth, and any undertaking which will have the effect of increasing the trade of the town must increase its prosperity. The limits of our trade are far too circumscribed. We do not get half the business which we ought to get, and which we can get. A few leading trunk lines of gravel roads, extending thirty miles in every direction, will double the customers of the town and so double our business, and, with our present railroad facilities this can easily be done if we will only take a practical view of our situation and go about these improvements in a practical, common-sense way. If the town and county—the town giving one-third—would raise and expend $100,000 in this manner, all parties would be largely benefitted by the outlay. But to go and sink fifty or a hundred thousand dollars in a wild, unnecessary scheme of water-works, is just throwing away our resources for no beneficial purposes, is just burying them in the ground in order that we may be able to say that we have done a great, but a very foolish thing. It would be like the man who ran into debt to build a fine house, which he did not want, while he left his farm unimproved. He, like us, would be beginning at the wrong end. This town is just now in a fair way, and will go on prospering if we act wisely and well, and if we make the most of our opportunities. We must use our own means to build up the town, to increase our trade and our prosperity, and when we incur a debt it must be for a useful and profitable purpose, a purpose which will benefit everybody alike. I hope our Councillors will do nothing beyond giving water for fire purposes, but if they attempt to go beyond this, that they will first submit it to a vote of the people. Twelve Councillors taken from the ranks may do well, but two thousand ratepayers and property owners can do better.

JUSTICE.

VILLIERS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

On Thursday last Mr. George Gabbie met with a serious accident at Mr. Henry Humphrey's of Asphodel. While endeavoring to adjust something about the stump machine the iron rods struck him, breaking his leg below the knee in two places.

The farmers of this section are doing a big business this fall in the grain trade. Wheat and Barley crops are good and with a good market in Peterborough and Hastings we cannot complain.

RAIN.—The long looked for rain has arrived and the minds of the farmers, from the dread of bush fires, have been relieved.

THE CONSTRUCTION GANG who are engaged putting up the telegraph wire for the Grand Junction Railway, have the wire stretched as far as the boundary line of Otonabee.

STEAMERS take the grain from Keene and the lake shore.

THE ROOT CROPS are very poor around here this year owing to the dry weather.

THE GRAND JUNCTION cannot supply sufficient cars to take away the grain that is being purchased at Hastings.

LINDSAY.

THE ASSIZES opened here on Monday. The first case that occupied the attention of the Court was the case of Morgan v. Thornbury, a seduction case. The plaintiff in this case claimed damages from the defendant for the seduction of his daughter under the following circumstances:—The plaintiff owns two farms. For the last four years he has lived on and worked one of these farms, his sons working the other. The daughter Catherine Morgan, kept house for her brothers and while so doing made the acquaintance of the defendant. They appear according to the evidence, to have kept company for eighteen months, when, after several attempts, the defendant succeeded in seducing her. This case appears to be a very sad one. The girl is very pretty and is so affected by the sad affair that her health seems to be completely broken. The defendant did not deny the charge, but stated that he gave the girl money—in fact endeavoured to give the jury to understand that the unfortunate girl was no better that a common prostitute. While in the box he conducted himself in the most disgusting manner, affecting to treat the matter as a good joke. After the evidence was concluded. His Lordship addressed the Jury and in doing so stigmatized the conduct of the defendant as brutal, unmanly, and disgusting. Verdict for plaintiff and $2068 damages.

On Tuesday the trial of Stephenson v. was the Corporation of Emily proceeded with. It appears that the plaintiff was Reeve of the township during the year 1878, and that in that year the Corporation undertook to build a bridge over a certain creek. Sometime after the commencement of the work the plaintiff claims that the contractor, Mr. Walters, went to him for money. There being none in the treasury at the time, the present plaintiff advanced the money out of his own pocket to the extent of some $600, to recover which sum the present action is brought. After hearing the evidence for the plaintiff, His Lordship non-suited on the ground that the plaintiff was not able to show that he had advanced the money at the request of the defendants, or that any resolution had been passed authorizing them to borrow it from him. Mr. Hudspeth, Q.C., for plaintiff; Messrs. S. H. Blake, Q.C., and O'Leary for defendants.

PORT HOPE.

A SERIOUS FIRE.—On Saturday night the summer kitchen and wood-sheds attached to the beautiful residence of Mr. Wm. Quay, on Walton-street, took fire, probably from the cooking-stove. The family were at the time in the front part of the house, and consequently were not aware of the fire until notified by a neighbour. The whole of the wooden kitchen and shed were in flames before the alarm was given. Some of the most valuable of the furniture was taken out of the lower part of the house in a damaged state. The house, barn, and outbuildings were destroyed. The walls of the house are standing and might be utilized in rebuilding. The original cost of the dwelling and surrounding buildings was in the vicinity of $12,000. The house was insured for $5,000 and the furniture $3,000 in the Royal Canadian.

Collingwood has been visited by the fire fiend. The chief business portion of that active little town is now in ruins. About $25,000 worth of property has been swept away, and a large quantity of goods is damaged.

KEENE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The Indians have got through gathering this years crop of Wild Rice.

Large shipments of Barley are being made from here by boat.

The residence of Mr. Wm. Campbell is nearly finished, which will when completed present a very fine appearance, commanding a very fine view of Rice Lake and surrounding scenery. It reflects great credit on the contractor Mr. Donald McIntyre. We believe the painting is to be done by Mr. J. Kerr, painter, who has lately returned from a tour in Western Ontario.

The review of the Sabbath School lessons for the past quarter took place in the Presbyterian church last Sabbath evening. The church was well filled. The services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Andrews in his usual able manner. Miss S. Moore presided at the organ in her usual good style.

ALNWICK.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The yield of produce taken from the land this year has given entire satisfaction. Some very good averages per acre are reported, and wheat is considered to be one of the principal cereals.

Bush fires have gone over some parts of Alnwick, but beyond the destruction of a few fences and some forest little damage has been done.

The drought has been so severe that the root crop and fruit and ornamental trees show signs of suffering.

The Agricultural Exhibition of Alnwick will be held on Thursday, Sept. 29th, at Roseneath. The Alderville Indian Brass Band will peal forth some music.

Mr. D. Dulmage, Head Master of the Harwood Public School, has accepted a situation in Wooler, and Mr. Orr, of Cold Springs, takes the vacancy at Harwood.

A grand soiree was held at the re-opening of the Centenary W. M. Church on Monday, Sept. 12. Rev. Mr. Burwash, of Cobourg, was appointed to occupy the pulpit the previous Sabbath, but being unable to attend, the services were well conducted by Rev. E. R. Young, of Colborne. At the soiree Mr. Burwash gave a fine lecture, his subject being "St. Paul's Cathedral." The entertainment was a success, and was followed by a social held on the following evening, at which about 130 persons were present. The proceeds, $65, will go to complete payment for church repairs, and a very fine organ purchased there a few weeks since.

CAMPBELLFORD.

Mr. James McLaren, who resided in Campbellford a few years ago, and identified himself with the dry goods trade, stepped into the matrimonial noose, at Belleville on the 7th inst. His happy partner is Miss Frank Craig.

On the premises of Mr. S. J. Porter, in this village, is a little apple tree bearing both apples and blossoms. It is a little natural curiosity which does not occur very often on the same tree.

Dr. Powers made a visit to this village on Tuesday last. Domestic difficulties, we are sorry to state, led him a short time ago, to cease the practice of his profession, and break up his home. He is now residing with his father, near Norwood. The Dr. was a resident of Campbellford for many years, and always enjoyed an extensive practice. He is held in esteem by all who have had dealings with him, and his departure is regretted by a large circle of friends.

THE woollen mills have reached their greatest altitude, the five stories being complete. The roof will now be put on, and a finishing touch given the main building shortly. All the brickwork on a large storehouse to be erected near the buildings, has to be laid, a great amount of carpenters' work must be performed, blasting in the river above the building will yet need much labour, and a new brick dwelling for the Manager is to be built. Several weeks will elapse before the works will be complete, when the old ruinous lots of a few months ago, will be covered with a great range of brick which calls forth the admiration of all. The buildings will be second only to a few in the Province. New machinery is constantly arriving by train, and a team of horses and two to six men have been employed for weeks past, drawing it from the railway station. Herald.

SPORTING NOTES.

HANLAN v. ROSS.—St. John, N. B., Sept. 22.—In the articles of agreement which Wallace Ross forwarded to Hanlan last night, with a cheque for $500, it is specified the race will be three miles, (1½ miles and a turn), and that the final deposit shall be made on October 25, and the race take place on November 1st.

Trickett still asserts that he is able to beat any man rowing, barring Hanlan.

Those who like to see oarsmen row on their merits will take very little stock in the "match" to come off at St. Louis, October 8th, between Plaisted and Trickett. No sane man could be found to back the former against the latter, and the announcement that the race is to be for $500 is without doubt a "guy."—Canadian Sportsman.

Courtney says that he will accept Trickett's and Conley's challenges during the month of October, but that they must be for $1000 a side.

Rush and Laycock rowed a race on the Paramatta river on the 9th inst. for the championship of Australia and £400. Rush won by eight lengths.

Mr. R. McLaurin, of Peterboro', having challenged any man in Canada for a match game of draughts, Mr. George Fletcher, of Toronto, is willing to meet him. He will play him for $50 a side, the match to come off in Toronto within ten days from signing of articles, McLaurin to be allowed $10 for expenses. Fletcher has deposited $10 with the sporting editor of this paper.

Nearly all the mills at Ottawa are closed down, owing to the lowness of the water in the Ottawa River.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A scientific writer in the United States has discovered that the coal deposits of that country will, at the present rate of consumption, be entirely exhausted in 166 years.

The Agricultural and Art Association at its annual meeting on Friday decided that the next Provincial Exhibition be held at Toronto. The vote stood for Toronto 77 ; for Kingston 39.

General Luard writes to the press to say that he did not say that the Durham Field Battery was "very unclean." What he did say was that it "was not very clean." It is to be hoped the Battery will appreciate the distinction.

The Middlesex Grand Jury Thursday morning threw out the bills of manslaughter against Captain Rankin and Superintendent Parish, of the ill-fated Victoria, which sank in the Thames on Queen's birthday last.

The bountiful harvests of the American continent are not without their use. The crop of Great Britain has been seriously injured, and now news comes of a deficiency in Italy. All appearance at present indicate a good price for grain in Canada and prosperous times for the farmers of the Dominion.

The fact that President Garfield was shot in the District of Columbia, and that he died of his wound at Long Branch, may give rise to some trouble in dealing with the assassin Guiteau. It is almost inconceivable that a man whose guilt is so easy to establish should escape conviction by a technicality, and yet such an event is at least amongst the possibilities.

The loss of life by the Michigan fires is happily not so great as was at first stated, still it is terrible enough, over 200 persons having perished. Those left homeless, however, are said to be 15,000, very many of whom are helpless from injuries, and nearly all in a state of extreme destitution. Food, clothing, utensils, &c., in fact almost everything, is necessary for their relief.

The Guelph Police Magistrate gives this decision : "I am of the opinion that if a barber kept a shop open on Sunday for the purpose of getting custom, and did shave people who called to be shaved on that day, he would be breaking the Sabbath Act ; but I am also of the opinion that it is not against the Act for a barber to shave a customer on Sunday, for the customer might not be able to shave himself, and the act would in that case be one of necessity."

A Times editorial apropos of Lord Lorne's progress strongly recommends Manitoba and the North-West to the British farmers as the best country to emigrate to. It describes the Canadian North-West as a wonderful windfall which made its appearance to fill the cup of British colonial riches. Possessions like these are currents of vitality, ventilating shafts, which may be depended upon for a constant supply of fresh vigour to the nation. While Manitoba calls out for hundreds of thousands of settlers, no Englishman with love of land, but without a desire to forswear English preferences, need not be at a loss to choose where to seek new homes and carve out new careers.

Mr. Pardee, as Commissioner of Crown Lands, has sent off the superintendent of colonization roads North to investigate the amount of damage done to roads and bridges by the bush fires. It seems that there are many families in the district who have lost their little all, but they are scattered here and there, and it is thought best not to interfere in such cases by giving them direct relief, especially as the appropriation for colonization purposes is over-drawn. But the roads are to be repaired and the bridges rebuilt without delay, and in this way work will be provided for those who have suffered by the fires. If the settlers had suffered in a whole township, relief would have had to be given in a more practical shape, as one would not have been able to help the other, but as they are scattered about, and a settler has suffered loss here and another there, it is deemed the wiser plan to distribute the relief in as indirect a way as possible by having the roads repaired and the bridges rebuilt at once.

Political Notes.

Those who believe that the N. P. is the cause of prosperity will no doubt offer up the homage to Sir John on Thanksgiving Day.

The Moncton Sugar Refinery has been a struggling industry for the space of only eight months, and it has reached a profit of only thirty-five per cent. If it manages to struggle on a little while longer, no doubt, it will be in time a very fair investment.

In the year 1878, Canada had a tonnage of 1,333,015 tons of shipping. In 1880 her tonnage was 1,311,218 tons, a decrease of 28,100 tons. Protection is doing for the shipping of Canada what it did for the shipping of the United States. The same process is here begun. The end cannot but be equally disasterous.

Prof. Mills, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, believes that the elementary principles of agriculture should be taught in all our rural public schools ; that there should not be more than two High School's or Collegiate Institutes in any county, and only one in the smaller counties ; and that a portion of the money now spent in High Schools should be employed to maintain an agricultural school in each of the thirteen agricultural districts of the Province.

Mr. Blake is returning from his peregrinations in the Maratime Provinces, where he was met with the most cordial welcome, and where his addresses have produced an amazing effect. In Quebec he was honored with a perfect ovation, and his speech there was brilliant and powerfull. It is no use attempting to belittle Mr. Blake, or to underrate his oratory. We may differ from him in opinion and object to much that he says and does, but even then we are compelled to allow that he is a giant in intellect and debate ; and when a change takes place in the Government of our country, Mr. Blake, without doubting, is destined to be at the head of the new administration. And there are a few who think that the change is not far distant.—Cor. N. Y. Scotsman.

The Quebec Mercury says that the Ancient Capital never before gave any one a reception approaching that tendered Mr. Blake in point of enthusiasm since the time when it welcomed the Prince of Wales more than twenty years ago. The Mercury attributes the enthusiasm to the hostility of the people to the tariff no less than to their appreciation of the high qualities of the Liberal leader, and adds :—

"If an election of members to Parliament could now be held in the political capital of this Province, no Bleu or 'hummist' candidate could hope for the smallest chance of success. Never in the history of politics has the condemnation of a Ministry been so complete as is now the condemnation of the Dominion Cabinet in the city of Quebec. For the Ministers of the Dominion the reception of Mr. Blake in old Quebec last night is as, 'one dismal hiss, the sound of general scorn.' If ever modern men were 'weighed in the balance and found wanting,' such is the position of the men who hold Ministerial berths at Ottawa.

A Kingston merchant has been giving attention to Sir S. Tilley's speech at Gananoque, and his remarks, as reported in the Whig, are clearly to the point. The Finance Minister says :—"Woollen goods are now made at home as cheaply as they can be imported from England free of duty ; and cheaper than they were in 1878." This, the Ottawa Free Press says, is distinctly denied by the merchant, who declares that he cannot buy as cheaply in Canada, free of duty, as he can in England. For instance, a tweed which costs him 2s. sterling cannot be got in Canada for less than 70c. or more ; and a beaver, which can be got for 2s. 6d. at home, is valued in Canada at 90c. The vast quantity of these goods imported into Canada is proof that the Finance Minister made a statement lacking the essential element.

Our Paternal Janitor.—Sir John's position as the father of his country is becoming each year more and more generally recognized. His powers as a statesman are seen if in any one thing more than another, in the fact that stands in the forefront of the Jacques Cartier Club's address, viz: That he has attracted to himself the most notable group of statesmen ever seen in this country. Men of experience—leaders previous to Confederation, in their own Provinces—are now proud to serve under the man who comes back from the attractions of the heart of the Empire to serve this Canada of ours, instead of enjoying the well-earned and elegant repose that would be his if he chose to remain in London. —[Toronto Mail. Probably written by J. Burr-Plumb in a moment of temporary sanity.

The Hamilton Times says: One of these fine days, we expect to learn from some of the Tory journals that, through the beneficent effects of the N. P., the price of potatoes has been raised, and is likely to be higher. This information will be meant for the verdant farmer, who is not supposed by these sharp fellows to be able to distinguish between cause and effect. Housekeepers in Hamilton say that, unlike in average seasons, potatoes have not fallen in price below what they cost when first introduced, and they are grumbling. But they may save themselves the trouble. We very much fear this most useful article of domestic diet will be much dearer in a few weeks than it is now. The fact is, the potato crop of the United States is pretty much a failure, and large supplies will have to be drawn from Ontario and Quebec. In New Jersey, from $1.50 to $2 per bushel is paid for the better varieties. The result of the increased demand from the States will be to raise the prices here, and already 100 carloads, or 40,000 bushels, have been shipped.

The Dominion Alliance for the Suppression of the Liquor Traffic has issued a special appeal for funds to carry the Canada Temperance Act to England, to be adjudicated upon by the Privy Council. The amount required is $2,000, of which Ontario is asked to contribute $800. The Ontario members of the Defence Committee are Hon. Senator Vidal, Mr. D. B. Chisholm, Prof. Foster, Mr. George May and Rev. John Wood. The Committee on the present license law presented the following report which was adopted :—

1. That all store and shop licenses to sell intoxicating liquors be confined to the sale of such liquors exclusively.
2. That all saloon licenses should be abolished.
3. The restriction of hotel licenses to one to 300 or 1,000 of the inhabitants of town or city.
4. The prohibition of the sale of liquors to minors.
5. Increase of penalties equal that of the Scott Act.
6. That the right to appeal be restricted as in the Scott Act.
7. An increase of license fees.
8. That petitions be circulated through the entire Province for signature before the next session of the Local Legislature meets, praying the Government to grant the above amendments.
9. In case of no action being taken by that body, then these amendments to be presented to all candidates for the Local Legislature at the next election for their endorsement, only such men to be supported as will pledge themselves to work for and support such legislation independent of party.

You might as well expect to catch lightning in you arms as to expect a Tory to vote against his party for the purpose of aiding the Temperance cause. It is too thin gentlemen.

SEWING IN A BOSTON PUBLIC SCHOOL.

The Boston papers gave favorable accounts of the recent exhibition in that city of the results of the instruction in sewing in the Winthrop School—a girls' school with six grades. In the three lower grades they have lessons of an hour each twice a week, and in the upper three classes once a week. The pupils furnish their own work, bringing the materials from home, the city having no expense except for needles and thread, in cases where the parents do not supply suitable sizes and quality. They are taught to sew in the best manner with rapidity ; are taught the various stitches known to the artist in needle-work : are taught to make every variety of children's garments under the outer, every variety of undergarments for ladies and gentlemen ; all branches of dressmaking, cutting, and fitting with facility, all branches of needle-work in tailoring ; are taught the art of making and ornamenting table and bed linen, fancy work of endless variety, including fine lace work and embroidery. The exhibition of work was remarkably neat and tasteful, some of it being exquisite in design. The effect of the work upon the pupils is said to be excellent in every way.

A TEMPERANCE SCHEME.

A syndicate is being formed, comprising prominent temperance men in Canada, in order to purchase 2,000,000 acres of land in one block in the Northwest, as a colonization scheme. The land is to be the choicest in the market, and will be sold only to bona fide settlers, who will agree to submit to the rules adopted by the founders. The prominent feature, of course, is the prohibition of intoxicating liquors, and the scheme, if honestly carried out, and not made a money grabbing affair of, can hardly fail to work advantageously. The names of some of the gentlemen connected with the movement are known to us and their character is such as gives confidence in their integrity.

Such a plan is far better than to allow a license system to exist until men have invested their means in hotels, breweries, distilleries, etc., and then propose to compel them to abandon the traffic under the force of a prohibitory law.

Persons interested in the Temperance movement will watch with considerable interest the success of the experiment.

While the bush fires, mainly incident on the intense drought, are causing devastation throughout almost every township in Northern Ontario, it is rather a remarkable contrast to find that our fellow-Canadians in the Maritime Provinces have suffered to the extent of millions of dollars through heavy rains. From reliable reports recently to hand, we learn that there can now be scarcely any doubt that the aggregate loss to farmers in New Brunswick alone reach $2.000,000. The annual yield of hay is fully 500,000 tons, worth upward of $4.000,000. The oat crop will average between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 bushels, worth upwards of $1,-500,000. The potato crop was over 6,-000,000 bushels in 1871, and would probably have 8,000,000 bushels this year, worth, at 50 cents a bushel, $4,000,000. These three lines of produce, which are most affected by the wet weather, aggregate in value nearly ten millions of dollars, of which 20 per cent. has been destroyed.

The Department of the Interior has issued a new map of Manitoba and the North-West, showing lands surveyed, lands entered, also the railway and half-breed lands. A later addition will show the Pacific Railway location when the Department is informed of it.

On Saturday night the firm of Welsh & Prowern, Toronto, were relieved of $4,000 worth of jewellery, watches, diamonds, etc. The keys of the store were stolen from Mr. Welsh, who lives at Parkdale, and the robbery was committed without being noticed.

A MATCHLESS MEDICINE.—The cooling, cleansing, soothing and healing properties of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry render it the best remedy in the world for all forms of bowel complaints, sickness of the stomach, cramps, cholera morbus and dysentery. Purely vegetable, and always reliable. 38-2t

Wool used to be in active demand at prices that ranged from 30 to 60 cents, for a period of twenty years. About two years ago the price dropped to 25 cents, and it is now less, with a slack demand. The farmers were the victims of false pretenses in 1878.

GRANDMOTHER used to say. "Boys, if your blood is out of order try Burdock tea;" and they had to dig the Burdock and boil it down in kettles, making a nasty smelling decoction; now you get all the curative properties put up in a palatable form the Burdock Blood Bitters Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.

John Coulter, guilty of the heinous crime of attempting to commit rape on Ann Campbell on Thursday, was sentenced at Kingston on Saturday to one year and 260 days in the Central Prison, and to receive 46 lashes with a cat-o'-nine-tails, 24 at the expiration of one month, the other 24 at the end of six months.

The cool weather has come again. The summer has been a warm one, but looking back it can hardly be said to have been a disagreeable one. Autumn is our finest season. Nothing can equal the sunshine of these September days and the cool nights that follow.

GET THE BEST.—Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the best, most prompt and safest cure for Cholera Morbus—Dysentery—Sick Stomach—Cramps—Cholic and Cholera Infantum that has yet been discovered. Its popularity is undimmed by age. All medicine dealers sell it.

From all parts of Manitoba and the Northwest come the most cheering reports of the crops. The abundant yield of all kinds of grain is a surprise to Ontario farmers; there has been an entire absence of summer frosts, and everybody is in the most hopeful mood. All the croakers about the capabilities of the Northwest live outside of the country.

The steamer Vanderbilt, owned by Capt. Crandell, was burned at Lindsay at five o'clock, on Friday, during a heavy thunder-storm. It is supposed to have been struck by lightning. The steamer, when built, cost $18,000. Loss to the owner will be heavy as there was only an insurance of $5,000 upon it.

BABY SAVED.—We are so thankful to say that our baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength. —The parents, Rochester, N. Y. See another column.—Buffalo Express. 38-2t

Messrs. Ulyott and Saddler, and Irwin and Boyd have already commenced operations to take out saw-logs, &c., for next season. Ulyott and Saddler are having a large shanty built near Jack's Lake. The lumber was brought from Peterborough, and the shingles were purchased from Mr. Geo. Chalmers, of Young's Point.

"THE LEAVES SHALL BE FOR THE HEALING OF THE NATIONS."—The leaf of the Wild Strawberry has verified that Scriptural quotation. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the marvel in all varieties of Summer Complaints, and Fluxey, Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum and every form of Bowel Complaints of children or adults promptly yields to its power of healing. 38-2t

Major-General Luard inspected the brigade camp on Thursday, and said he was "pleased" with their appearance and efficiency. But the praise was so liberally qualified and toned down that there is no fear of the men feeling flattered. The Durham Field Battery was inspected on Saturday, and received a sharp reprimand for their unsoldierly appearance.

A very painful accident occurred at the Cobourg Car Works on Saturday. A carpenter, named Henry Niles, missed his footing while on one of the buildings, and fell through a skylight to the ground floor, a distance of 25 feet. He was picked up insensible. The doctors say he is hurt internally, but that he will recover.

An Aldboro' farmer named Axford, residing near West Lorne, was awakened one night last week by hearing a strange hissing noise in his bedroom. He hastily arose, and on instituting search discovered a large rattlesnake coiled up beneath his bed. Axford lost no time in despatching the reptile, which was found to possess eleven rattles.

A portion of the five or six millions of dollars of Government money, swindled from the people, that has been lying in the bank idle and drawing no interest, has been recently utilized in the purchase of £300,000 worth of exchange, it is claimed at favorable rates, and will be applied in payment of some Canadian debentures. It is said the exchange was purchased of three banks in Toronto and three in Montreal.

The failure of Americans in the recent aquatic contest on Toronto bay has led the New York Herald to make the "unwelcome reflection" that just now the United States apparently has no first-class sculler. The Chicago Tribune is more cheerful, and says the news may be unwelcome to the gamblers and thieves who, with the active assistance of professional oarsmen, have reduced boat-racing in the United States to a lower level than dog-fighting.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED.—In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise, and which really does as recommended. Electric Bitters we can vouch for as being a true and reliable remedy, and one that will do as recommended. They invariably cure stomach and Liver Complaints, Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. Sold at fifty cents a bottle, by Taylor & Macdonald.

The store of Mr. H. C. Russel, of Port Hope, was entered on Saturday evening by burglars, and about one hundred and fifty dollars worth of boots and shoes taken. The burglars effected an entrance to the premises from the rear. Considerable time must have been spent in the building, as the whole large stock underwent a thorough overhauling, and it was left about as thoroughly mixed—boots taken from drawers and put on shelves, others changed from one hook to another, while still others were left on the floor; and there was not a drawer and scarcely a box that did not receive attention at the hands of the robbers.

WHOOPING COUGH AND CONSUMPTION, —From Josiah Hoff, of Keyport, N. J. "This certifies that I was for many years afflicted with a disease of the lungs, until I became so weak that it was with difficulty I could walk. My cough during this time was very severe, causing me frequently to raise great quantities of blood, attended with profuse nightsweats. After using various remedies to no purpose, I was advised to try Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I did so, and before using the first bottle I was entirely restored to perfect health and strength. I would also mention that this Balsam cured a little girl of mine of a severe attack of whooping cough, when her life was given over by the physicians, and all other remedies had failed." 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

Another Tory editor has been heard from. He is Mr. Millner, of Sackville, N.B., and his opinion of Mr. Blake is unreservedly expressed:—His speaking was clear, pointed and direct. His delivery was easy and faultless. In form it was admirable, in making no personal allusions and no offensive references to political opponents. It was remarkably calm and dispassionate. After listening to him, one can understand why Mr. Blake is the foremost Chancery pleader in Canada.

As the Midland Railway train was going down the siding from the Grand Trunk station at Port Hope, the engineer and fireman observed a couple of children playing on the track between John and Smith streets. On the whistle being blown, one of the little ones ran off, but the smaller of the two, a child about two years, belonging to Mrs. Cheers, in trying to leave the track fell directly across it. "Down brakes" was at once whistled, and the fireman, John Cochrane, sprang out on the footboard of the engine. He ran to the front of the locomotive, and reaching down, snatched up the child just as the iron wheels were about to crush it to a jelly. The act was a noble one on the part of Mr. Cochrane.

"A cheap breakfast table" was one of the Tory catch cries at the last election, although it was difficult to see how the taxation of everything that went upon said table was going to cheapen it. Now the same cry will be raised because the Government proposes removing the tax from tea and coffee. Let them not stop here but carry the good work still further by reducing the tax upon the stove in which the breakfast fire is built, and above all things by removing the tax upon the fuel itself. The present paternal Government gave us a cheap breakfast table on the "heads I win, tails you lose" principle. Whether they put taxes on or take them off it is all to cheapen the commodities of life to the presumably verdant taxpayer.—Kingston Whig.

The Prince of Wales, who is still in Liverpool, goes soon to Scotland, when every member of the Royal family from the Queen downward will cross the border. This circumstance affords a singular contrast with the Royal disregard for Ireland, Prince Leopold having this week declined an invitation to visit the Social Science Congress at Dublin.

USE THE celebrated "Lardine Oil" on your machinery. Best and cheapest oil in the market. Does not clog or gum. Has good heavy body and will not thin in summer. Sold in Peterborough by Messrs. McKee & Davidson; and in Lakefield by W. H. Casement. Try it and you will use no other. 25-52t

Prof. Swift, of Rochester, has a standing offer of $200 for the discovery of new comets. There were nearly 3,000 claimants for the prize in connection with the June comet, and in consequence of the impossibility of making an award, a prize is now offered of $200 for the best essay of 3,000 words on "Comets, their composition, purpose and effect on the earth." Here is a chance for Canadian astronomers, for they will be allowed to compete.

The ladies are coming to the front as bankers. Mrs. N. Williams is president of the State National Bank, Raleigh, North Carolina; Miss Jennie Coombs is cashier of Brown & Coombs' bank, at Meddleville, Michigan; Miss Sarah F. Cowden carries on a banking business in her own name at Forrest Hill, California.

The Buffalo Telegraph says:—"Iroquois has won another notable victory, and not alone defeated every English horse on the turf this year, but achieved a victory which is signal in the annals of racing. No racer had ever, until yesterday, successively won the Derby, the two thousand guineas and the St. Leger, and only ten Derby winners have also triumphed at Doncaster. The victory of Iroquois demonstrates that the winning of the Derby by Iroquois was not an accident, as claimed by a portion of the English sporting press, but the genuine outcome of the superiority of this American horse in every particular. It is just probable that our English cousins will claim the victory for England, in that Iroquois was ridden by Archer, an English jockey."

An Arkansas paper publishes the following communication from Witherspoon, in that State:—We are credibly informed that fifteen miles northeast of there on Greasy Creek, one of the greatest and most miraculous springs on record has recently been discovered. We have not been able to see it, but our informant, a good citizen and a Baptist preacher of celebrity, tells us what he saw. Pearson John R. Yeatts was at the spring last week, and he says the Spring flows from a mountain about 400 feet high, comes out of the ground about one hundred feet from the top of the mountain on the north side, and flows at about the rate of about forty gallons per minute, and it is the color of apple cider, and tastes just like apple brandy, and has the same effect. Those under the influence of the water are perfectly ecstatic, and hugging and loving everything they meet. He says:—"I never saw the like; children and boys and girls hugging and kissing every one they met. Old men and women—I suppose about eighty years old—and they were hopping and skipping like lambs. I saw hundreds lying around the spring so drunk that they could not stand up, and they were lying and laughing and trying to clap their hands." The people call them the "Milenium Springs."

AGENT FOR PETERBORO' AND COUNTY:
DAWSON KENNEDY.

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced a remedy so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates the vital functions, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Yours etc., GEO. LABATT,
Manager P. B. & M. Co.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents.—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

Peterborough Examiner

PETEBBOROUGH, SEPT. 29th, 1881.

The Late President.

The remains of President GARFIELD of the United States were laid away in the vault prepared for them in Lakeview Cemetery, Cleveland, Ohio, on Monday last, with all the honors befitting the mournful occasion. The obsequies, the Globe says, were on a grander scale than any American, not excepting the martyred LINCOLN, has before been honored with, and yet the grief and the sense of loss felt by the nation seem to have found no adequate expression. In the States, in Canada, in Britain, in nearly every country in Europe, the day was marked by a general suspension of business, and hundreds of thousands attended the special memorial services held in the dead man's honor. He had reached the top of the ladder of political ambition; had realized the chiefest reward of the self-denying energy and fidelity of his youth and manhood; and had nobly filled various stations in a constantly growing life. He had worthily earned and had received the crown of a noble career; and now, in the meridian of life, his powers at their summit, and the declining shadow of bodily and mental decay yet afar; destined to live alway in his country's memory with the saintly halo of a martyr, having an abiding trust in that life and faith here, which are believed to make all well in the hereafter, he was as fortunate in his death as is possible to dying man.

The bereaved family will be attended by the sympathies of the whole people as they depart from that much sought mansion which has brought only woe to them.

RICHMOND HILL PIC-NIC.

The Liberal pic-nic at Richmond Hill on Thursday of last week was a grand success. It was exceedingly well attended and able addresses were delivered by Mr. G. W. Ross, M. P.; Hon. Edward Blake and Hon. A. S. Hardy. Mr Ross dwelt on departmental expenditure, clearly showing that on the return of the conservative party to office the cost of administration was increased to an enormous extent. With reference to the Tory cry that the increase of taxation under the N. P. had enriched the country, he said:

"It was the cry of the N. P. that carried the Conservative party into power in 1878. They said they were to relieve the country, and very strange kind of relief it has proved. It has been extremely like robbing a man to make him richer. (Laughter.) The National Policy might be likened to a policeman who searched a man's pockets to resuscitate him. So if Sir John A. Macdonald was asked what he had done to resuscitate trade he might say that he had searched the people's pockets. (Laughter.) As if it were possible that any man could be made more prosperous by searching his pockets."

"Hon. Mr. Blake was in good voice and showed that the present administration had made promises that it had not fulfilled and had given pledges that it had violated. He referred to the financial state of the country, the burden of taxation and the character of the Pacific Railway contract. In referring to the surplus revenue in the treasury he said: "If this surplus had been dug out of the ground or fished out of the lake, or made by the ministers working over time, some credit would be due to them, but it was simply extracted from the pockets of the people, and even he, simple as he was—(laughter)—could do the same thing if they gave him power to increase the taxation. When the call was made for reduced taxation the Finance Minister answered that everybody would feel well if there was a surplus in the treasury. So they would if it represented a profit, but the people were best able to take care of their own money, and there was no reason for taking it away from them. But these men said, 'There is a difference between you and us,' and when asked what that difference was the answer made was, "Well we had the money and you hadn't it." Still it was not to the advantage of the people to have the money in the hands of their servants, the Government, rather than in their own pockets. Public servants were apt to be extravagant. Great pressure was brought upon them to make them so, and if they had money in hand, requests were made from every quarter to be favored with some expenditures, which requests it was exceedingly hard to deny. The Government was apt to cut its coat according to its cloth, and however much cloth might be given out of which to cut the public coat, it was quite certain that none of the cloth would go back to the public. (Cheers and laughter.) Whatever might become of the money it was perfectly certain that it was gone, and that so far as the people individually were concerned it would never return. * * * They said the people felt well under the taxation, but soon they would be asking the suffrages of the people on the ground that they had reduced the taxes, as of course they could afford to reduce them after raising them to such an unconscious rate. Having placed a heavy burden upon the people they would proceed to take of a portion of that burden and then appeal to their gratitude to return the favor by giving them another lease of power."

Mr. Hardy, the provincial secretary, referred briefly to the financial situation in Ontario, where the Liberals have held office continuously for nearly ten years. The government has expended large sums in the construction of public buildings and works and the maintenance of public institutions, in aiding railways, education and charities, and it has in various other ways assisted in promoting the country's prosperity. No interest has been neglected, and every department of the public service has been efficiently administered. Yet the province has a surplus of over four millions, the annual expenditure is $300,000 less than it was in 1873, and $150,000 less than in 1878—on the eve of the last general election.

Before 1883 there should be a gathering in the two Ridings of Peterborough. It needs only a well conducted campaign to convince all doubters that the Macdonald government obtained power by dishonest and false pretences. Sir John Macdonald in a recent speech says the great fight must be in Ontario.

ONE BY ONE THEY PASS AWAY.

In the death of Daniel Hopkins, Esq., another of our old and respected citizens has been removed from amongst us. His decease took place on Saturday night last, at about half-past ten, in the 74th year of his age. Mr. Hopkins came to this country from the County of Cavan, Ireland, in the year 1825, and settled here, residing here ever since, about 56 years. He therefore saw Peterborough from its infancy until it became the large and prosperous town it now is. He was very active and industrious in his habits, and in consequence has left his family a fair competence. For a man of his years he had a remarkably elastic step, and felt almost the activity of youth. Depending on this, his movements were very free. But last Spring, during an icy period, he slipped at his own store door, and fell, receiving internal injuries, which resulted in internal hemorrhage, the periodical returns of which eventually proved fatal. His remains were interred on Monday, and his funeral was the largest ever seen in Peterborough. He leaves a widow, two sons and two daughters. The eldest is the wife of W. A. Morrow, Esq.; the other, Mrs. Cox, is the wife of Geo. A. Cox, Esq., President of the Midland Railway Company. His sons are unmarried. Mr. Hopkins was a very active and prominent member of the Orange Association, having been 18 years County Master, and at the time of his decease was an honorary member of the Grand Lodge. Several times his fellow-citizens did him the honor to elect him a member of the Town Council, and in this position he was always ready to do his utmost to promote the interests of the town, and its citizens. One by one the old land-marks pass away, leaving the silent admonition to others, "be ye ready."

Mr. John Rodgers, formerly of the Township of Smith, but for a year or two of town, died on Saturday night, after a somewhat lingering illness, at the age of 72. Mr Rodgers was a native of Ireland, and came to this country about the year 1825. He at one time was considered wealthy, but by late reverses he lost considerable property and money. His interment took place on Monday at the Lakefield Cemetery. He leaves a widow, son and daughters to mourn their bereavement.

BOATING CLUB REGATTA.

Thursday last, the day appointed for the regatta, opened as dismal as a ditch. Dark clouds could be seen scudding across the heavens, portending rain and [illegible] but about nine o'clock, a small shower fell, clearing and cooling the air and setting at rest the dust and the minds of many. Late in the forenoon the sun came out, brightening and warming everything with its glow. A nicer afternoon could not have been chosen and had a larger number taken advantage of the excursion a very successful regatta would have been held. Savigny's landing had been chosen as the scene of the aquatic contest and there tents had been erected by the ladies of St. John's Church and tasty articles and inviting refreshments were sold to eligible ready-money buyers. The Golden Eye left Peterborough about 1:30 p.m., having on board a well proportioned number of young ladies, reaching its destination in good time. On arrival, no time was lost but the races were immediately commenced by a four-oared race between two crews of which the 1st was composed of Black, Leck, Edwards and Mercer and the 2nd of Wood, A. Mercer, Elliott and McIntyre. At the commencement both kept well together but gradually the 1st crew forged ahead and won easily. In the next race, in their Double Hunting Canoe, Masters F. Sherwood and M. Dale completely out-paddled their plucky opponents. The Double Scull race was really the most exciting on the list. Messrs. J. Mercer and G. Stevenson pull a regular solid stroke, and although their antagonists Messrs. N. D. Beck and G. Leck had the advantage in the first race before the foul, in the second they were beaten though barely by a boats length. On the conclusion of the rowing matches the majority of the spectators gathered on board the Golden-Eye and a very pleasant return trip was made. Those who were present say that a more enjoyable regatta was never held.

AN EXCITING BEAR CHASE.

On Tuesday of last week, while Mr. W. A. Payne—one of a party of gentlemen from the vicinity of Warsaw, who were camping on Stoney Lake—was out prospecting for sport, his anticipations were more than realized. On approaching Gin Island he beheld a very large bear, up an oak tree, on that favorite camping ground. He at once gave the alarm to his companions, and operations for the chase commenced. His bearship, evidently thinking discretion the better part of valor, descended from his perch and betook himself to more secure quarters. Watches by this time had been placed around the island, and one of them, Mr. Samuel Edwards, saw bruin making for a small island a short distance to the west. His further progress was here arrested by the timely arrival of Messrs. Frederick and David Edwards. The island was soon surrounded by the party, and Messrs. Jos. Grant and Fred. Payne were detailed off to give chase. They very shortly succeeded in "raising" the object of their chase, who took again to the water, making towards the island he had started from. The course taken lay between where Messrs. Samuel and Joseph Edwards were stationed, and these gentlemen, with perhaps more bravery than discretion, closed upon him, the former, when within a boat length, discharging the contents of a single-barrelled shot gun in the bear's face, a portion of the charge taking effect in one of his eyes, but not in the least impeding him in his journey. The only weapons the two gentlemen now had were their paddles, and these they used for a time with good effect, by pounding the animal on the head and face. One of these articles soon came to grief, bruin catching it in his mouth and crushing it into splinters. It was a stubborn fight, with the advantages in favor of the bear, who by this time was nearing the shore, when one of his opponents ran the bow of the boat against his neck, partially turning him around from his course. Joseph and Paul Payne, both of whom were armed with rifles, appearing on the scene, soon ended bruins career by two well-directed shots. Although in very poor condition the animal weighed 241 pounds, and if fat, would, it is said, have turned the scales at fully 400. The hide measured 8 feet 4 inches. Some of the party, who are veteran hunters, declare it to be the largest bear they have ever seen, and feel jubilant over their success.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—During the thunder storm of Thursday night last, the house of Mr. Silas McConkey, near Selwin, was struck by lightning. The electric bolt struck one of the chimneys, shattering it pretty badly, and in passing down, divided, a portion of it running along the roof till near the other end of the house, when it descended, passing in its descension through Mr. McConkey's bedroom. That gentleman at the time was in the act of lighting a lamp, and was reaching from the bed to where the lamp stood. The match was blown out and his arm for the time experienced the sensation of a severe electric shock, which passed away in a few minutes. Fortunately, the damage done the house was trifling, the chief traces of injury being confined to the plastering on the ceiling and walls.

FOREIGNERS; OR, UP SALT CREEK.—A very large audience greeted the appearance of Messrs. Baker and Farron in the Opera House on Monday evening last, when the above play was placed on the stage for the first time here. Although luxuriating in a super-abundance of flattering press notices from different cities, both in the United States and Canada, the Company failed to secure the appreciation of the audience, if we may judge from the expressions of dissatisfaction heard on all hands at the close of the performance. The acting of Messrs. Baker and Farron, in their respective characters, was very good, but the support, with one exception, was inferior, while the atmosphere of the play savored too much of Tammany to be relished by a Canadian audience. The singing, the most appreciable part of the entertainment—was well received, and brought forth a number of encores.

THE FURNITURE BOOM.—By reference to our advertising columns, as well as to the columns of the Fall Fair Advertiser (a paper issued from the EXAMINER Office for gratuitous distribution at the agricultural exhibitions to be held this season in the County of Peterborough), it will be noticed that Mr. D. Belleghem makes an announcement that must be of interest to every housekeeper in this district, as well as to those contemplating house-furnishing. A visit to his large and commodious warerooms on Hunter street proves the assertion made in his advertisement that his stock of furniture is one of the most complete in the Midland Counties, everything from the most elegant drawing room and parlour furniture to the plainer and commoner lines being on view. His prices, too, will be found extremely reasonable. His facilities for manufacturing are unexcelled by any others in the trade in this part, and as a consequence he is enabled to offer more than ordinary inducements. For the undertaking department of his business he has had manufactured to his order this summer one of the handsomest hearses in the Province. He solicits the patronage of the public, and we believe those giving him their custom will be well satisfied. 39-1

BURGLARY.—On Sunday morning last as the engineer of Messrs. Denne and Sperry's Flour Mill was proceeding to inspect the premises as is his custom, he noticed one of the panes of glass in the office window broken. Closer inspection showed that the premises had been broken into during the preceding night and the safe blown open. Entrance had been effected through the window, the sill of which bore evidence of the use of a crow-bar in endeavoring to raise it. The sash being fastened inside, one of the panes had been broken in order to remove the fastening. A small hole had been punched through the outside plate of the safe door, an inch or two above the lock and the powder or other explosive inserted. The outside plate was completely torn off by the explosion and the lock destroyed. The chagrin of the thief or thieves can well be imagined as but between four and five dollars in silver rewarded their labors and in their hurry to ransack the papers the ends of the small wooden drawers inside the safe were smashed in. A stone cutter's chisel and mallet were found inside and a crow-bar, pick and a stone cutter's "point" were picked up outside in the vicinity of the mill. It has since transpired the tools were stolen from St. John's Church yard where a number of stone cutters are employed on the work of the enlargement of the Church. The matter is in the hands of the police, and it is hoped they may succeed in bringing the guilty party to justice.

A PRAYER.

Great God! I ask thee for no meaner pelf
That I may not disappoint myself;
That in my conduct I may soar as high
As I can discern with this clear eye.
That my weak hand may equal my firm faith,
And my life practice more than my tongue saith;
That my low conduct may not show,
Nor my relenting lines,
That I thy purpose did not know
Or overrate thy designs.
—Henry David Thoreau.

SIMPLE FAITH.

If one could hear his mother's voice again,
And stand beside his mother's knee again.
And be again a child,
Simple and mild.
Absorbing faith as earth receives the rain,
Then only could he shake the feeling off
That he had learned too much or not enough.

Cold is the air of season, though serene;
Chill and unsatisfying, though serene.
Better for life and death
Were simple faith.
That ample evidence of things unseen
But we have eaten the forbidden fruit,
Nor knew the tree was rotten at the root.
